THE CUSHMAN FAMILY

It is greatly to be regretted that so little is known of the youth or parentage of one who bore such an active part in the early struggles of the Pilgrims as Robert Cushman. Beyond the statement in the Leyden records that he was from Canterbury, England, nothing has been learned. His name first appeared on the Leyden registers November 4, 1611, when "Robert Cushman, from Canterbury, a wool-comber," purchased from Cornelis Ghysberts van Groenendael a house on the west side of the Nonnensteeg, a short street continuing the Kloksteeg beyond the Rapenburg southerly to the Achtergracht (Back Street). "Although in a good neighborhood, being close to the university, it must have been quite small, for its price was but eighty guilders down, with annual payments thereafter, bringing up the whole sum to about one hundred and eighty guilders." The next year, April 19, Cushman bought another house near by in a place on the south side of the Nonnensteeg, from van Groenendael, for seven hundred and eighty guilders, Richard Masterson becoming surety for him. The terms were two hundred guilders down, one hundred to be paid in a year, and the balance later; with five guilders annually as ground-rent to the city.* This was in the heart of the city, and adjacent to the house of William Bradford on the Achtergracht, upon which house Bradford raised money in 1617.

About this time John Robinson, their pastor, took possession of the large house fronting on the Kloksteeg, which he had purchased, subject to a year's lease, on May 5, 1611. The price paid for the house and lot of land, including a garden, was "8000 gilders — $3200, equal in modern money to about $16,000." This estate was situated on the south side of the Pieterskerkhof; and there, "within the shadow of the Pieterskerk [St. Peter's], or within five minutes walk of that spot," lived at least one hundred and fifty of Robinson's company.

The wife of Robert Cushman was Sarah —, whom he married as early as 1606. She was the mother of several children, the eldest probably being Thomas<sup>2</sup>, b. 1607. While living on the Nonnensteeg, they buried a child in St. Peter's, on March 11, 1616. In October, Cushman was called upon to part with two more of his stricken family: his wife, Sarah, who was buried on the 11th in St. Peter's, and another child, who, on the 24th, was buried in the same church. Between March and October, he had removed from the Nonnensteeg to the Boisstraat, where his wife died; and, at the time of the death of the second child on the 24th, he was living on the Hontmarckt.* These repeated removals certainly suggest an effort to get away from some infection.

On May 19, 1617, Robert Cushman was betrothed, at Leyden, to Mary Singleton, widow of Thomas Singleton, from Sandwich, County Kent, England; with John Keble and Catherine Carver (wife of John Carver, afterward the first Governor of Plymouth), as witnesses. They were married on June 5. John Keble, "his friend," also was a woolcomber, and from Canterbury, England. In the Leyden records, Cushman's name appeared variously — Coetsman, Kousman, Koutzman, etc.; while that of his wife was written Chingleton. Although a resident so many years, he was not admitted to citizenship. September 19, 1619, Robert Cushman sold to John de Later the first house which he had purchased on the Nonnensteeg for the price paid for it — one hundred and eighty gilders.†

When it became evident to the Pilgrims that Holland did not, and could not, afford the sort of refuge and opportunity they desired; or, in the words of Winslow, "how like wee were to lose our Language, and our name of English; how little good wee did; . . . how unable there to give such education to our children, as wee ourselves had received;" * they resolved to emigrate rather than succumb to the inevitable results of a long sojourn in that place. They feared absorption into the Dutch nation; and they still clung to the hope of "propagating & advancing y<sup>e</sup> gospell of y<sup>e</sup> kingdom of Christ" according to their own belief, and in a way that was impossible in Holland.

Unaided they could accomplish nothing. They had little money and less influence. Their ties to the mother country were greatly weakened. Yet they decided to send over to England two of their most active and reliable men, "Mr. Robert Cushman and Deacon John Carver," with instructions to make an application to the Virginia Company, which had been formed in England under the royal sanction, for liberty to settle within the territory of that company in North America, and "to live as a distincte body by themselves, under y<sup>e</sup> generall Government of Virginia." This was in September, 1617; and their agents returned to Leyden without accomplishing anything. In December, they were again sent over "to end with y<sup>e</sup> Virginia Company as well as they could;" † but as that company could not promise them religious freedom, and they had no confidence in the honesty or toleration of the king, they hesitated.

For two years, 1618 and 1619, Cushman, Carver, and William Brewster, or two of them, were active at London; but the King's tyrannical interference had so confused the affairs of the Virginia Company that it was difficult to conclude anything. At length, on June 9, 1619, a patent was granted to them, under the Virginia Company's seal, and "connived at" by the King. By the advice of friends, as they were non-residents, the patent was taken out in the name of John Wincob (or Wencop), a "religious gentleman then belonging to y<sup>e</sup> Countess of Lincoln," who intended to go with them. "But God so disposed as he never went, nor they ever made use of this patente, which had cost them so much labour and charge." *

Then they began to "look other ways" to accomplish their object. The Dutch traders to Manhattan (New York), where there was as yet no settlement, offered to transport the entire congregation to their trading-post, providing cattle and supplies, and furnishing protection as long as needed; but leaving them to manage their own internal affairs. While this proposition was still under consideration, Thomas Weston, a merchant of London, suggested terms for their transmigration to the New World. He formed a company, about seventy in number, called the Merchant Adventurers, "which raised the stocke to begin and supply this Plantation." Captain John Smith described them in 1624, as "some Gentlemen, some Merchants, some handy-crafts men, some aduenturing great summes, some small, as their estates and affection serued. The generall stocke already imployed is about 7000. P. by reason of which charge and many crosses, many of [them] would aduenture no more. . . . They dwell most about London, they are not a corporation, but knit together by voluntary combination in a society without constraint or penalty, aiming to doe good & to plant religion." †

"The Wincob patent had been superseded, on February 12, 1620, by one running to John Pierce, one of the Adventurers, which conveyed, with self-governing powers, a tract of land to be selected by the planters near the mouth of the Hudson. So little did the body of Adventurers know of the Pilgrims that they termed them 'Mr. Pierce's Company.' " * About this time they heard, through Mr. Weston and others, of the projected settlement of the more northerly part of the country derived from the Virginia patent, to be called by another name, NEW ENGLAND, "unto which Mr. Weston, and y<sup>e</sup> cheefe of them, begane to incline it was best for them to goe . . . chiefly for y<sup>e</sup> hope of present profite to be made by y<sup>e</sup> fishing." †

The contract between the Adventurers and those who were to emigrate consisted of ten articles, "which were drawne & agreed unto, and were showne unto him [Weston] and approved by him," ‡ in Leyden. Brewster, who had been active in this matter, remained in Leyden; while Cushman was sent to London, and Carver to Southampton, to prepare for the voyage. Christopher Martin, who later sailed on the Mayflower, was "joined with them."

The unavoidable delays and disappointments of large undertakings occurred. In June, there was complaint that Mr. Weston was negligent in the matter of providing shipping. However, the Speedwell was finally purchased in Holland, and the Mayflower hired at London by Cushman, who sent her round to Southampton, there to meet the other ship.

Special stress has been laid on the account of these preparations for the voyage because of the adverse criticism of Cushman's share in them. Less than a month before the sailing of the ships, Mr. Weston and his associates insisted that some of the conditions that were first agreed on at Leyden should be altered; "to which y<sup>e</sup> 2. agents sent from Leyden (or at least one of them who is most charged with it) did consente; seeing els y<sup>t</sup> all was like to be dashte,

About this time the pastor, John Robinson, wrote to Carver that but two mistakes had been made: "y<sup>e</sup> one, that we imployed Robart Cushman, who is known (though a good man, & of spetiall abilities in his kind, yet) most unfitt to deale for other men, by reason of his singularitie, and too great indifferancie for any conditions, and for (to speak truly) that we have had nothing from him but termes and presumptions. The other, y<sup>t</sup> we have so much relyed, by implicate faith as it were, upon generalities, without seeing y<sup>e</sup> perticuler course & means for so waghtie an affaire set down unto us." †

These dissensions led to their telling Weston at Southampton that the original agreement, as made in Leyden, must stand, or they would not sign it. Upon this Weston left the Pilgrims in anger, saying that they must "looke to stand upon their owne leggs." He refused to pay the port charges of £100; and the poor emigrants were forced to sell some eighty firkins of butter to raise the £60 required to "clear the port," and were obliged to dispense with many things still lacking. In truth, their entire outfit was inadequate. In a letter to Carver, dated June 10, Cushman wrote: "We have reckoned, it would seeme, without our host; and, counting upon a 150. persons, ther cannot be founde above 1200<sup>l</sup> & odd moneys of all y<sup>e</sup> venturs you can reckone, besids some cloath, stockings, & shoes, which are not counted; so we shall come shorte at leaste 3. or 400<sup>l</sup> . . . You fear we have begune to build & shall not be able to make an end; indeed, our courses were never established by counsell, we may therfore justly fear their standing. . . . Thinke y<sup>e</sup> best of all, and bear with patience what is wanting, and y<sup>e</sup> Lord guid us all.

Your loving friend,

LONDON, June 10.

An<sup>o</sup>: 1620.

When the Speedwell reached Southampton, the passengers were divided, ninety to the Mayflower and thirty to the Speedwell. John Carver was assigned to the Mayflower, as "governor," while Christopher Martin and Robert Cushman were respectively "governor" and "assistant" on the Speedwell, says Goodwin; † but Bradford states that Martin "was governour in y<sup>e</sup> bigger ship, & M<sup>r</sup> Cushman assistante," ‡ which seems more probable.

After various distresses had caused them to put back twice, first to Dartmouth and then to Plymouth, the Speedwell having been judged unfit to proceed, "M<sup>r</sup> Cushman & his familie, whose hart & courage was gone from them before," desired to be among those left behind. It appears to have been a voluntary movement on his part, judging from the "passionate letter he write to a friend in London from Dartmouth, whilst y<sup>e</sup> ship lay ther a mending." Owing to its length, a few extracts must suffice : —

"To his loving friend Ed: S. [Edward Southworth] at Henige House in y<sup>e</sup> Duks Place, these, etc.

DARTMOUTH, Aug. 17.

"Loving friend, my most kind remembrance to you & your wife, with loving E. M. &c. whom in this world I never looke to see againe. For besids y<sup>e</sup> eminent dangers of this viage, which are no less than deadly, an infirmitie of body hath ceased [seized] me, which will not in all licelyhoode leave me till death. What to call it I know not, but it is a bundle of lead, as it were, crushing my harte more & more these 14. days, as that although I doe y<sup>e</sup> accctions of a liveing man, yet I am but as dead ; but y<sup>e</sup> will of God be done. Our pinass will not cease leaking, els I thinke we had been halfe way at Virginia. . . . Our victualls will be halfe eaten up, I thinke, before we goe from the coaste of England, and if our viage last longe, we shall not have a months victialls when we come in y<sup>e</sup> countrie. Neare 700 <sup>l</sup> hath bene bestowed at Hampton, upon what I know not. M<sup>r</sup> Martin saith he neither can nor will give any accounte of it. . . . As for M<sup>r</sup> Weston, excepte grace doe greatly swaye with him, he will hate us ten times more than he ever loved us, for not confirming y<sup>e</sup> conditions. . . . I am sure as they were resolved not to seale those conditions, I was not so resolute at Hampton to have left y<sup>e</sup> whole bussiness, excepte they would seale them, & better y<sup>e</sup> vioage to have bene broken of [off] then, then to have brought such misirie to our selves, dishonour to God, & detrimente to our loving freinds, as now it is like to doe. 4. or 5. of y<sup>e</sup> cheefe of them which came from Leyden, came resolved never to goe on those conditions. And M<sup>r</sup> Martine, he said he never received no money on those conditions, he was not beholden to y<sup>e</sup> marchants for a pine [penny] they were bloudsuckers, & I know not what. Simple man, he indeed never made any conditions wth the marchants, nor ever spake with them. . . . Friend, if ever we make a plantation, God works a mirakle ; especially considering how scante we shall be of victualls ; and most of all ununited amongst our selves, & devoyd of good tutors & regimēte. . . . If I should write to you of all things which promiscuously forerune our ruine, I should over charge my weake head and greeve your tender hart; only this, I pray you prepare for evill tidings of us every day. But pray for us instantly, it may be y<sup>e</sup> Lord will be yet entreated one way or other to make for us. I see not in reason how we shall escape even y<sup>e</sup> gasping of hunger starved persons; but God can doe much, & his will be done. . . . The Lord give us that true comferte which none can take from us. I had a desire to make a breefe relation of our estate to some freind. I doubte not but your wisdome will teach you seasonably to utter things as here after you shall be called to it. That which I have writen is treue, & many things more which I have forborne. I write it as upon my life, and last confession in England. What is of use to be spoken of presently, you may speake of it, and what is fitt to conceile, conceall. Pass by my weake maner, for my head is weake, & my body feeble, y<sup>e</sup> Lord make me strong in him, & keepe both you & yours.

Your loving freind

ROBERT CUSHMAN.

DARTMOUTH, Aug. 17, 1620."

Below the copy of this letter in his History, Bradford adds: "These being his conceptions & fears at Dartmouth, they must needs be much stronger now at Plimoth." He also says of the letter: "the which, besides y<sup>e</sup> expressions of his owne fears, it shows much of y<sup>e</sup> providence of God working for their good beyonde man's expectation, & other things concerning their condition in these streats. . . . And though it discover some infirmities in him, . . . yet after this he continued to be a spetiall instrumente for their good, and to doe y<sup>e</sup> offices of a loving freind & faithfull brother unto them, and pertaker of much comferte with them."*

When it was decided to reduce the expedition to one shipload, the twenty or more passengers who were left behind, including Robert Cushman and his family, returned to London. How many persons constituted this "familie" is unknown; his wife probably was with him, and the son Thomas who afterward came over, and there may have been younger children by this second wife; they, however, remained in England. Cushman endeavored to placate the wrath of Weston and his associates, and to bring them to the point of further assisting the Plantation in New England. He must have succeeded in a measure, since the Adventurers sent him over in the Fortune, a year later, to examine affairs and return to them with a report; and with him forwarded some thirty-five new colonists. Thomas Cushman, then a lad of fourteen years, sailed with them; on his father's return, the son was left at Plymouth in the care of William Bradford.

On November 10, 1621, just one year from the day the Mayflower sighted the hills of Cape Cod, the Fortune reached the shores of New Plymouth; * her unexpected arrival occasioned great rejoicing. Robert Cushman had come primarily to persuade the Planters to accept the "two articles" which they had rejected at Southampton. They were in such straits that they chose to do so rather than to allow the Adventurers to abandon the enterprise. Yet it is interesting to know that Cushman labored long and earnestly with them before the matter was satisfactorily concluded. He preached a sermon, in the "common-house," where religious services were held, on Sunday, December 9, 1621, on "The Sin and Danger of Self-love," taking for his text 1 Cor. x: 24: "Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth." † It is said to have been "in truth rather a dull

† On his return to England, this discourse, often alluded to as "the first sermon in New England," was printed; and it has appeared since in several editions. Goodwin says that the "so-called sermon is mainly the censorious plea of an attorney for the Adventurers. If any reply was made, Cushman naturally omitted to print it."

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT

An<sup>o</sup>: 1620. July 1.

1. The adventurers & planters doe agree, that every person that goeth being aged 16. years & upward, be rated at 10 <sup>li.</sup>, and ten pounds to be accounted a single share.

2. That he that goeth in person, and furnisheth him selfe out with 10 <sup>li.</sup> either in money or other provissions, be accounted as haveing 20 <sup>li.</sup> in stock, and in y<sup>e</sup> divission shall receive a double share.

3. The persons transported & y<sup>e</sup> adventurers shall continue their joynt stock & partnership togeather, y<sup>e</sup> space of 7. years, (excepte some unexpected impedimente doe cause y<sup>e</sup> whole company to agree otherwise,) during which time, all profits & benifits that are gott by trade, traffick, trucking, working, fishing, or any other means of any person or persons, remaine still in y<sup>e</sup> comone stock untill y<sup>e</sup> division.

6. Whosoever cometh to y<sup>e</sup> colonie hereafter, or putteth any into y<sup>e</sup> stock, shall at the ende of y<sup>e</sup> 7 years be allowed proportionably to y<sup>e</sup> time of his so doing.

7. He that shall carie his wife & children, or servants, shall be allowed for everie person now aged 16. years & upward, a single share in y<sup>e</sup> devision, or if he provid them necessaries, a duble share, or if they be between 10. year old and 16., then 2. of them to be reconed for a person, both in trāsportation and devision.

8. That such children as now goe, & are under y<sup>e</sup> age of ten years, have noe other shar in y<sup>e</sup> deviation, but 50. acers of unmanured land.

10. That all such persons as are of this collonie, are to have their meate, drink, apparell, and all provissions out of y<sup>e</sup> comon stock & goods of y<sup>e</sup> said collonie.*

The Fortune soon was loaded with a valuable cargo of beaver-skins, clapboards and other prepared lumber, and the "profitable sassafras;" the total value being about £500. The ship had brought a letter from Weston, severely censuring the colonists for not sending a cargo by the Mayflower on her return the previous spring. He also promised that he would "never quit the business, though all the other Adventurers should," if they would give the Fortune a good lading, and consent to the disputed articles. "Strange to say, without even waiting for a reply to his letter or for the return of the Fortune, he withdrew from the enterprise, the first and only one to leave it thus early." †

Robert Cushman returned, as he intended, on the Fortune, which sailed on December 23, for England. They had spent four months on the passage westward, owing to baffling winds and other causes; but the voyage back was without incident until they drew near the English coast, when their little ship of only fifty-five tons was captured by a French craft and carried into Isle Dieu. Her cargo, of which they were justly proud, and which they felt would be a surprise to their English partners, was kept by their captors; but after fourteen days the ship and her company were released. Cushman preserved his papers, among which were the signed agreement, and valuable letters from Bradford, Winslow, and William Hilton; also Bradford's and Winslow's Jour-

Cushman still remained the Planters' agent in England; and by the Anne, in 1623, sent another letter saying that he was "right sorie y<sup>t</sup> no supplie hath been made to you all this while [the Mayflower had taken over the only supply of food-stuffs], . . . Naitheir indeed have we now sent you many things, which we should & would, for want of money." January 24, 1623-24, he wrote again, in a little more hopeful vein, informing them that "We have now sent you, we hope, men & means, to setle these 3. things, viz. fishing, salt making, and boat making; if you can bring them to pass to some perfection, your wants may be supplied. . . . I am sorie we have not sent you more and other things, but in truth we have rune into so much charge, to victaile y<sup>e</sup> ship, provide salte & other fishing implements, &c. as we could not provide other comfortable things, as buter, suger, &c. I hope the returne of this ship, and the James, will put us in cash againe."*

In this letter, dated "Jan: 24, 1623[-24]," Cushman wrote: "We have tooke a patente for Cap Anne, etc," and some of the planters at Plymouth were sent there soon after, to build fishing stages; but, the next year (1625), "some of Lyfords & Oldoms [Oldham's] freinds, and their adherents, set out a shipe on fishing, on their owne accounte, and getting y<sup>e</sup> starte of y<sup>e</sup> ships that came to the plantation, they tooke away their stage, & other necessary provisions that they had made for fishing at Cap-Anne y<sup>e</sup> year before, at their great charge, and would not restore y<sup>e</sup> same, excepte they would fight for it."† The Governor at Plymouth sent some of the planters to rebuild the stages; but the fishing proved of little value to them, "so as, after this year, they never looked more after them."

Captain John Smith said of this period (1624): "There hath beene a fishing this yeere vpon the Coast about 50. English ships: and by Cape Anne, there is a Plantation a beginning by the Dorchester men, which they hold of those of New-Plimoth, who also by them haue set vp a fishing worke." He explains, too, in detail, the charge of setting forth a ship of 100 tons for fishing at the Plantation, which amounted to £420:11:0.*

In the summer of 1625, Captain Standish went to England in the Little James. Besides arranging with James Sherley for more satisfactory charges, he was to ask the Council for New England to assist in buying off the Adventurers; but, owing to the prevalence of the plague, and consequent disorders in the business world, little could be done. He was commissioned to hire a considerable sum of money; yet he obtained only £150, at fifty per cent interest, to pay his own expenses and procure goods for home. It was at this time that Bradford wrote Cushman to aid Standish in purchasing the return cargo of trading-goods, "for therein he hath the least skill."

The joy at Standish's safe return was quickly followed by sorrow at the news he brought. Many of their friends had suffered losses which prevented them "from doing any further help, and some dead of y<sup>e</sup> plague." Their pastor at Leyden, John Robinson, had died on the "1 of March" of that year (1625), and was buried on March 4, in the Pieterskerk. "He further brought them notice of y<sup>e</sup> death of their ancienne freind, M<sup>r</sup> Cush-man, whom y<sup>e</sup> Lord tooke also this year, & aboute this time, who was as their right hand with their freinds y<sup>e</sup> adventurers, and for diuerce years had done & agitated all their business with them to ther great advantage." It was "also his owne purposs this year to come over, and spend his days" at New Plymouth.†

At their first division or "Falles of their grounds which came first ouer in the May-Floure according as thier lotes were cast. 1623," the first lot, consisting of one acre, lying "on the South side of the brooke to the baywards," had been assigned by the Planters to "Robart Cochman."* As he did not continue on the Mayflower, and consequently was not entitled to be considered one of the "First Comers," this grant was a delicate recognition of his services, and one which he had long been planning to enjoy.

Robert Cushman died in England, at the early age of about forty-five years. The exact date of his death is not known. His last letter was written "From London, December 22, A. D. 1624," and he died before Pastor Robinson; we therefore may conclude that his death occurred in January or February, 1625. The last paragraph of this letter is notable in several respects:—

"I hope the failings of your friends here, will make you the more friendly one to another, that so all our hopes may not be dashed. Labour to settle things, both in your civil, and religious courses, as firm, and as full as you can. Lastly, I must intreat you still, to have a care of my son as of your own; and I shall rest bound unto you, I pray you let him sometime practice writing. I hope the next ships to come to you; in the mean space and ever, the Lord be all your direction and turn all our crosses and troubles to his own glory, and our comforts, and give you to walk so wisely, and holily, as none may justly say, but they have always found you honestly minded, though never so poor. Salute our friends, and supply, I pray you, what is failing in my letters."†

It is easy to understand, at this distance of time, some of the difficulties with which Cushman had to contend. The Pilgrims ‡ at Leyden were of a high order, intellectual and somewhat visionary. Their principal reason for seeking a new home was to enjoy "Freedom to worship God," and to establish a church of their own belief. But when it came to the practical part of the business, they were all at sea, — "ununited," Cushman called it, — and his continued reiteration of "terms" and "conditions" only irritated them. That they actually should sail for the New World without adequate provision, and deliberately cut off all hope of supplies from their friends, the Merchant Adventurers, was the height of imprudence, to say the least. Cushman appreciated their position fully, and his heart sank within him. He could see nothing in the venture but despair and death. It was most fortunate for them that he remained in England; for Bradford himself, who at first had little patience with Cushman, admitted later that there was a Providence in it.

The Patent, or Charter, of the territory about Cape Anne, negotiated through the agency of Robert Cushman and Edward Winslow (the latter having been sent over more directly to represent the Plymouth Colony), is further evidence of the industry and ability of Cushman. This charter, dated January 1, 1623, granted by Edward, Lord Sheffield, as a representative of the Council for New England, to "Robert Cushman and Edward Winslowe for themselves, and their Associates and Planters at Plymouth in New England in America," conveyed to them "a certaine Tract of Ground . . . in a knowne place there comonly called Cape Anne, Together with the free vse and benefitt as well of the Bay comonly called the Bay of Cape Anne, as also of the Islands within the said Bay And free liberty, to ffish, fowle, hawke, and hunt, truck, and trade in the Lands therabout, and in all other places in New England aforesaid, . . . said Bay to be employed for publig vses, as for the building of a Towne, Scholes, Churches, Hospitals, and for the mayntenance of such Ministers, Officers, and Magistrats, as by the said vndertakers, and theire Associats are there already appointed, or which hereafter shall (with theire good liking reside, and inhabitt there And also Thirty Acres of Land, over and beside the ffyve hundred Acres before mençoned, To be allotted, and appointed for every perticuler person, young, or old (being the Associats, or servants of the said vndertakers or their successo<sup>rs</sup> that shall come, and dwell at the aforesaid Cape Anne within Seaven yeares next after the Date hereof, which Thirty Acres of Lande soe appointed to every person, as aforesaid, shall be taken as the same doth lye together vpon the said Bay in one entire place, and not stragling in dyvers, or remote parcells not exceeding an English Mile, and a halfe in length on the Waters side of the said Bay."

The consideration for this grant was an annual payment to "Lord Sheffeld, his heires, successo<sup>rs</sup>, Rent gatherer, or assignes, for every Thirty Acres . . . Twelve Pence of lawfull English money At the ffeast of St. Michaell. . . . The first payment thereof To begynne ymmediately" after the expiration of "seaven yeares next after the date hereof." *

Throughout this document the name of Cushman precedes that of Winslow, an undoubted proof of his conventional position. To Robert Cushman, then, largely belongs the credit of having procured for the Plymouth Colony a charter, which also embraced the first permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Colony at Cape Anne.† "The two first settlements in Massachusetts were, therefore, to a considerable extent the result of his zeal and perseverance in the Puritan cause." We may reasonably conclude also that "he was one of the first movers and main instruments of the Puritan dissent of England, their pilgrimage to Holland, and their final settlement in America." Together with "those from Leyden," he is the acknowledged founder of Congregationalism in the New World.*

Her marriage in Plymouth is thus recorded: "William Hodgekins & Sara Cushman married Nov. 2<sup>d</sup> 1636." ‡ The name Hodgekins, after passing through the variations of Hoggkins, Hodgskins, Hoskine, Hoskin, etc., finally settled as Hoskins or Haskins. Sara Hoskins did not long survive the birth of a daughter, on September 16, 1637, and her husband married again, December 21, 1638, in Plymouth, Ann Hynes.§

William Hoskins was of Scituate in 1634, and was made freeman that year. In 1640 and 1646, his name appeared in lists of the townsmen of Plymouth. In 1642, Mr. Holmes, William Hoskins, and Francis Billington, for the use of their families, were assigned "The browne Cowe and Mr Holmes to keepe her." "William Hoskins and ffrancis Billington" were appointed, in 1651, to "goodman Winters Teame," on work for the town. From 1640 to 1681, Hoskins served repeatedly on juries and on the "Grand Inquest." February 2, 1672, he was chosen, at a town-meeting, "to see that the towns orders were carried out."* August 22, 1681, he was chosen one of the raters, "to make the Rates both for M<sup>r</sup> Cotton and the Countrey Rate for this yeer."

The first grant of land to William Hoskins from the town of Plymouth, on December 31, 1646, consisted of "6 or 7 acres at the head of James Hurst land or neare his land, and a garden place by the brooke side, or by his house," which was to be laid out for him by Governor Prince and Joshua Pratt. June 13, 1660, he had another grant of two acres of meadow at "Lakenham." Two years later, June 3, 1662, William Hoskins, with Mr. Prince, Mr. Bradford, Mr. Brewster, Major Winslow, George Soule, Francis Cooke, and others (thirty-two, in all), received a share of land granted for their "first borne children of this goument."† Hoskins, himself, did not arrive in one of the early ships; he did not settle in Plymouth until after 1634; yet he was gratuitously made the recipient of land apportioned to the fathers of the "first borne children." This surely indicates that it was on account of Sara, his first wife, and that she was daughter to Robert<sup>1</sup> Cushman.

William Hoskins appears to have suffered even more severely than most of his neighbors from the devastation of King Philip's war, since on March 2, 1679-80, the Plymouth Colony Court voted: "The Court haue ordered four pound vnto Wiltam Hoskins, to be payed to him by the Treasurer, in regard of his low condition, haueing lost all hee had in the late warr, and beinge growne old and vnable to labour."‡ He probably died poor and in obscurity, for there is no record of his death nor settlement of his estate.

The matrimonial ventures of Hoskins were unfortunate. His first wife did not long survive, and his second wife, Ann, must have been rather an unpleasant person. Not long after their marriage, he and his wife Ann brought suit against "John Danford, . . . in an action for slander," i. e. circulating unsavory stories against Ann; the jury found for the plaintiffs in the sum of "£20 damage and the charges of the Court." This was in June, 1639.* Ann was afterward before the Court a number of times; on March 1, 1663-64, for using "filthy language to Hester Rickard." The Court at the hearing treated them impartially, — for both women were sentenced "to sit in the stockes during the pleasure of the Court," or to pay a fine of twenty shillings, each. They chose the latter.†

These home conditions probably were responsible for the daughter Sarah being "bound out" until she was twenty years of age: —

"Jan. 28, 1643[-44]: William Hoskine of Plymouth, hath put Sarah his daughter, to Thomas Whitney [Thomas Hinckley, in index] and Winefreide, his wyfe, to dwell wth them vntill shee shall accomplish the age of twenty yeares, the said Thomas, and Winyfride, his wyfe, vseing her as their child, and being vnto her as father and mother, and to instruct her in learneing and soweing in reasonable manner, fynding vnto her meate, drink, and apparell & lodging during the said terme; and if it shall happen the said Sarah to marry before she shall haue accomplished the said age of twenty yeares, (she being six yeares of age, the xvjth of September last past,) that then the sayd Thomas shall haue such satisfaction for her tyme then remayning as shalbe adjudged reasonable & equall by two indifferent men."‡

The family was so large and the means of support so limited that the town authorities took the matter in hand, and had a voice in the "disposeing of ffrancis Billingtons children." THOMAS<sup>2</sup> CUSHMAN

Thomas<sup>2</sup> Cushman, son to Robert<sup>1</sup> and Sarah (—) Cushman, was born in February, 1608, at Leyden. His mother, Sarah, whose maiden name is not known, died at Leyden, October 11, 1616, leaving him, her only surviving son, motherless at the age of nine years. Thomas Cushman was undoubtedly with the Cushman family when they sailed from Southampton in the Mayflower, and returned to London with those who could not continue because of the unseaworthiness of the Speedwell. A year later, he sailed with his father on the Fortune, and arrived November 10, 1621, at New Plymouth. Robert Cushman returned to England in the same ship, "which stayed not above 14. days," leaving his son Thomas in the care of William Bradford, then Governor, who gave him a home, educated him, and treated him as a son. The last letter written by Cushman to Bradford, dated "London, December 22, A. D. 1624," concluded: "Lastly, I must intreat you still, to have a care of my son, as of your own; and I shall rest bound unto you, I pray you let him sometime practice writing. I hope the next ships to come to you." Bradford replied: "Your son and all of us, are in good health (blessed be God) he received the things you sent him. I hope God will make him a good man." But Cushman had passed away before the comforting message reached him.

Bradford, in some degree a self-taught scholar, was familiar with the Dutch and French languages, and "had attained a considerable intimacy with Latin and Greek." Throughout his whole life he was much devoted to literary pursuits. His History of Plimoth Plantation and other writings are a rich legacy to the American people. As Governor of the Plymouth Colony, he served continuously from 1621 until his death, in 1657, except the five years that he begged to be relieved by others. Nothing more fully demonstrates the hardships endured at Leyden than the fact that such a man was compelled by the exigencies of the situation to support his family by his labor as a fustian-weaver.* "As a leading man of the Plymouth Colony, he displayed a worthy dignity, much tact, no little shrewdness and worldly wisdom, mingled with a becoming piety and sound business judgment."

Under this influence Thomas Cushman grew to manhood. He also may have been indebted not a little to the instructions of the Ruling Elder, William Brewster. Brewster had been educated at Cambridge, England, though he did not remain long enough to obtain a degree. In Leyden, he was engaged as a teacher of English to the students who were attracted to that University city; he acquired a reputation as a printer, too, more especially of religious works not allowed in England.† After the death of Elder Brewster, in April, 1644, Thomas Cushman was chosen his successor. He was ordained as Ruling Elder on Friday, April 6, 1649, by appropriate religious services; he retained the office until his death, — a period of more than forty-two years.

At Plymouth, previous to 1623, "the company had worked together on the companys lands, each sharing the fruits of another's labors;" but for this community it "was found to breed much confusion & discontent, and retard much imploymēt that would have been to their benefite and comferte." For their encouragement, and to "obtaine a beter crope than they had done . . . after much debate of things, the Gov<sup>r</sup> (with y<sup>e</sup> advise of y<sup>e</sup> cheefest amongst them) gave way that they should set corne every man for his owne perticular, and in that regard trust to them selves; in all other things to goe on in y<sup>e</sup> generall way as before. And so assigned to every family a parcell of land, according to the proportion of their number for that end, only for present use (but made no devision for inheritance), and ranged all boys & youth under some familie. This had very good success ; for it made all hands very industrious, so as much more corne was planted then other waise would have bene by any means y<sup>e</sup> Gov<sup>r</sup> or any other could use, . . . and gave farr better contente." * This was in direct violation of their contract with the Merchant Adventurers, yet the Governor assigned to every person an acre of land, "as neere the town as might be, and they had no more till the 7 years was expired." Some of these lots later became their homesteads.

When the drawing took place, in 1623, in accordance with their plan for division of land among those "which came first ouer in the May-Floure," the first acre was assigned to "Robart Cochman." † It was "on the South side of the brooke to the baywards," now between Sandwich Street and the harbor. Giving him the first lot was a delicate acknowledgment of his services as their agent in England, for he not only had not arrived in the Mayflower, but he "was not yet come over," though planning to come at the earliest opportunity. As it was not "for inheritance," his son never possessed the land. But in the assignment "of their grounds [to those] which came in the Fortune according as their Lots were cast, 1623," William Beale and Thomas Cushman were given two acres that "lye beyonde the 2. brooke." This land was situated on the north of the present Woolen Mill Brook, which runs through the land of Benjamin Hathaway (1899), and finds its way into the harbor north of the railroad station.

Thomas Cushman married, about 1636, in Plymouth, Mary<sup>2</sup>, daughter to Isaac<sup>1</sup> and Mary (Norris) Allerton. Isaac Allerton was married November 4, 1611, in Leyden, to Mary Norris. It was his first marriage, for if he had been a widower, it would have been so stated in the marriage record. The date of birth of the daughter Mary has not been found in Leyden, but she was the youngest of the three children who came with their parents on the Mayflower. A daughter Sarah was brought over in the Anne, 1623; while a fifth child was buried, in February, 1620, at Leyden, and a sixth was born and died in Provincetown harbor. Hence it is probable that Mary Allerton was born about 1616.†

In the first list of men "admitted into freedom" at Plymouth, January 1, 1633-34, appeared the name of Thomas Cushman. He was also among the men "able to beare

This constant repetition in the division of cattle that they were brought over "in the Ann," is an error of early date. The first cattle were brought over by Winslow, in March, 1624, on the Charity. Bradford himself states that these were the "first begining of any catle of that kind in ye land . . . 3. heifers and a bull." The heifers were "two black" and one "white-backed." armes," in 1643. As "The Elder M<sup>r</sup> Thomas Cushman," he was third in the list of freemen in 1683-84.

He shared in nearly every grant of land by the Plymouth Colony Court to the "old comers," and acquired so much other land by purchase that the division of his estate among his heirs, after his decease, placed them all in more than comfortable circumstances. As early as March 14, 1635-36, it was ordered by the Court in the assignment of the hay-ground, "That M<sup>r</sup> Prence Joseph Rogers Tho: Cushman & Edw: Dowty haue the ground vpon Jones his riuer, where M<sup>r</sup> Prence and M<sup>r</sup> Allerton mowed last yeare." The following year (March 20, 1636-37), the hay-ground allotted to Cushman was "the remaynder of the marsh before the house he liueth in (w<sup>ch</sup> M<sup>ris</sup> Fuller doth not vse) and the little pcell at the wading place on thother side Joanes Riuer." * From this it appears probable that he had commenced housekeeping in Mistress Fuller's house at the time of his marriage, a few months before.

There is no further record showing his residence until October 20, 1653, when he purchased the former homestead of his father-in-law, Isaac Allerton, adjoining the land of Mistress Fuller where he made his first home. The transaction is recorded in part as follows:—

"BRADFORD GOV<sup>r</sup>

This deed was followed by another of the same date, to which "m<sup>is</sup> Mary Cushman the wife of the said m<sup>r</sup> Thomas Cushman gave her free and full consent." It conveyed, for "seaventy and seaven pounds," to Captain Willett and William Paddy, "All that his [Cushman's] prte portion or share of land both upland and meddow belonging unto him as purchased lying and being at Sowamsett Secunke and place or places adiacent."† Cushman's land at Sowamsett, or "Assowamsett Necke," consisted of a "whole pte" of a purchase by William Bradford, Thomas Prince, Edward Winslow, Captain Standish, "M<sup>r</sup> Cushman," Experience Mitchell, and five others, "att Sowamsett and Matpoissett," for the division of which a meeting had been held on March 7, 1652, at Plymouth.‡ Twenty years later, March 5, 1671-72, the Court confirmed to Thomas Cushman, Sr., "one half of the last purchase of land made by the Treasurer [Constant Southworth] of Phillip, sachem of Punkanawkett . . . lying and being att Assowamsett Ponds, the other half belonging vnto Thomas Little." With this tract he should also have "any meadow . . . neare or conuenient vnto the aforesaid land."* In 1680, Assowamsett Neck was joined to Middleborough, and Mattapoisett later became the town of Rochester. Cushman also had an interest in the town's land at Punkateesett (Little Compton, R. I.) granted to him in 1651.

When sundry proportions of meadow at Jones's River were laid out, in 1653, the first six acres were given to Mr. Hanbury. The second lot is described as "M<sup>r</sup> Thomas Cushman's from M<sup>r</sup> hanberryes outter stake along to the upland to a rock upon the Island containing within it the cove of mersh which lyeth between the Island and the upland; and from that rock on the Island to run upon a west norwest line; and east south east buting upon M<sup>r</sup> hanberryes Meddow." The third lot was granted to John Howland, the fourth to John Cooke, and the fifth to Jacob Cooke.

On May 24, 1660, John Howland was granted by the town of Plymouth, land "lying att a brook within two miles or thereabouts of Winnatuxett meddow," and at the same time the Elder Cushman was granted fifty acres adjacent. These fifty acres were laid out in 1665, beside the "brook by John Bosworths." Nine years afterward (May 18, 1674), Cushman received a further grant of fifty acres at Winnatuxett meadow, "neare a place called Colchester in the Town of Plymouth." He also had a tract of twelve acres at this place, which was laid out in 1693 (after the Elder's death), and divided, March 28, 1700, by his three sons, Thomas, Isaac, and Elkanah Cushman.†

"Elder Thomas Cushman for his children" was granted,

June 7, 1665, one share of thirty acres "on the westerly Side of Namasskett Riuer . . . with all the appurtenances belonging thereunto." Namassakett was incorporated June 1, 1669, as the town of Middleborough.

It was an established principle with these Pilgrim Fathers that any land taken from the Indians should be conveyed to them by deed, and due compensation given therefor. One of the earliest Indian deeds, dated March 29, 1653, from the "Sachem Ousamequin" (Massasoit) and "Wamsitto his eldest son," conveyed "severall prcells and neckes of upland Swamps and meddowes lying and beinge on the southerly side of Sincunke allis Rehoboth bounds." The consideration was £35. The grantees included the more prominent men of the Colony: "Thomas Prence Thomas Willett Myles Standish Josiah Winslow agents for themselves and William Bradford senior gen<sup>t</sup>: Thomas Clarke John Winslow Thomas Cushman William White John Addams and Experience Michell."*

In the ordering of town affairs, the Elder Thomas Cushman bore a prominent part. In 1640 and 1646, with "William hoskins" and others, he appeared in lists of townsmen of Plymouth. When it was decided in town-meeting, September 28, 1643, to appoint a watch to guard against the Indians, it was "agreed upon that there shalbe a watch house forthwith built of brick," on Burial Hill; it was also appointed that "Nathaniell Sowther Thomas Southwood [Southworth] John Dunhame and Thomas Cushman shall divide the number of the Inhabitants into sevrall watches according to the form[er] order." Cushman also was chosen, October 9, one of the "Raters to rate and assesse the charges of this yeare for this Towne for the fortyfyation work donn about the ordinance, for the building of the watchhouse and the officers wages." In 1644, he was one of five who were chosen "to make a Rate for the payment of the publicke officers;" in 1648, one of five "Raters for coman charges." In 1672 and 1674, the Elder Cushman was on committees "to make rates for Plymouth."*

That his services as a surveyor often were required is evident. With Nicholas Snow, Richard Sparrow, and Josiah Cooke, he was chosen March 3, 1639-40, a surveyor of highways. They were reappointed the next year; but were presented at Court December 1, 1640, "for not mending the heigh wayes at the Second Brooke, Smylt Riuer, New Bridge, and other places." Upon condition that they should make the needed repairs "this year," they were discharged.† In 1667, the fifty acres of Richard Wright at Winnatuxet were laid out by "Captaine Bradford and the Elder Cushman." The Elder, Jacob Cooke, and Stephen Bryant, in 1668, laid out land at Jones's River for Thomas Dunham.

Thomas Cushman served on the "Grand Enquest" a number of sessions from 1635 to 1676. Between 1636 and 1666, he served twenty-two terms on juries. The actions in Court were for debt, trespass, slander, land damages, the accidental burning of a house, trespass upon "an ould way," "Tryall of Yssues [issues] betwixt pty & pty," and one case of "assault & battery."‡ His last service as juryman was on July 9, 1686, when he was seventy-eight years of age.§

In recognition of his valuable public services, on August 5, 1672, "Att this meeting it was voated by the Towne that the Elder Cushman be ffreed from paying any Rate to the Minnistry for the future in Regard of his many emergent occations and expence of time; therein Improved for the publicke good."|| The individual assessment for the support of gospel preaching was most rigorously collected in every town, and the Elder Cushman's exemption from this tax, "for the future," carried with it a value little realized at the present day. It was a unique honor generously bestowed by his townsmen.

The importance of Thomas Cushman's position as Ruling Elder of the church at Plymouth, the "First Congregational Church in America," cannot be overestimated. The society was formed in 1606, at Amsterdam. Three years later, the pastor, John Robinson, who exercised a patriarchal care over his flock, removed them in a body to Leyden. When they decided to emigrate to the New World, it was planned at first that the Pastor also should go. Later, in view of the numbers necessarily left behind, it was arranged that Robinson should remain in Leyden, while his Ruling Elder, William Brewster, should "depart into the new country" and abide there until such time as Robinson should be able to join them. Brewster was a power for good in the infant settlement; but John Robinson, though in Leyden, still was regarded as the pastor of the church at New Plymouth, and continued to exercise not only a moral, but a pastoral, influence over his people. After the death of Robinson, in 1625, it was the universal wish that Brewster should succeed him. Brewster, however, steadily refused an ordination as pastor, though, in fact, he performed the duties of both offices.

As the Colony increased in numbers, a minister, John Lyford, was sent over from England, in March, 1623-24, to assist Brewster. Proving unworthy of the office, he soon was dismissed and banished. In 1628, "Mr Rogers" was brought over to minister to them; but "because of a disordered brain" they sent him back to England the next year. In 1629, Ralph Smith, another minister, was chosen their pastor, continuing in that office about five or six years. "Thinking it too heavie a burthen," he voluntarily resigned. Roger Williams, though not ordained, officiated for a time as assistant pastor and as pastor. Bradford called him "a man godly & zealous, having many precious parts, but very unsettled in judgmente." He finally was banished to Rhode Island for his "Baptist beliefs." John Norton preached one winter for the people at Plymouth, but refused to be settled permanently. Later, he went to Ipswich. The distinguished Charles Chauncey also preached for a short time. In January, 1636-37, Mr. John Rayner, "an able and a godly man," was sent to them; "whom after some time of tryall, they chose for their teacher, the fruits of whose labours they enjoyed many years." *

It was during Mr. Rayner's pastorate that Thomas Cushman, in 1649, was ordained Ruling Elder. The office of the Pastor, or Teaching Elder, was to preach, to teach, and to administer the sacraments. The Ruling Elder was "to help the Pastor in ruling and overseeing." The Rev. Philemon Robbins, pastor of the First Church in Branford, Connecticut, in a sermon preached January 30, 1760, at the ordination of his son, Rev. Chandler Robbins, "to the pastoral office over the First Church and Congregation in Plymouth," referred to the labors of Thomas Cushman in that church, as follows:—

"After Mr. Brewster's decease, the Church Chose Mr. Thomas Cushman as his successor in the Office of Ruling Elder, . . . Son of that faithful Servant of Christ Mr. Robert Cushman . . . and this his Son inheriting the same Spirit, and being competently qualified with Gifts and Graces, proved a great Blessing to this Church, assisting Mr. Reyner, not only in ruling, catechising, visiting, but also in public Teaching, as Mr. Brewster had done before him. . . . It being the professed Principle of this Church in their first Formation, to choose none for governing Elders but such as are able to teach:— which Ability (as Mr. Robinson observes in one of his Letters) other reformed Churches did not require in their Ruling Elder."

The Rev. John Rayner remained eighteen years, closing his pastorate in November, 1654. He died at Dover, New Hampshire, in April, 1669. After his departure, the Plymouth Church was without a pastor for some years, the Elder Cushman "being assisted by some of the brethren; insomuch that not one Sabbath passed without two public meetings in which the word of God was dispensed." "At length it pleased the Lord to send among us Mr. John Cotton, Junr, son to the Rev. Mr. John Cotton, that famous gospel preacher in Boston." He was first called in September, 1666. Although he arrived with his family at Plymouth November 30, 1667, he was not ordained until June 30, 1669. The churches at Barnstable, Marshfield, Weymouth, and Duxbury were represented by their pastors at his ordination. "Elder Thomas Cushman gave the charge, and the aged Mr. John Howland was appointed by the church to join in the imposition of hands. The Ruling Elder [Cushman] with the new Pastor, made it their first special work to pass through the whole town, from family to family to enquire into the state of souls." held meetings on week days at the Pastor's house, or with the brethren in their homes, "the Elder always present, and making the concluding prayer."

During the many years that Thomas Cushman ministered to the people as Ruling Elder, and for long periods acted as pastor, the church went through many trials. Between 1640 and 1650, it was greatly weakened by the removal of many of its members to remote settlements on Cape Cod and elsewhere. The troubles arising from the Quakers who "infested the country . . . much endangered the Church of Plymouth; several were wavering and hesitating." But "the Lord was pleased to bless the endeavours of their faithful elder, Mr. Cushman, in concurrence with several of the brethren, to prevent the efficacy of error and delusion; and (though destitute of a pastor) the body of the Church was upheld in its integrity, and in a constant opposition to their pernicious tenets." While the "provocations of the Quakers were as great here as elsewhere," the Plymouth Colony did not make "any sanguinary or capital laws against that sect, as some of the colonies did."

The united labors of the Rev. John Cotton and the Elder Cushman placed the church at Plymouth on a firm foundation. In the nearly thirty years of Mr. Cotton's ministry the membership increased from "47 members in full communion" to two hundred and twenty-five. Mr. Cotton resigned his pastorate at Plymouth on October 3, 1697, "to the grief of a number of the church and Town who desired his Continuance."

Six years before, on December 11 (10th, in the Town Records),* 1691, after a lingering illness, the Elder Thomas Cushman had been gathered to his fathers. The first volume of records of the First Church of Plymouth contains this notice of his death:—

* "On the 10th day of december 1691 That precious and Eminant servant of god deceased The Elder Thomas Cushman being Entered into the 84 yeare of his age." (Town Records of Plymouth, vol. 1: 202.)

"1691. It pleased God to seize upon our good Elder, M<sup>r</sup>. Thomas Cushman, by sicknesse & in this yeare to take him from us. He was chosen & ordained Elder of this Chh April 6: 1649: he was neere 43 yeares in his office, his sicknesse lasted about 11 weekes; he had bin a rich blessing to this chh scores of yeares, he was grave holy & temperate very studious & solicitous for the peace & prosperity of the chh & to prevent & heale all breaches; He dyed December 11: neare the end of the 84 yeare of his life; December 16: was kept as a day of Humiliation for his death, the Pastor prayed & preached. M<sup>r</sup> Arnold & the Pastors 2 sons assisted in prayer; much of Gods presence went away from this chh when this blessed Pillar was removed. . . . A liberal contribution was made that fast day for the Elders widow, as an acknowledgment of his great services to the chh whilst living."*

In the same book these items are found: —

"1691. Elder Thomas Cushman dyed December 11: having within two moneths finished the 84th yeare of his life; He was ordained Ruling Elder of this Church April 6 1649: he was neare 43 yeares in his office."†

"August 7, 1715. A Contribution was moved & made both by the church & Congregation To defray The Expense of Grave Stones sett upon y<sup>e</sup> grave of that worthy & useful Servant of God Eld<sup>r</sup> Thomas Cushman the whole congregation were very forward in it."‡

He was buried on the southerly brow of Burial Hill, in a beautiful spot overlooking the meeting-house in which he so long had prayed and worshipped. The gravestone erected by the Plymouth Church twenty-four years after his death was removed when the Cushman family erected the large monument upon the lot in 1858; but it is now restored as near as possible to its original position. The stone, of "purple Welsh slate," was brought from England; it stands about three and a half feet high, and is in a good state of preservation. The inscription is yet distinct and legible, the letters being about three-fourths of an inch in height:—

It will be noticed that the date of his death is given upon this stone as December 10, while that in the church records is December 11. The latter more probably is correct.

About a year before his death, Elder Thomas Cushman made his will. Judging from the amount of real estate that he left to his widow and children, and from the fact that his personal property amounted to £49 : 19, — of which £4 was in books, — the Elder possessed more than ordinary wealth for his time.

† On September 16, 1858, the Cushman Monument Association dedicated, with appropriate ceremonies, a beautiful shaft on the Cushman lot in the old graveyard on Burial Hill. It is built of Quincy granite; its form is that of an obelisk, having a Grecian base standing upon an ornamented pedestal. The extreme height is about twenty-seven and one half feet; the square of the lowest plinth is about eight feet. Each of the four bronze panels of the pedestal measures about thirty-six by twenty-two inches. The east tablet is in memory of Robert<sup>1</sup> Cushman:—

ERECTED BY THE DESCENDANTS OF
ROBERT CUSHMAN,
IN MEMORY OF THEIR PILGRIM ANCESTOR,
XVI SEPTEMBER, MDCCCLVIII.

This is continued on the north and west tablets, closing with a quotation from his "Sermon." The south tablet bears the following inscription:—

usually is given as her span of life, she could not have been much above eighty. She lived to see her sons and grandsons occupying positions of honor and trust; and the Plymouth Colony, united with that of Massachusetts Bay, secure in strength and prosperity.

- I. Thomas<sup>3</sup>, b. Sept., 1637; mar., first, Nov. 17, 1664, at Plymouth, Ruth<sup>2</sup>, daughter to John<sup>1</sup> Howland, "one of the old comers" of the Mayflower, 1620. She was living when her father made his will, May 29, 1672, but died before 1679. Thomas Cushman mar. Oct. 16, 1679, in Rehoboth, as his second wife, Abigail<sup>2</sup> Fuller, b. about 1653, daughter to Robert<sup>1</sup> and Sarah (—) Fuller, of Salem and Rehoboth.

Thomas Cushman's name appears in several lists of free-men; he was a surveyor of highways a number of years for the town of Plymouth. The homestead where he lived and died consisted of a large farm, with numerous buildings, lying on both sides of Colchester Brook at the west of the highway running northward from the meeting-house at Plympton. This site originally was in Plymouth, but when Plympton was set off, in 1707, the division brought it within the limits of the new town. Thomas Cushman and his wife Abigail were members of the Congregational Church at Plympton, of which his brother Isaac was pastor. He died Aug. 23, 1726, at Plympton, aged eighty-nine years. The

- II. Sarah<sup>3</sup>, b. in Plymouth; mar. April 11, 1661, as his second wife, John<sup>2</sup> Hawkes, of Lynn. The first wife of John<sup>2</sup> Hawkes was Rebecca<sup>2</sup>, daughter to Moses<sup>1</sup> Maverick, of Marblehead. They were married June 3, 1658; she died Nov. 4, 1659, leaving a son, Moses, a day or two old.

John Hawkes, b. 1633,† was second son to Adam<sup>1</sup> Hawkes, of Lynn, who came in the fleet with Winthrop and landed in June, 1630, at Salem. In 1634, Adam Hawkes was admitted freeman; he was then of Charlestown. His wife, Anne, who is supposed to have been the mother of all his children except Sarah, was the widow of — Hutchinson. As the wife of Adam Hawkes, she was admitted Nov. 21, 1634, to the First Church of Charlestown.‡ She died Dec. 4, 1699, in Lynn; and her husband married, second, in June, 1670, Sarah Hooper.

The four acres of planting-ground which Adam Hawkes possessed Jan. 10, 1635-36, in Charlestown, he sold not long after to N. Eaton and J. Sibley. Before 1638, he had removed to Lynn, for in that year he received, as "an inhabitant of the Town," a grant of one hundred acres. The farm was on the banks of the Saugus River,§ and there he built a house. This house soon afterward was burned; the only persons in it at the time were a servant girl and twin infants, who escaped unharmed through the snow. The second house which he built was in part constructed from the material of the first, — bricks brought from England. When the house was demolished, in 1872, a brick was found bearing the date 1611. There was found also an ancient fire-back, about two feet square and weighing nearly a hundred pounds, on which was moulded what was supposed to be the British arms; later, this has been thought to be a coat-of-arms, possibly that of the Hawkes family. It is said that Adam Hawkes owned the land where iron ore was found, and that he believed that one of the mines contained silver.

In September, 1653, Adam Hawkes (Sr. or Jr.), of Lynn, appeared on John Gifford's "bill for work diet provisions &c for Iron works at Hammersmith & Braintree." ISSUE OF —<sup>1</sup> AND ANNE HUTCHINSON

- I. Samuel<sup>2</sup> Hutchinson, b. 1617 or 1618, was of Lynn and Reading. He was a farmer. In 1638, the town of Lynn granted him ten acres near the hundred-acre farm of Adam Hawkes, which he sold in 1648, with the dwelling-house upon it, for £30. With wife, Hannah, he sold for £300, May 14, 1670, his homestead in Reading, "on the side of Great Pond," to Richard Sutton, of Roxbury. Samuel probably removed to Andover, where his will, dated April 23, 1740, was proved, Aug. 24, 1741.
- II. Elizabeth<sup>2</sup> Hutchinson, b. 1622; mar. about 1650, Isaac<sup>1</sup> Hart. He was b. about 1614 or 1615, at "Scratby" (Scratly, a part of Ormsby), England; he sailed from London, April 11, 1637, in the ship Rose. Isaac Hart was first at Watertown, but soon drifted to Lynn. Aug. 1, 1656, Thomas Hutchinson conveyed for £120 to Isaac Hart, his house and barn, with two hundred acres of upland and nineteen acres of meadow, adjoining land of Edward Hutchinson, but as he could not meet the payments, Hart made over sixty acres to Francis Hutchinson. In 1673, Hart purchased five hundred acres in what is now Lynnfield, on which he resided until his death.

At the time of the witchcraft persecution, Mrs. Elizabeth Hart was imprisoned for six months; but finally was allowed by the Court to return to her home. She d. Nov. 28, 1700, her husband having d. Feb. 10, 1699-1700. His will, dated Feb. 6, 1697, mentioned wife, Eliza-

The inventory, taken March 18, 1671-72, amounted to £817:11:00.

Throughout his life, Adam Hawkes was truly a father to the Hutchinson children; they shared in all things with his own. Francis, who could not have been much above a year old when his mother married Hawkes, seems to have been an especial favorite with his stepfather, though they all settled near him.

John<sup>2</sup> Hawkes was made freeman in 1690; he was then called "Senior." During King Philip's War he belonged to the "Lynn Troopers" as a private. Early in 1675, he was reported by Lieut. John Floyd as one of the seven delinquents "at the rendevew at Concord;" but on April 2, 1676, he appeared in an account of Nathaniel Bissell "for ferriage of himself and Samuel Patrick, with three horses . . . 0:2:4."*

Upon the death of his father, John Hawkes received one half of the farm in Lynn, bordering upon the town of Reading. It consisted of a dwelling-house and barn, valued at £120, and five hundred and fifty acres of land and meadow, estimated at £550. This was well stocked with cattle, bees, and farming-tools. John Hawkes died, without making a will, Aug. 15, 1694, leaving a widow, Sarah, and five children. The following month his heirs signed an amicable agreement for the division of his estate:—

"This Indenture Covenant and Agreement † made Between The Widdow and the Surviving children of m<sup>r</sup> John Hauks deceased one with Another Respectively with Reference to The settlement of The Estate of Lands and moveables That The said m<sup>r</sup> John Hauks Dye Seized off which Settlement According To This Indenture we whose names Are Subscribed Doe Bind ourselves our heirs Executors for ever by these These presents to Rest satisfisfyed And Contented and Contented with, never for The future to Molest or disturb each other farther Then what Is here Agreed upon but

On April 8, 1695, Sarah Hawkes, the widow of John Hawkes, Sr., "Removed her right of administration" upon her husband's estate in favor of her sons, John and Thomas. At the same time, John Hawkes quitclaimed* to Elizabeth, widow of Adam Hawkes, his brother, who had died before their father, and to "John Hawks only son of the Said Adam Hawkes . . . four Score acres . . . Situate in ye town Ship of linn . . . with Sawgust riuier to ye west [and bounded] northward with the land of Dan<sup>ll</sup> Eaton." This land was to be held by the widow and her son John "as a clear & absolute Estate of Inheritance in fee Simple without any Incumbrance wthsoever." All the heirs who signed the agreement affixed their signatures to this release.

Sarah, widow of John Hawkes, survived him several years, but the exact date of her death is not known. By the will of their father, Elder Cushman, she and her sister, Lydia Harlow, received twenty shillings; but to this was added one half of the residue of his estate after the decease of their mother, "to be equally Divided between them." This Hawkes family evidently occupied a good position in the town, and possessed more than ordinary wealth for the times. Some of their descendants are now residing in Lynn.

Issue by first wife: 1. Moses<sup>8</sup> Hawkes, b. Nov. [before the 4th], 1659, in Lynn. In the division of his grandfather's estate, made March 27, 1672, John<sup>2</sup> Hawkes, as executor, was "to deliver and sett out unto Moses Hawks his sonn, which he had by rebeckah Hawks, daughter of M<sup>r</sup> Moses Mavericke," certain tracts of land. Moses Hawkes mar. May 10, 1698, Margaret<sup>8</sup> Cogswell, daughter to John<sup>2</sup> and Margaret (Gifford) Cogswell, of Ipswich. Moses<sup>8</sup> Hawkes d. Jan. 1, 1708-9. His son Moses<sup>4</sup>, of Lynn, "being come to y<sup>e</sup> age of one & Twenty years," March 5, 1719-20, accepted his portion of the estate as set forth in his father's will.*

Issue by second wife: 2. Susanna<sup>8</sup> Hawkes, b. Nov. 29, 1662, in Lynn. With two of her sisters, she died "the last of November 1675," a few days after their younger sister, Mary, was born.

3. Adam<sup>8</sup> Hawkes, b. May 12, 1664, in Lynn. He mar. Elizabeth —, and had a son John. He died before his father.

4. Ann<sup>8</sup> Hawkes, b. May 3, 1666, in Lynn; d. the last of Nov., 1675.

5. John<sup>8</sup> Hawkes, b. April 25, 1668, in Lynn. His autograph signature appears in the agreement of 1694.

8. Mary<sup>8</sup> Hawkes, b. Nov. 14, 1675, in Lynn. She appears in the agreement as Marcy.
9. Ebenezer<sup>8</sup> Hawkes, was a minor at the time of his father's death, and both the agreement and quitclaim were signed in his behalf by his guardian, Francis Hutchinson. The latter was the husband of his mother's sister, Mary<sup>8</sup> (Cushman) Hutchinson.

III. Lydia<sup>8</sup>, b. in Plymouth; mar. about 1682, William<sup>2</sup> Harlow, b. 1650, eldest son to William<sup>1</sup> and Rebecca (Bartlett) Harlow.

William<sup>1</sup> Harlow, a young man, appeared in Lynn in 1637. He removed to Sandwich, then to Plymouth, where he mar., first, in 1649, Rebecca, daughter to Robert Bartlett. After her death he mar., second, in 1658, Mary, daughter to John Faunce.

2. Thomas<sup>8</sup> Harlow, b. March 17, 1686, in Plymouth; mar. Jedidah Churchill.

16, 1659-60, at Plympton, and d. Sept. 17, 1722, at Plympton, aged sixty-two.

Elkanah Cushman was admitted freeman June 7, 1681. He served on the jury 1682-86, and many other years. On Oct. 31, 1682, he was one of the twelve men at the trial of two Indians — one of whom had been arrested "for his incorrigible theft the second time, in robing of a bark and other theft." Elkanah Cushman was deacon of the church at Plympton, of which his brother Isaac was pastor, for about nine years; he also was an Ensign. The Plympton church records say: "At a chh. meeting in Plympton, Dec. y<sup>e</sup> 26. 1718, Ensign Elcanah Cushman [and two others] were chosen Deacons." "Memorandum that on Sabbath day some time in March in y<sup>e</sup> year 1718-19 Samuel Sturtevant, Elcanah Cushman and Daniel Bosworth were ordained Deacons by the imposition of hands."

Elkanah Cushman served as Representative to the General Court of Massachusetts three sessions, beginning May 29, August 7, and October 23, in the year 1723.* His house stood on the highway leading eastward from Plympton Green to Kingston, and was the first dwelling-house north of the bridge over Colchester Brook. He died Sept. 4, 1727, in Plympton. His will, dated Oct. 14, 1725, was proved Sept. 26, 1727.†

The following is the inscription on his gravestone in the Plympton Cemetery: —

In November, 1733, a petition was presented by "divers inhabitants of Plympton" to the General Court that a new precinct or township be set off. A committee from both Houses repaired to the town, "perambulated & carefully viewed the Lands," and concluded "upon the whole [that they] are of the Opinion, that the prayer of the petition be Granted, the petitioners paying one third part of the aged & Rev<sup>d</sup> Mr Cushman's Salary during his Life as it appears to us they are one third part of the rateable Estate of the said Town." Eleazer Cushman and four others were allowed to remain in the "old precinct, with their Ministerial Lands . . . & the new precinct to have none of the Issues & profits thereof." The new precinct was incorporated in July, 1734, as the town of Halifax. This shows that Eleazer's farm was on the northwesterly side of the town, bordering on Halifax. Little is known of his later years; he probably removed to a distance with some of his children.

VIII. Mary<sup>3</sup>, b. about 1659, in Plymouth, mar. Francis Hutchinson, of Lynn and Reading.

In a deposition, dated March 1, 1665-66, he gave his age as thirty-six years,* from which it appears that he was born about 1630. His first wife, Sarah Leighton, whom he married "11: 10<sup>mo</sup>: 1634" (Dec. 11, 1634), in Lynn, died twelve days later — "23: 10<sup>mo</sup>: 1634."† He probably married Mary Cushman in 1679, when she was twenty years of age, since Francis, the eldest of their three sons, was born about 1680. She was not living when her father made his will, on October 22, 1690, bequeathing "unto my three Grandchildren in Lin the Children of my-daughter Mary Hutchinson deceased to each of them twenty shillings to be paid unto them out of my Estate Soone after my decease." From the absence of any mention of his son-in-law's name, or transaction between them, it is apparent that Elder Cushman did not approve of his daughter Mary's marriage. This may have been due to the difference of twenty-nine years in their ages.

Francis<sup>2</sup> Hutchinson was youngest son to —<sup>1</sup> Hutchinson, whose widow, Anne, married, about 1631, Adam<sup>1</sup> Hawkes, of Charlestown. She had, at that time, five young children: Samuel<sup>2</sup>, Elizabeth<sup>2</sup>, Edward<sup>2</sup>, Thomas<sup>2</sup>, and Francis<sup>2</sup> Hutchinson. Whether the father of these children died before they left England, on the voyage coming over, or soon after their arrival, cannot be ascertained.

For a time all the Hutchinson children remained in the neighborhood of their stepfather, Adam Hawkes; and the loss of a colt valued at £11:9:2, given to John Hawkes by his father Adam, was the cause of various depositions ‡ that show the relationship. Isaac Hart, who had married Elizabeth Hutchinson, called John Hawkes "his Bro: [brother,]" and Thomas Hutchinson testified "that my father in law [stepfather] Addam: Hakes did giue to his sone John Hakes such a colt & hee did put it to Jsaake Hartes to keepe." "francis Hutchinson" also testified "that J did see Isack Hart and sammell Hutchinson to mark John hawkes coult and J was one of the compeny that did fetch up the Coult to the Marrking and that that this Coult that is now in Contrievarcy J doe verrlie be leeuue that it is John hawcks Coult." Sworn to in Court, "2 : 10 : [16]58."

When Adam Hawkes, on June 18, 1660, brought suit against the Iron Works "ffor Damning their waters so high as it is cause of flotting his Lands well and Bridge to his great Damage for several years," Francis Hutchinson testified, with others, "that Mr Adam Hawkes sufer[ed] much Damage by the waters of the Irne worrkes . . . sume time thay fallen in Danger for to breacke thar leggs."* Evidently there no attempt was made to draw off the water, and in the face of tardy justice the Hawkes family probably had taken down a part of the dam, since, in 1663, suit was brought against John Hawkes, Sr., and his brother Moses, by Samuel Appleton and his son Samuel, in an action of appeal from the County Court at Salem to the Court of Assistants in Boston. Judgment was given in favor of the plaintiffs for £30 damages, and "the defendants shall make vp the great dam as Good as before in twelue months time next ensuing or pay £250" and costs. John Hawkes appealed; and on March 4, 1663, "the Jury brought in their verdict they found for the plaintiff [Hawkes] Reuersion of the forme<sup>r</sup> Judgment & costs of Court nine pounds."†

Edward Hutchinson, too, lived near,—for in 1661, the estate of William Lampson, of Ipswich, included four acres of meadow "in the great meddow in the bounds of Lynn bounded by meddow of Edward Hutcheson towards the North the meddow of Jsaac Harte towards the South . . . and Jsaac Hart his farme east."‡

Francis Hutchinson settled in the North Precinct of Lynn, which in 1644 was established as the town of Reading. His farm was a part of the land sold by his brother Thomas to Isaac Hart, Aug. 21, 1656. The original tract consisted of two hundred and eighty-nine acres. In 1715, when the title of the sixty acres which Hart had given to Francis Hutchinson was questioned, Shubael Stearns, an old friend and neighbor, seventy-four years of age, deposed: That about fifty years before (in 1665) he had bought a lot next adjoining the sixty acre lot where "Francis Hutchinson then dwelt on partly in Reading & partly in Lynn;" and that his sons, Francis and Thomas, had been in "quiet possession ever since." At the house of Isaac Hart in Lynn, Stearns heard Mrs. Hart often say that her brother, Francis Hutchinson, had paid her brother, Thomas Hutchinson, for "s<sup>d</sup> lot of 60 acres," and "particularly once when she was discoursing of the matter her husband m<sup>r</sup> Isaac Hart coming in she said to him I wonder you dont give Francis a Deed of his land you know he has paid for it he answered he dont ask me for one . . . he paid an horse and something else." Adam Hart, above sixty years of age (1715), had heard his mother, Elizabeth Hart, say when her brother Thomas "was about to go to Long Island they being not ready to make payment for the whole," the sixty acre lot was given to Francis Hutchinson to make payment for the same.*

In 1685, the town of Reading voted, "that all those persons that inhabit on the north side of Ipswich River, in our town bounds, viz. . . . Francis Hutchinson and [eight others] . . . shall have those two pieces of land, namely: the towne's land in Sadler's Neck, so called [and] that piece of Common land, that lyeth at the upper end of Mr. Bellingham's farme and belongs to the towne."† This land Francis Hutchinson bequeathed to his youngest son, John.

Living in a section which since has been divided into several townships, it has been difficult to learn much about his life. On May 17, 1662, when the "Troopers of Essex County" were to be newly arranged, the towns that had not already organized companies were to "haue Libertie to nominate a compleate number of officers according to Law." Under this order, Francis Hutchinson was chosen Captain of the Lynn company in 1663.* Although the inventory of his estate mentions two guns, also a "Repure [rapier] & belt," he was not recorded in the service of the later wars.

Francis Hutchinson "owned y<sup>e</sup> Covenant" in the First Church of Reading (now Wakefield), Sept. 6, 1687.† This is conjectured to be soon after the death of his second wife, Mary, the mother of his three sons. In 1688, he subscribed £3 toward the new meeting-house of the First Church; among other subscribers living at "Lynn End" (now Lynnfield) were Edward Hutchinson, £2:10, and Isaac Hart, £10:01. The date of the death of Francis is given in the inventory of the estate of "m<sup>r</sup> ffrancis Hucheson of Reading whoe deperted This life the 12th of November 1702." His will, dated Feb. 18, 1698-99, is as follows:—

SHUBAEL STARNS

BENJAMIN HUTCHISSON

JAM<sup>s</sup>. CONVERSE ~"

This will was sworn to by the witnesses, Shubael Stearns, Benjamin Hutchinson, and James Converse, at "Cambridge: Dec<sup>r</sup> 7<sup>o</sup> 1702." The inventory, taken by Jeremiah Swain and John Brown, Nov. 26, 1702, included among other items: "To Milletiry Arms: 2 guns one Repure & belt . . . £03: 06: 00;" also about fourteen acres of meadow in "Lyn bounds att . . . £28;" and about twenty-five acres at "Sadler's Nook . . . £15." Administration was granted, Dec. 7, 1702, to Francis Hutchinson, the eldest son, who had reached his majority since the will was made.

* This seal has been stamped with some impression; but, as the document is covered with silk tissue to preserve it, the design is indistinct.

The gift of three articles by Francis Hutchinson to his sons, which were not to be considered a part of his estate, carries with it a peculiar significance. It suggests the legacy of Elder Cushman to the three children of his daughter, Mary Hutchinson, in Lynn; but, being of greater value than the twenty shillings he gave to each, it probably represented their share in the estate of their mother.

The widow, Martha, was the third wife of Francis Hutchinson, and probably at the time of her marriage to him, a widow. In his will he desired that "she shall haue those things in perticuler as part of her thirds, y<sup>t</sup> I received with her vpon Marriage, and that the other part of her thirds . . . be made vp to her." Martha, widow of Francis Hutchinson, died Aug. 15, 1708, in Reading. Her husband's death, Nov. 12, 1702, also is recorded there.*

Issue by second wife: 1. Francis<sup>s</sup> Hutchinson, b. about 1680, in Lynn or Reading; mar. May 18, 1708, in Reading, Mary, daughter to John and Joanna Jefferds, of Lynn.† In the settlement of the estate of her father, "m<sup>r</sup> John Jefferds," Mary Hutchinson gave a receipt, June 19, 1734, for the sum of £8 : 04 : 07, in full for her share.‡

Francis<sup>s</sup> Hutchinson was a resident of Lynn, that part later called Lynnfield. He died intestate, in Lynn, about Jan., 1755, as his inventory was ordered by the Court Feb. 10, and taken March 21, of that year. In March, 1752, he had given to his daughter, Anne Sheldon, wife of Amos Sheldon, of Lynn, for £200, a deed of one half of his homestead, including the house, barn, and thirty acres of land in Lynn and Reading, bounded north by the highway, east by land of Nathaniel Sherman, south by Bare Meadow, and west by the land of Thomas Hutchinson; also eighteen acres in Lynn, adjoining the land of Samuel Stearns and "Willises Meadow." This deed was acknowledged by witnesses, Jan. 21, 1755, to be the "deed of Francis Hutchinson now deceased."§

The inventory of his estate includes : one half of the house, half of the barn, half of the homestead, half of thirteen acres at "Willises Meadow," and half of eight acres at Bare Meadow, £139: 09: 04; household furniture, live-stock, "half a cyder mill & the whole Press," farming-tools, warming-pan, etc., £50: 15: 06; "His Plate viz One Silver Cup . . . £3: 04: 10." This cup was evidently his most cherished possession, as it was second in the list, his wearing apparel, valued at £3: 11, being mentioned first. This doubtless was the cup representing his share in his mother's estate.

Upon the petition of Mary, the widow, "she being very infirm of body," her son-in-law, Amos Sheldon, was appointed administrator. The widow was given her thirds; and the remainder was settled upon Anne (Anna) Sheldon, wife of Amos, who was to pay to the heirs of Thomas Hutchinson, deceased, the only son, "his double share," and to Mary Newhall and Elizabeth Hutchinson the money equivalent to their shares; — these "being All ye children & heirs of ye s<sup>d</sup> Dece<sup>d</sup>."*

July 19, 1733, in Reading. Her husband, Thomas<sup>4</sup> Hutchinson, d. in Jan., 1749-50; the next month, Feb. 9, the widow Anna petitioned that her father, William Bryant, Jr., "may administer upon the estate of my late husband," she being under age and unable to attend to it. Dec. 31, 1750, her father was appointed guardian to her posthumous son Thomas, then about six months old. July 19, 1762, Brown Emerson was appointed guardian in place of Mr. Bryant, the son "now being about twelve years old." † Issue: 1. Thomas<sup>5</sup> Hutchinson, b. June, 1750, in Reading. III. — He lived on a part of his father's farm on the border of Lynn and Reading, but was better known as a resident of Reading. In 1732, he was chosen one of the deacons of the First Church of North Reading; he was also selectman that year.* April 23, 1754, Thomas Hutchinson, of Reading, yeoman, and his wife, Mary, conveyed to Benjamin Flint, of Reading, for £133 : 06 : 08, thirty acres, "partly in Reading and partly in Lynn," with the buildings thereon, together with three acres in "Willisses" meadow adjoining land of his brother Francis and Samuel Stearns. This deed was acknowledged by Thomas Hutchinson, March 21, 1755;† as his wife did not join with him, she may have died. He probably removed soon after this sale of his homestead, for there is no probate of his estate in Middlesex or Essex counties.

ISAAC<sup>3</sup> CUSHMAN

Isaac<sup>3</sup> Cushman, second son to Elder Thomas<sup>2</sup> and Mary (Allerton) Cushman, was born February 8, 1647-48, in Plymouth. He married, about 1675, Rebecca Rickard, who was born in 1654, at Plymouth.

Isaac Cushman appears to have been an early example of the self-made man. Without special advantages, he obtained a better education than was common in his time, and excelled in widely diverging attainments. At the age of twenty-eight he commenced surveying, following in the footsteps of his father; he served on many committees for the town; was Deputy to the General Court; and the last thirty-seven years of his life he was the beloved pastor of the First Church of Plympton.

He lived in that part of Plymouth which was set off June 4, 1707, as Plympton. His large farm, partly inherited from his father and partly acquired in 1703 by a grant from the town, extended from the burying-ground northwardly, on the east of the present highway. The grant of May 24, 1703, was of a tract of eighteen acres, to be equally divided between Isaac Cushman and Benjamin Soule, adjoining land they already possessed, "on Condition that they allow a sufficient road to be laid out by the select men of the town through their other lands for the use of the Neighbors & Travellers."*

As surveyor of highways for the town of Plymouth, Isaac Cushman was first chosen on May 4, 1676; he also served as surveyor of highways and "to lay out land," in 1684 and 1694-98. He was selectman 1687, 1688, 1692, and 1694; "Rater" for the town, "for a year," from July 27, 1685. In 1695, he was on a committee to make a rate of £85 for the support of the minister, Rev. John Cotton.† He took the freeman's oath June 6, 1683,‡ and served many terms on juries and the "Grand Enquest."

On November 24, 1684, he was one of the "agents" to "defend the Northerly line of the Towne." Eleven years later, March 29, 1695, "Major Bradford, Left John Bradford, Isaac Cushman," and three others, were "A Comitty to Consider of and draw up such agrements as may be of use to defend the Towns Right on the North sid of the Towne." Isaac Cushman was chosen, Jan., 1687-88, on a committee to defend the "towns Rite In Clarks Iland." In 1697, he was elected "to settle any difference that might Arise in the Rainges of Land, . . . & to see that the Towns Comons be not Intruded on."§ revolution in England, forcing James II. to flee the country, and seized and imprisoned Andros in the spring of 1689, the citizens of Plymouth chose their two ablest men to represent them in the legislature. The deputies chosen at town-meeting, May 28, 1689, were John Bradford and Isaac Cushman. At the first session of the General Court of that year, which opened June 4, at Plymouth, the Court "appointed John Walley, Esq<sup>r</sup>, Lieu<sup>t</sup> Ephraim Morton, John Bradford, Isaac Cushman, and John Barker, or any three of them, to make enquiry concerning any goods or estate of the colonies that may be in the hands of any person . . . and give accompt thereof to the Court; also to accompt with the Treasurer and the late county sheriffs, or county treasurers, with respect to rates or fines, money or other estate, in any ways belonging to the King, or countrey, or county. And s<sup>d</sup> countrey Treasurer, county sheriffs, and county Treasurers are ordered and required to accompt with s<sup>d</sup> comitee accordingly." At the second session, beginning August 4, 1689, it was written of Cushman: "He appeared & attended at s<sup>d</sup> Court;" he also was present at the third session, which opened December 25.*

John Bradford and Isaac Cushman again were elected as Deputies on June 3, 1690, and June 2, 1691. The last session of the Plymouth Colony Court was held on July 7, 1691. "The Deputies y<sup>t</sup> appeared & served at s<sup>d</sup> Court [were] these following, viz<sup>t</sup>:—[No. 1] John Bradford, [No. 2] Isaac Cushman, [No. 6] Benjamin Stetson," and twenty-one others. The closing record was as follows: "Ordered by this Court, y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> last Wednesday of this instant be kept & observed by all y<sup>e</sup> inhabitants of this Colony as a day of publique fasting and prayer, &c." † In 1692, a new charter was sent over which converted the Colonies of Massachusetts Bay, Plymouth, and Maine into one Province; but the people had no power to make any laws except such as the king approved. The Deputies thereafter met at Boston.

After the death of Elder Thomas Cushman, in December, 1691, the church at Plymouth for some months remained without a Ruling Elder. To provide assistance for the pastor, Rev. John Cotton, on September 11, 1692, "divers Brethren were nominated as sutable to read the Psalmes: viz Jonathan Shaw Thomas Cushman Isaac Cushman Elkanan Cushman John Morton Ephraim Morton Jun<sup>r</sup> Eleizer Churchel William Shurtliffe John Bradford & Baruch Jordan: & it was concluded that any of these might be called forth by the Pastor to this service." Later, Mr. Samuel Fuller succeeded Thomas Cushman in the position of Ruling Elder, but was dismissed early in 1694 to be "the Teacher of the chh at Middlebury." March 7, 1694-95, action was taken by the church again to fill the office of Ruling Elder, notice having been given the Sabbath before "to prepare their thoughts to nominate some brethren to serve in the office of Deacons and Elders. The chh spoke man by man, and all but two or three of the brethren nominated Deacon Faunce and Bro. Isaac Cushman for Elders." At the same time Messrs. George Morton, Nathaniel Wood, and Thomas Clark were chosen Deacons.*

On June 16, 1695, the "Elders being desired to give their answers; Bro. Faunce declined a present acceptance of the call from sense of his own unfitness. Bro. Isaac Cushman desired further time for consideration." Cushman's indecision arose from the fact that he was at that time preaching to the people of the Western Precinct, later known as Plympton, who desired him to become their settled pastor; and he also had received a call from Middleborough "to be their Teacher," in place of Rev. Samuel Fuller, who had died a few months after accepting that office. The church record so quaintly describes the matter that it is here copied in full :—

“ The chh was called to meet on September 1 : which they did, and the Pastor acquainted them with those 2. calls our brother had. The chh manifested generally their good respect to him and desires not to part with him, but that he should be an Elder here in his blessed Father’s room, and desired him now to give his answer to that call, which accordingly he did : That the Providence of God was mysterious, but he apprehended he should rather accept the call of this chh to be Elder here, because it was first given before the other two calls ; the chh acted no further in that matter at that time, only voted that it would be noe offence but acceptable to them if Bro. Cushman did improve his gifts in teaching at Middlebury or any other place where the orderly providence of God should call him. God soe disposed that he harkened to the call of our Brethren and neighbours of the new society where he now lives and constantly attends the work of Preaching amongst them and is well accepted and acknowledged by them.”

The Western Precinct of Plymouth was incorporated November 25, 1695, though its first meeting of record was not held until January, 1701. This incorporation made it possible for the inhabitants to settle a pastor and contribute to his support, and relieved them from any further tax for the parent church at Plymouth. The uniform traditional testimony of aged people in Plympton is that, before the Rev. Isaac Cushman preached to them, both men and women generally walked to Plymouth to attend “meeting” on Sunday. His church probably was the outgrowth of neighborhood prayer-meetings held in their homes, because they were so far from the regular church services.

It appears from the Plympton church records that the Rev. Isaac Cushman was ordained October 27, 1698, and that he had been preaching in the Western Precinct for three years before his ordination. The delay was caused by the diversity of opinion as to the fitness of installing as Pastor one who had not been ordained, and who had not served as Ruling Elder. The Rev. Mr. Cotton and a minority of the members of the Plymouth Church took the negative side of the question; Mr. Cotton probably felt that the power and influence of the clergy were at stake. Cushman was then about forty-seven years of age, and was resolved to enter the ministry, for which he undoubtedly had peculiar "gifts and graces." He and a majority of the church opposed Mr. Cotton, and approved of the ordination. In the mean time, Mr. Cushman commenced preaching at Plympton, without being ordained. That increased the flame; and "many ill reports were propogated." At length it became apparent that Mr. Cushman and his supporters "would prevail, for he would preach and the people at Plympton would hear him — ordained or not." Thereupon the Rev. Mr. Cotton sent in his resignation, October 3, 1697, "to the great grief of a number of the Church and Town who desired his continuance." The following account of his ordination is from the first page of records of the Plympton Church: —

"Whereas the Inhabitation of the western part of Plimouth in y<sup>e</sup> year 1695 obtained liberty of being a distinct Society by themselves from the generall Court, having before sought to God for help and direction, did, on the first daye of Janewary in said year set apart a daye for thanksgiui — after which upon their desire Mr. Isaac Cushman preached the gospell there untill the 27th daye of October, in y<sup>e</sup> year 1698, upon which daye after a confession of faith and a church couenant was made, he was chosen and ordained to the pastorell office amongst them by the Elders and messengers of thre of the neighbouring churches, viz: Plimouth Duxborough and Marsfeeld being those present and assisting."

The Plymouth church records bear these notes: —

"This second Church in Town had been formed about a Twelvemonth before, and Mr Isaac Cushman was ordained their pastor, who afterwards proved a useful Instrument of building up Christ's Kingdom: This was the 4th Church derived from us, seated at a Place since called Plympton." "In April 1699, they [the Plymouth Church] chose Deacon Thomas Faunce their Ruling Elder to be helpful to Mr Little in church affairs. He was ordained to that office by Messrs. Little and Cushman, Oct. 25, 1699."*

In the peaceful settlement of the heated controversy between the two churches, which to-day appears so small but at that time was a matter of great moment, was founded the principle of the Congregational body of believers, — "that each church was entirely independent in its organization from all others," and that the vote of the majority should rule. The "Creed and Confession of Faith," written in the church records by the Rev. Isaac Cushman himself, "are precisely the same that are now [1855] used by the Congregational Church at Plympton. In the year 1793, under the ministry of Rev. Ezra Sampson, it was changed, and its ultra-calvinism somewhat modified. But in the year 1808, the original, as prepared by our ancestor, was again adopted and has since remained unchanged."† To this "Creed and Covenant" were attached the names of fourteen males, the first being "Mr Isaac Cushman;" and twenty females, the first — "Mrs Rebeckah Cushman," his wife. The following had been dismissed from the church in Plymouth:

"Mr Isaac Cushman	Rebecca Cushman
Stephen Bryant	Persis Shaw
Jonathan Shaw	Anna Waterman
Joseph Dunham	Abigail Bryant
John Waterman	Elizabeth Cooke
John Rickard	Stirtevant
Samuel Stirtevant	Elizabeth King
	Mary Rickard

It should be remembered that Plympton, for many years after its incorporation in 1707, included besides its present limits, all the town of Carver, the greater part of the town of Halifax, and a strip of Kingston. Many of Mr. Cushman's parishioners went long distances to hear him. Deacon Lewis Bradford * wrote of him: "He was a pious and godly man. He had not a college education. He used to preach without notes, but studied his sermons beforehand and committed them to memory. It is said that those who worked with him could generally tell what his text would be the Sabbath following. I have heard my grandfather, Gideon Bradford, Esq., say that when the Rev. Mr. Cushman met with children or youth, he always had something to say to them of a religious nature, and at parting, gave them his blessing; that he himself had received many a blessing from him." On Sundays, when he preached, the Rev. Mr. Cushman is said to have worn a black velvet cap, instead of the customary wig.

His dwelling-house stood "on the high ground near the easterly end of a small piece of fresh meadow, the water from which, when it runs, crosses the road about forty rods northward of the burying-ground at Plympton." The first meeting-house, which probably was built before Mr. Cushman was ordained, "stood on the Green opposite to the old Lane which led eastward from the Green down to the house of the first Benjamin Soule in Plympton." This meeting-house, which was a small building, was so constructed that each side of the house had a gable end, allowing the rain to run off at the four corners of the roof. The roof of Mr. Cushman's house was "such a one as this meeting-house had."

The number of church people increased so that the old meeting-house could not accommodate them; and the Town voted, September 16, 1714, to build a new and larger structure. The second meeting-house was first used in 1716; and, about that time, the old one was sold to Mr. Benjamin Soule, who moved it off and made it into a barn. The new building is described as facing the south, and having its interior walls plastered. Overhead, it had no "garret-floor" nor plastering. There were no broad aisles, there was no middle aisle, and no porch. "The Liberty Pole which was erected about the commencement of the Revolutionary war, or rather in 1774, stood in the centre of the Site of this Second Meeting-house, from north to south."

* Deacon Lewis Bradford was Town Clerk of Plympton for nearly forty years; and, for a long period, Clerk of the Congregational Church. "He was a most laborious and persevering genealogist and antiquarian." He died, suddenly, from an accident, Aug. 10, 1851, in Plympton, æt. eighty-three years.

The salary received by the Rev. Isaac Cushman, in 1701, was £35; one half in money, the other half in "marchantable produce." This fortunately was supplemented by the profits from his large farm. From time to time his salary was increased until, in 1728, it had reached £85, as money was then reckoned. Previous to his eighty-fourth year, he had borne the weight of parish work unaided; but, September 3, 1731, the Rev. Jonathan Parker was ordained as "Colleague Pastor." After the death of Mr. Cushman, Mr. Parker continued in the ministry at Plympton to the end of his life — a period of about forty-five years.

The Rev. Isaac Cushman died October 21, 1732, in Plympton, aged eighty-four years, eight months, and thirteen days. He was buried in the old Burying-Ground at Plympton "next to the road, about middle way between the north and south ends of the yard." "His memory has been much respected." The will of John Bradford, Gent., of Kingston, dated Oct. 2, 1732, proved Dec. 21, 1736, gave to his wife, Mary, an interest in his grist-mill and fulling-mill, in Kingston. He also bequeathed "unto my Daughter Mercy y<sup>e</sup> Widow of Isaac Cushman jun<sup>r</sup> late of Plimton Deceas<sup>d</sup> the Sum of fifty Pounds to be paid wthin one Year after y<sup>e</sup> Decease of my Self & Wife." †

Isaac Cushman was Lieutenant of the Militia Company of the town of Plympton, where his life was spent; he also held the office of Town Clerk from 1711 to the time of his death, in 1727. He served as selectman and assessor almost continuously; and was well known as a surveyor. He was chosen Representative to the General Court, where he served from May 26, 1725, to April 14, 1726, — two sessions. He was twice reelected, 1726 and 1727, serving three sessions each year.‡

He and both of his wives were active members of the church in Plympton. He died intestate, Sept. 18, 1727, and administration of his estate was granted Nov. 6, following, to his widow Mercy. In the division of his estate, March 27, 1734, the homestead, valued at £560, was set off to

THE ALLERTON FAMILY

No one of the Pilgrim Fathers is more widely known to-day than Isaac Allerton, fifth signer of the Compact; yet the praise accorded to him is modified by insinuations that greatly mar his memory. Bradford, failing to understand him, wrote with an unwarrantable prejudice, unmindful of the fact that Allerton, as agent for the Colonists, was endeavoring to solve an almost impossible financial problem. Some of our later historians, following Bradford, represent him as a shrewd schemer, who trampled upon the rights of others regardless of everything except his own aggrandizement.* That this estimate is unjust is shown by a study of the original records of the Colonies of Plymouth, Massachusetts Bay, and New Haven, as well as those of Maine and New Amsterdam.

The date of birth of Isaac Allerton usually is assumed to be 1583 or 1585; but a deposition, later given in full, dated Plymouth, September 26, 1639, in which he states his age as "about 53 yeares," indicates that he was born about 1586. His birthplace is unknown. Prior to his removal to Holland about 1609, he was of London. He belonged to an old and honorable family of mixed Saxon and Danish ancestry, some of whose representatives still are to be found in England. There is a fine coat-of-arms of the Allerton family at the Heraldic College in London, but it is not known that Isaac was of the knighted branch.

He may have been with the Pilgrims in Amsterdam, but probably joined them with the others from London, at Leyden. His name first appeared in the Leyden records with that of a widowed sister, Sarah (Allerton) Vincent, whose marriage to Degory Priest occurred on the same day as his own. Degory Priest and Sarah, widow of John Vincent, also were from London. The record of the double marriage has been photographed expressly for "The Mayflower Descendant," and is as follows : —

They were married before William Cornelison Tybault and Jacob Paedts, sheriffs, this 4th of November, 1611.*

While in Leyden, Isaac Allerton was a tailor. He was admitted to citizenship February 7, 1614, upon the guaranty of Roger Wilson and Henry Wood ; November 16, 1615, he "guaranteed" his brother-in-law Priest. With his wife, Mary, he witnessed the betrothal, April 27, 1618, of Edward Winslow (who arrived in the Mayflower, 1620, and afterward was Governor) to Elizabeth Barker, of Chester, England ; he also witnessed the betrothal of Roger Wilkins to his second wife, Margaret Barrow, on September 16, 1619. Allerton buried a child, February 5, 1620, at St. Peter's. He was then living in Pieterskerkhof. Dexter states that "apparently the Pieterskerkhof was similar in appearance to the 'hofs' in a modern Dutch town and evidently was the little colony of houses built upon the grounds of the Robinson estate. Sometimes it was called the Groene-poort." †

The few records of 1620, in Leyden, do not throw much light on the last few months of the Pilgrims' sojourn there. That Allerton was actively engaged in the preparations for removal is evident from the letter written by Samuel Fuller, Edward Winslow, William Bradford, and himself, on June 10, to Robert Cushman and John Carver, then in England. It criticised "y<sup>e</sup> new conditions . . . which all men are against;" and added, "whereas Robart Cushman desires reasons for our dislike, promising therupon to alter ye same, or els saing we should think he hath no brains, we desire him to exercise them therin, refering him to our pastors former reasons, and them to ye censure of ye godly wise. But our desires are that you will not entangle your selvs and us in any such unreasonable courses as those are, viz. y<sup>t</sup> the marchants should have ye halfe of mens houses and lands at ye dividente; and that persons should be deprived of ye 2. days in a weeke agreed upon, yea every momente of time for their owne perticuler; by reason wherof we cannot conceive why any should carie servants for their own help and comfort; for that we can require no more of them then all men one of another.* . . . We hope you have not proceeded far in so great a thing without us."†

But Robert Cushman already had acceded to the demands of the Merchant Adventurers, for he wrote on the same date (June 10), that no one of the Adventurers except Mr. Weston had seen the disputed articles before they were agreed upon at Leyden; but when they did learn of them, there was widespread dissatisfaction, and a threat of withdrawing the promised financial assistance. In the three letters of about the same date, "to them at Leyden," Cushman wrote: "Now whilst we at Leyden conclude[d] upon points, as we did, we reckoned without our host, which was not my falte. . . . If you had beaten this bussines so throuly [thoroughly] a month agoe, and write to us as now you doe, we could thus have done much more conveniently. But it is as it is." He also told them that if they would only agree upon the present terms, "your money which you ther must have, we will get provided for you instantly," otherwise "we may goe scratch for it."‡ In the face of all this, the Pilgrims, of whom Bradford, Allerton, Winslow, and Fuller, upheld by the counsels of Pastor Robinson, were certainly the leaders, sailed from Southampton without signing those articles. History shows how dearly they paid for this mismanagement.

The Speedwell left Delfshaven with Isaac Allerton and his family on board ; when the passengers were readjusted at Plymouth, England, and some were sent back to London, the Allertons continued with the Mayflower on its eventful voyage. Bradford, in enumerating "those which came over first, in y<sup>e</sup> year 1620," mentions "M<sup>r</sup> Isaack Allerton, and Mary, his wife ; with 3. children, Bartholomew, Remember, & Mary ; and a servant boy, John Hooke." * The youngest daughter, Sarah, followed soon after in the care of her aunt Sarah, widow of Degory Priest, who had married Mr. Cuthbert Cuthbertson.†

While on the Mayflower in the harbor of Cape Cod (Provincetown harbor), a second son was born to Isaac and Mary Allerton, who did not live. The mother, enfeebled with the hardships and privations of that terrible winter, "dyed with the first," February 25, 1620-21. She was buried at Cole's Hill, near the foot of the present Middle Street. John Hooke, the servant boy, died about the same time. In 1626, Isaac Allerton married Fear<sup>2</sup>, daughter to Elder William<sup>1</sup> and Mary (—) Brewster. Elder<sup>1</sup> Brewster, with his wife,

John Coombs, of Plymouth. "Mr John Combes" possessed land lying upon the south side of Phineas Pratt's homestead in Plymouth. (Plymouth Colony Deeds, Book 1 : 81.)

Mary, and sons, Love<sup>2</sup> and Wrestling<sup>2</sup>, came over in the Mayflower; another son, Jonathan<sup>2</sup>, came in the Fortune, 1621; and the daughters, Patience<sup>2</sup> and Fear<sup>2</sup>, in the Anne, 1623. Fear Allerton died December 12, 1634, of "the pestilent fever," then prevailing in Plymouth.*

About a year before her death, a maid-servant, named Alice Grinder, was brought to Plymouth by Mr. John Grant, a ship-master. In the absence of her master, Isaac Allerton, she was apprenticed to him, November 24, 1633, by the Court for five years.† The only child of Fear, Isaac, Jr., was then about three years old. After the death of the mother, it does not appear what disposition was made of Allerton's elder children by his first wife, but the young Isaac was cared for by his grandfather Brewster's family. The settlement of Elder Brewster's estate, August 20, 1645, demanded that Jonathan, the elder son, should pay £4 to his brother Love, in consideration of his wintering some cattle, "and for the dyett of Isaack Allerton a grandchild of the said Willm w<sup>ch</sup> he had placed wth his sonn Love to table."‡ As Love Brewster and his wife, Sarah, occupied the homestead where the father dwelt also, Isaac, Jr., then fifteen years of age, evidently was being brought up by the Elder. The third wife of Allerton, by whom he had no children, was Johanna —, whom he married before 1644.

Isaac Allerton invariably was mentioned by others as "Mr" or "Gentleman," an indication of his high position; he styled himself "merchant." During his later years in Connecticut, he bore the title of "Captain" or "Master." In the assignment of the seven "Garden plotes of [those] which came first layd out 1620 . . . Mr Isaack Allerton" was to build his house next to Francis Cooke on the south;§

there is no doubt that much of the labor was done with his own hands. In 1623, when the land was distributed by the casting of lots, "m<sup>r</sup> Isaack Allerton" was given seven acres "on the south side of the brooke to the baywards,"* between the present Sandwich Street and the harbor.

The name of every member of his family appears in the list of cattle distributed by order of the Court, dated May 22, 1627:—

Soon after the death in April, 1621, of John Carver, their first Governor, William Bradford was chosen Governor "in his stead, and being not yet recovered of his ilnes, in which he had been near y<sup>e</sup> point of death, Isaack Allerton was chosen to be an Assistante unto him, who, by renewed election every year, continued sundry years together."‡ Allerton was Bradford's sole Assistant until 1624, when the number of Assistants was raised to five; but he probably continued as one of them for several years longer.§ When the Colonists had bought out the Merchant Adventurers and had established an independent government, Isaac Allerton again was chosen Governor's Assistant, January 1, 1633-34.* On the same date, the name "Mr Isaac Allerton" headed the first complete list of freemen of Plymouth Colony; as "Isaack Allerton gen [gentleman]," he appeared, March 7, 1636-37, in the second list. March 25, 1633, he was assessed the largest tax in the Colony, —£3 : 11 : 00.†

At what period Isaac Allerton became a resident of Rocky Nook, at Jones's River, is not known. He was assigned mowing-ground there in 1633, and had built a house before 1635 near "the Old Wading Place." This property later passed into the possession of his son-in-law, Elder Thomas Cushman; the spring upon it is called Elder's Spring to this day.

In December, 1633, Bradford was appointed by the Court to settle the estate of Godbert Godbertson and Sarah his wife, both deceased; and to discharge the debts of the same "so far as his estate will make good." "Mr Isaac Allerton, of Plym, merch<sup>t</sup>, late brother of the said Zarah," the largest creditor, to whom £75 : 10 : 03 was due, gave "free leaue" that all others should be paid before himself, "desiring rather to lose all rather then other men should lose any."‡

On October 27, 1646, Allerton gave to "his son-in-law, M<sup>r</sup> Thomas Cushman," power of attorney (signed "Isaacke Allerton") to collect the debts from John Coombs and others to the estate of Godbert Godbertson. The Court ordered, August 1, 1648, that Thomas Cushman, for that year, should have certain proportions of corn, rye, fruit, and hemp "due vnto Mis Coombe;" also "a p<sup>te</sup> of the encrease thereof [i. e. of land at Rocky Nook] for some time should bee payed to M<sup>r</sup> Cushman afo<sup>r</sup>said, to whom the monyes was due." After the death of Robert Cushman, in 1625, Isaac Allerton was sent over to England repeatedly as the agent of the Colony. An account of his doings for the several succeeding years would be about as "intermixte" as the cargo he brought over in 1628, when "they knew not which was theirs, & w<sup>ch</sup> was his . . . for ther was no distinction." Allerton's strongest ally was James Sherley, of London, one of the Merchant Adventurers, who still had faith in the struggling Colony; and who, after the disaffection of Weston, was largely instrumental in holding the weak organization of Adventurers together. January 25, 1623, Sherley wrote a letter to New Plymouth informing the Colonists of a meeting held on Thursday, January 8, preceding, to discuss the "artickls betweene you and us." The meeting was anything but harmonious, and broke up in confusion. "But on y<sup>e</sup> 12. of Jan: we had another meting, but in the interime divers of us had talked with most of them privatly, and had great combats & reasoning, pro & con." The result was the friendliest meeting they ever knew, ending with "a potle of wine . . . which we dranke freindly together." "Our greatest enemise offered to lend us 50<sup>li</sup>," wrote Sherley. Shortly afterward, Winslow, who was already in England for the purpose of obtaining supplies, returned in the Charity with the "first catle" and "a prety good supply" of general merchandise.†

statement of their affairs, praying that "you will doe your best to free our ingagements, &c." They represented that owing to factions among the Adventurers, lack of money, and other excuses, principally "that you are Brownists, &c . . . the former course for the generalitie here is wholly dissolved from what it was ; and wheras you & we were formerly sharers and partners, in all viages & deallings, this way is no more, but you and we are left to be thinke our selles what course to take in y<sup>e</sup> future, that your lives & our monies be not lost." They also suggested that those now at Plymouth gather together such commodities as the country yielded, and send them over to pay their debts and "ingagements hear, which are not less then 1400<sup>l</sup>." At the same time, they sent over "catle, cloath, hose, shoes, leather, &c.," and committed them to the "custody of M<sup>r</sup> Allerton and M<sup>r</sup> Winslow, as our factours, at whose discretion they are to be sould, and co<sup>m</sup>odities to be taken for them, as is fitting." This letter was signed only with initials, "J. S. W. C. T. F. R. H. &c.,"* which undoubtedly represented the names of James Sherley, William Collier, Thomas Fletcher, and Robert Holland. The money advanced to purchase these supplies was at a ruinous rate of interest, "thought unreasonable by some, and too great an oppression upon y<sup>e</sup> poore people, as their case stood."

To meet these heavy financial obligations, the Colonists had two main sources of revenue, trading and fishing. Fishing along the coast of Maine had been a prominent industry from the time of the earliest settlement. Ships were sent over from every part of England, with Pemaquid and the Isles of Shoals as their objective points ; and the Merchant Adventurers began to clamor for returns from the fisheries before the Plymouth Colonists were fairly housed. Yet Bradford, in 1624, wrote that fishing was "a thing fatall to this plantation," for every attempt ended in disaster.

Allerton himself had begun the Plymouth Colony trade with the Eastern Indians. By a little barter from year to year at Monhegan and in that vicinity, he became acquainted with the fur trade and fishing, and recognized the possibilities of both. After the harvest was gathered in 1625, a shallop-load of corn was sent from Plymouth to Kennebec, and exchanged for "700 <sup>li</sup> of beaver besides some other furs."

In the summer of 1626, the Governor "and such as were designed to manage the trade," hearing that the plantation at Monhegan "was to break up, and diverse usefull goods were ther to be sould," took a boat and went up there. They purchased goods, goats, and other things, to the value of £400, sterling. There was also a French ship cast away at Sagadahock, about this time, whose cargo they purchased for above £500, and paid for in "beaver & comodities they had gott y<sup>e</sup> winter before . . . and y<sup>t</sup> somer." The profits from these expeditions enabled them to repay "the money taken up by Captaine Standish,* and y<sup>e</sup> remains of former debts."

It was at this juncture that Allerton again was sent over to England "to make a composition" with the Merchant Adventurers, which Captain Standish had attempted the year before (1625), but abandoned. He was instructed to make the best terms he could, and "not to conclud absolutely till they knew y<sup>e</sup> termes, and had well considered of them." They also gave him "a comission under their hands & seals" to borrow money not exceeding a specified sum, which he was to expend for the "use of the plantation."

"At y<sup>e</sup> usuall season of y<sup>e</sup> coming of ships," that is, in the early spring of 1627, "M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton returned," bringing goods, and "£200 <sup>li</sup> which he now gott at 30. per cent." After "much adoe and no small trouble," he had succeeded in bringing back the draft of an agreement with the Merchant Adventurers, "drawne by the best counsell of law they could get, to make it firme." By this contract, dated London, November 15, 1626, the Adventurers sold their entire interest to the Plymouth Colony for £1800; the sum of £200 to be paid annually, beginning in 1628, at the feast of St. Michael, on the west side of the Royal Exchange in London. "Least any forfeiture should fall on y<sup>e</sup> whole for none paimente at any of y<sup>e</sup> days," they were to forfeit "30<sup>s</sup> a weeke if they missed y<sup>e</sup> time." This agreement gave general satisfaction; and though they hardly knew how to raise the money, besides discharging their other debts and supplying their own needs, "yet they undertooke it," wrote Bradford. He also added that "they rane a great adventure" in so doing; but "it was absolutly confirmed on both sids . . . and ingrossed in partchmente."* Four of the Merchant Adventurers retained their interest in the affairs of the Plymouth Colony; they were known later as the English partners of the Purchasers.

Before sending Mr. Allerton back to England, the Governor and "some of their cheefe freinds had serious consideration, not only how they might discharge those great ingagments which lay so heavily upon them, . . . but also how they might devise means to help some of their freinds and breethren of Leyden over unto them, who desired so much to come to them." To effect this, "they resolved to rune a high course, and of great adventure, not knowing otherwise how to bring it aboute." After some agitation an agreement of the "joint purchasers" was made upon the following conditions : * —

"Articles of agreemente betweene y<sup>e</sup> collony of New-Plimoth of y<sup>e</sup> one partie, and William Bradford, Captein Myles Standish, Isaack Allerton, &c. one y<sup>e</sup> other partie ; and such shuch others as they shall thinke good to take as partners and undertakers with them, concerning the trade for beaver & other furs & commodities, &c. ; made July, 1627."

The first of the seven articles "covenanted" that the Undertakers, as they were termed, should discharge every debt due for the purchase (£1800), "or any other belonging to them." By the terms of the second article the new company was to enjoy the free use of their "pinass latly built, the boat at Manamett, and y<sup>e</sup> shalop, called y<sup>e</sup> Bass-boat," with all their implements ; also their stock of "furs, fells, beads, corne, wampampeak, hatchets, knives, &c. . . . now in y<sup>e</sup> storre." The third article gave them the whole trade of the Colony "for 6. full years, to begine y<sup>e</sup> last of September next insuing." The fourth article stipulated that "every severall purchaser" should annually pay to the Undertakers, for the term of six years, "3. bushells of corne, or 6 <sup>li</sup> of tobacco, at y<sup>e</sup> undertakers choyse." The Undertakers agreed, in the fifth article, that they should "bestowe 50 <sup>li</sup> per annum in hose and shoese, . . . to be sould unto them [the joint Purchasers] for corne at 6<sup>s</sup> per bushell ;" and, in the sixth article, that the whole trade at the end of six years should "returne to y<sup>e</sup> use and benefite of y<sup>e</sup> said collonie, as before." Lastly, it was provided that the Undertakers should obtain the consent of their English partners to these articles, "to stand in full force," or to abandon them and "remainne as formerly they were."

With the return of the ships they sent Mr. Allerton again to England. This was early in the fall of 1627. He carried a copy of the agreement for their English friends to sign. James Sherley hesitated to set his "hand to y<sup>e</sup> sale, being y<sup>e</sup> receiver of most part of y<sup>e</sup> adventurs, and a second causer of much of y<sup>e</sup> ingagments," but rather than that the bargain "should faile, M<sup>r</sup> Alerton having taken so much pains," Sherley wrote, December 27, 1627, "I have sealed wth y<sup>e</sup> rest, with this proviso & promise of his, y<sup>t</sup> if any trouble arise hear, you are to bear halfe y<sup>e</sup> charge." Another letter from James Sherley, dated November 17, 1628, acknowledged the receipt of a barrel of otter skins, which he had sold for £78: 12, sterling, giving the money to Mr. Allerton. He added: * —

"It is true (as you write) that your ingagments are great, not only the purchass, but you are yet necissitated to take up y<sup>e</sup> stock you work upon; and y<sup>t</sup> not at 6. or 8. <sup>sh</sup> cent, as it is here let out, but at 30. 40. yea, & some at 50. <sup>sh</sup> cent. which, were not your gaines great, and God's blessing on your honest indeaours more than ordinarie, it could not be y<sup>t</sup> you should longe subsiste y<sup>e</sup> maintain-ing of, & upholding of your worldly affaires. And this your honest & discreete agente, M<sup>r</sup> Allerton, hath seriously considered, & deeply laid to mind, how to ease you of it. He tould me you were contented to accepte of me & some few others, to joyne with you in y<sup>e</sup> purchass, as partners; for which I kindly thanke you and all y<sup>e</sup> rest, and doe willingly accepte of it. And though absente, shall willingly be at shuch charge as you & y<sup>e</sup> rest shall thinke meete." Sherley also was "contented to forbear" his part of the interest about to become due, and persuaded "M<sup>r</sup> Andrews and M<sup>r</sup> Beauchamp to doe y<sup>e</sup> like." †

said, merchants," by which "James Sherley, Goldsmith, & John Beachamp, Salter, citizens of London," were appointed their "true & lawful agents, factors, substitutes, & assignes" to receive all goods or merchandise sent to London or any part of England; "allso to vend, sell, barter," or exchange their wares according to the judgment of these agents, jointly or severally. They were to purchase supplies for New England; and to "demand for us & in our names all such debtes & sumes of money, as now are or hereafter shall be due . . . by any wayes or means; and to acquite, discharge, or compound" with any or all of the creditors. The bond was signed, November 28, 1628. This sweeping power of attorney was their undoing; or, as Bradford has it, — "some inconvenience grue therby afterward." Isaac Allerton retained his "authoritie under their hands & seals for y<sup>e</sup> transacting of y<sup>e</sup> former bussines, and taking up of moneys," etc.*

During his stay in London, Allerton obtained "a reasonable supply of goods for the plantation," at a less interest than before; he brought home an account of the beaver sold and how the money was disbursed for goods and the payment of debts; and, above all, he had made the first payment of £200 for the purchase, and "brought them y<sup>e</sup> bond for y<sup>e</sup> same cancelled; so as they now had no more foreine debtes but y<sup>e</sup> abovesaid 400<sup>li</sup> and odde pounds, and y<sup>e</sup> rest of y<sup>e</sup> yearly purchass monie."

Following instructions received before leaving Plymouth, he also brought (1628) a patent for a trading-place at Kennebeck. This was greatly desired at Plymouth, in order that they might control the trade at that point, and "shutte out" the planters from Piscataqua and "to the eastward," for the Pilgrims held that they "them selves had first begune and discovered the same [and] brought it to so good effecte." But the patent "was so strait and ill bounded, as they were faine to renew & inlarge it the next year." Yet they lost no time in taking possession of the land thus granted, and at once erected a fortified trading-house well up the river at the most convenient place for trade (now Augusta). This was provided with such commodities as the fishermen and Indians needed : coats, shirts, rugs, blankets, biscuit, pease, prunes, knives, hatchets, and wampum ; and a brisk trade for beaver was opened with the natives.

For several preceding years Isaac Allerton occasionally had brought over small quantities of goods, " upon his owne perticuler," to supply the pressing needs of the community. But this year (1628) he fetched a larger and more varied assortment than ever before, and this was construed as a direct interference with the trade of the Colony. It was claimed that Allerton's goods were " most vendible, and would yeeld present pay" before their own. He now commenced " to sell abroad to others of forine places, which . . . they began to dislike," says Bradford. Complaint also was made about the stowing of Allerton's latest cargo ; that their goods and his were so intermixed that " if any casualty had beefalne at sea, he might have laid y<sup>e</sup> whole [loss] on them, if he would ; for ther was no distinction. . . . Yet because love thinkes no evill . . . they tooke his faire words for excuse, and resolved to send him againe this year for England ; considering how well he had done y<sup>e</sup> former bussines, and what good acceptance he had with their freinds ther ; as also seeing sundry of their freinds from Leyden were sente for, which would or might be much furthered by his means." *

In August, 1629, the first company of the Pilgrims who had been left in Leyden reached Salem. They came on the Mayflower, William Peirce, Master, having left Holland in May. Bradford says there were " 35. persons," but Prince construes it thirty-five families. The second and last detachment left Holland the following March with the same master (Peirce), then in the Lion, who landed them near the end of May, 1630, at Charlestown. At the great charge of £550, "besids ther fetching hither from Salem & y<sup>e</sup> Bay" in a shallop, they had been shipped from Holland to England, and then to New England. When it is considered that those passengers were lacking clothing to the extent that it required "125. yeards of karsey, 127. ellons of linen cloath, shoes, 66. p<sup>r</sup>, with many other perticulers," to make them comfortable for the voyage, the charge does not appear so excessive.*

Allerton had been for three months, with Mr. Sherley, in Holland, making arrangements to convey these Pilgrims to New England. When they reached England, Allerton did his best to obtain the two patents that he had been commissioned to procure: a patent or charter for the Plymouth Colony, and a more satisfactory adjustment of the Kennebeck patent which they already held. Sherley afterwards wrote of this period:—

"But till our maine bussines, y<sup>e</sup> patent, was granted, I could not settle my mind nor pen to writing. M<sup>r</sup> Allerton was so turrmoyled about it, as verily I would not nor could not have undergone it, if I might have had a thousand pounds; but y<sup>e</sup> Lord so blessed his labours . . . as he obtained y<sup>e</sup> love & favore of great men in repute & place. He got granted from y<sup>e</sup> Earle of Warwick & S<sup>t</sup> Ferdinando Gorge all that M<sup>r</sup> Winslow desired in his letters to me, & more also, which I leave him to relate. Then he sued to y<sup>e</sup> king to confirme their grant, and to make you a corporation, and so to inable you to make & execute lawes, in such large & ample maner as y<sup>e</sup> Massachusett plantation hath it; which y<sup>e</sup> king graciously granted, refferring it to y<sup>e</sup> Lord Keeper to give order to y<sup>e</sup> solisiter to draw it up." The Lord Keeper furthered it all he could, also the solicitor, but when it reached the Lord Treasurer, "to have his warrante for freeing y<sup>e</sup> custume for a certaine time . . . he would not doe it, but reffered it to y<sup>e</sup> Counsell table. And ther M<sup>r</sup> Allerton atended day by day, when they sate, but could not gett his petition read."

* Bradford's History of Plimoth Plantation, 1898: 295-299; also New Haven Historical Papers, vol. 3: 102, 103.

Allerton finally was forced temporarily to abandon the whole matter, for Mr. Peirce was waiting with his passengers at Bristol. He left "y<sup>e</sup> further prosecuting of it to a solissiter," and sailed in the Lion with the last of the Pilgrims. Sherley concluded his letter with an attempt to pour oil upon the troubled waters; said there was no doubt that the patent would be granted, "but such things must work by degrees; men cannot hasten it as they would," and requested the return of Allerton by the first ship. This letter was dated March 19, 1629-30.

In 1630, Allerton again was despatched to England,— "though it was with some fear & jeolocie"—to complete negotiations for the patent. After months of patient endeavor, hampered by lack of adequate financial support, he was forced to abandon the effort, and this patent never was granted. But Allerton and the London partners, with the coöperation of Captain William Peirce, did obtain a patent of land on the Penobscot, now Castine.* After Allerton returned to Plymouth, in the summer of 1630, the Council for New England sent over a new patent, antedated January 13, 1629[-30]. This "Warwick patent" was from the Earl of Warwick to William Bradford, his "heirs, associates and assignes;" it fixed the bounds of the tract on the Kennebec; it also defined the boundary lines of the Plymouth Colony. Though it granted certain rights, it was not so favorable as the one abandoned, and complaint was made that it was not so liberal as the patent of Massachusetts Bay.† By securing these two patents (Kennebec and Penobscot), Allerton provided the desired opportunity for the Plymouth Colony to control trade and fishing along the coast of Maine. He also sent Edward Ashley from England as agent to manage the trade at Penobscot. This the Colonists resented; but later were induced to further the enterprise, and to send supplies to Ashley.*

To drive off all competitors in that region with the small boats then at Plymouth was impossible. Their little fleet consisted of "2. very good & strong shalops," built at Plymouth in 1624, one of which had been enlarged two years later by a "house carpenter," who "sawed her in y<sup>e</sup> midle" and added some five or six feet to her length, "and laid a deck on her." The third ship was a small pinnace built at Manamet (Sandwich), in 1627. No one of these was fit to cross the ocean, and Bradford mentions no other.† To carry on the work of the Colony, Allerton and the English partners, acting by their power of attorney, purchased the White Angel and hired the Friendship. The two ships were fitted out for the double purpose of trading with the Indians and "bass-fishing." Sherley and the others saw in these ships a means of being repaid for the losses they already had sustained, and, at the same time, of building up the interests of the Purchasers. The Colonists were preparing to trade on a scale for which such vessels would appear to be the first requisite. Although previously determined "to runne a high course and of great adventure," yet the knowledge that ships had been obtained without their consent brought "grief and astonishment" to William Bradford and his associates.‡

The Friendship was "sett out on fishing," but after eleven weeks' beating at sea, from foul weather, she was forced to turn back with her provisions "spente and spoyled." As the season was too far advanced for a renewal of the fishing venture, they sent her over at midsummer with goods to Massachusetts Bay. Timothy Hatherly, one of the London partners, had come over in her, but that did not prevent the general dissatisfaction "that this fishing ship should be set out, and freight with other men's goods, & scarce any of theirs." As for bass-fishing with the other ship, the White Angel, it was prophesied it "would certainly turn to loss. And for M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton to follow any trade for them, it was never in their thoughts." *

Besides all these querulous complaints, their debts had reached such large proportions that they were "strucken with some sadness aboute these things." Allerton had expended about £500 in his vain endeavor to obtain a more satisfactory patent for the Colony; they had "been to great charge" for the White Angel and Friendship; and, in all, the Purchasers found themselves owing £4770 : 19 : 02, besides £1000 still due for the purchase. Mr. Hatherly, who lately had been much associated with Allerton, did not escape censure. When it was demanded of him "how he should make this good . . . he tould them he was sent over as their agente, and had this order from them, that whatsoever he and M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton did togeather, they would stand to it; but they would not alow of what M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton did alone, except they liked it; but if he did it alone, they would not gain say it. Upon which they sould to him & M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton all y<sup>e</sup> rest of y<sup>e</sup> goods, and gave them present possession of them," and a writing to that effect.†

Meanwhile, Mr. Winslow had been sent to England with instructions "to see how y<sup>e</sup> squars wente," and if he found things unsatisfactory, "to discharge M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton for being any longer agent for them, or to deal any more in y<sup>e</sup> bussines." There is no record of such discharge; but Bradford rather spitefully wrote, in 1630, that "M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton followed his affaires, & returned [to England] with his White Angell, being no more imployed by y<sup>e</sup> plantation." ‡ A pronoun rarely is used with so great effect — his White Angel.

* Bradford's History of Plimoth Plantation, 1898 : 321, 189, 322, 323.

† Bradford's History of Plimoth Plantation, 1898 : 324, 325, 346.

‡ Bradford's History of Plimoth Plantation, 1898 : 319, 328.

Therein lay the gist of the trouble. When the storm of protest arose about the two new ships, "M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton tould them that y<sup>e</sup> ship Whit-Angele did not belong to them, nor their accounte, neither neede they have anything to doe with her, excepte they would. And M<sup>r</sup>. Hatherly confirmed y<sup>e</sup> same." Mr. Sherley and the other London partners disclaimed any responsibility for the purchase, from which Bradford and others deduced that from the first she "was not intended for y<sup>e</sup> plantation," but for Allerton's private gain.*

Mr. Winslow could not prevent Mr. Sherley and the other English partners "from putting both y<sup>e</sup> Friendship and Whit-Angell on y<sup>e</sup> generall accounte ; which caused continuall contention betweene them." This was explained in a letter from Mr. Sherley to Bradford and others, dated January 2, 1631[-32], in which he stated that the purpose of himself and friends was to keep the accounts of the two ships "for y<sup>e</sup> last year viages, on the generall accounte ;" but that they had now let the White Angel to Mr. Allerton "at 30<sup>li</sup> p<sup>r</sup> month, by charter-partie," and "bound him in a bond of a 1000<sup>li</sup> to performe covenants, and bring her back to London." Sherley also promised to send over Allerton's three books of accounts, or copies of them, — "one for y<sup>e</sup> company, another for Ashley's bussines, and y<sup>e</sup> third for y<sup>e</sup> Whit-Angell and Freidship. . . . The totall sume, as he hath put it, is 7103.17.1. Of this he hath expended, and given to M<sup>r</sup>. Vines & others, aboute 543<sup>li</sup> ode money." The sum of £7103 : 17 : 01 evidently was the full amount which had passed through the hands of Allerton, as agent. Bradford says : "Concerning M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton's accounts, they were so larg and entrecate, as they could not well understand them, much less examine & correcte them, without a great deale of time & help, and his owne presence, which was now hard to gett amongst them ; and it was 2. or 3.

years before they could bring them to any good pass, but never make them perfecte." *

Again, Bradford writing, it must be remembered, long afterwards, says under date of 1632, that Allerton had paid no hire for the White Angel; "he broke his bonds, kepte no covenante . . . nor was ever like to keep covenants," and their only redress was "a few catle & a litle land & some small maters he had here at Plimoth." † Bradford's memory was prejudiced; the Plymouth Colony Court records show that in January, 1633-34, Allerton's tax was the third largest in the Colony, and at the same time he again was chosen Assistant.

Early in the year 1631, Bradford wrote that, Mr. Allerton having been discharged, "their bussines began againe to rune in one chanell, and them selves better able to guide the same, Penobscote being wholly now at their disposing." Ashley had been sent back to England as a prisoner, for violating the terms of his bond; and Captain William Peirce, who "had a parte ther . . . was glad to have his money repaid him, and stand out." But their troubles did not cease.

At the beginning of their differences in 1629, the Purchasers had demanded of Sherley, and the other London partners, the return of their "comission," or power of attorney, which they refused to give up while "shuch great sumes" were owing them. Allerton was then appealed to, but he put them off from time to time, and never returned it. He considered that he had been unfairly used, and that his good name had been tarnished. He felt justified in withdrawing from the Colony. Yet, Bradford, under date of 1631, fretfully wrote that "M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton doth in a sorte wholly now deserte them; having brought them into y<sup>e</sup> briars, he leaves them to gett out as they can." ‡

Not only the partners criticised Allerton sharply, but the church censured him. In 1631, when he returned to Plymouth from one of his many voyages, "y<sup>e</sup> church caled him to account for . . . his grosse miscarriages; he confessed his faulte, and promised better walking, and that he would wind him selfe out of these courses as soone as he could, &c."*

Mr. Sherley, too, joined in the disaffection toward Allerton, whom he had at first praised so warmly. In 1631, he wrote: "Verily had he [Allerton] run on in that desperate and chargable course one year more, we had not been able to support him; nay, both he and we must have lyen in y<sup>e</sup> ditch, and sunck under y<sup>e</sup> burden." Two years later: "Oh the greefe & trouble y<sup>t</sup> man, M<sup>r</sup> Allerton, hath brought upon you and us! I cannot forgett it, and to thinke on it draws many a sigh from my harte, and teares from my eyes; . . . verily, at this time greefe hinders me to write, and tears will not suffer me to see." Still, Sherley himself did not escape censure from the Plymouth Colonists (1636-1641); and, in 1637, Mr. Beauchamp "sued him in y<sup>e</sup> Chancerie" for an accounting of money and goods sent over to Mr. Sherley, Mr. Andrews, and himself, in partnership.†

Although they found fault with Allerton, Plymouth Colony could not spare him. For several years he had been engaged in commercial pursuits at Marblehead, New Amsterdam, and elsewhere; but when an independent government was set up in January, 1633-34, the Colonists elected him Assistant, evidently as an inducement for his return. Still, the matter of the White Angel and Friendship was tossed to and fro with the regularity of a shuttlecock, "to y<sup>e</sup> great loss & vexation of y<sup>e</sup> plantation."‡ Three depositions taken in 1639 are of special interest because of their bearing in this matter: —

And further this deponent saith that afterwards divers losses falling out upon the said ship Friendship the said M<sup>r</sup> Hatherly and this deponent did in the behalf of themselves & the said M<sup>r</sup> Sherley M<sup>r</sup> Andrews & M<sup>r</sup> Beauchampe agree & undertake to discharge & save harmlesse all the rest of the said partners & purchasers of & from the said losses for two hundred pounds."

accounte of all ; and ther upon pressed him, as agente for y<sup>e</sup> partners in Neu-England, to accepte y<sup>e</sup> said ship Whit-Angell, and her accounte, into y<sup>e</sup> joynte partner-ship ; which he refused, for many reasons, and after received instructions from New-Engl: to refuse her if she should be offered, which instructions he shewed them ; and wheras he was often pressed to accept her, he ever refused, &c." *

Why there should have been such strong, unreasoning opposition to the White Angel and Friendship, on the part of the Plymouth people, is incomprehensible. To paralyze all operations for a time, as they did while indulging in their undignified quarrel, was most disastrous to their finances and to their credit abroad.

An agreement finally was concluded, on October 15, 1641, between James Sherley, John Beauchamp, and Richard Andrews, who were represented through power of attorney by Mr. John Atwood, of Plymouth, "with y<sup>e</sup> advice & consente of William Collier, of Duxborrow," and "William Bradford, Edward Winslow, &c., in y<sup>e</sup> presence of Edmond Freeman, William Thomas, William Pady, [and] Nathaniel Souther." The agreement stipulated first, that there should be "an absolute end" to the former partnership. With the aid of their present book-keeper, Josias Winslow, they estimated their assets, including housing, boats, bark, implements, and commodities, as "1400 <sup>li</sup> or ther aboute." Upon this basis, "William Bradford, Edward Winslow, &c.," were "bound in the sum of 2400 <sup>li</sup> for paymente of 1200 <sup>li</sup> in full satisfaction of all demands ;" the "bond of 2400 <sup>li</sup> to be deposited into y<sup>e</sup> hands of y<sup>e</sup> said John Attwode." The agreement was given into the care of the Rev. Mr. Reyner, teacher of the Plymouth Church.†

The individual claims of the three English partners were: Sherley, £150; Andrews, £544; and Beauchamp, £400. Andrews charged the two others with defrauding Plymouth; "he believed nothing due Sherley, nor more than £150 to Beauchamp." To protect himself, Andrews returned the land which had been granted him by the Plymouth Colony, and gave his claim of £544 to Massachusetts Bay, "which very promptly exacted the last penny from Plymouth." This claim was paid at once. Sherley, "the chief Shylock," as Goodwin calls him, also received his money and signed a release, June 2, 1642;* but with Beauchamp "matters dragged provokingly." In 1645, he received £210 : 10, in sundry houses and lands from Bradford, Prentice, Standish, Alden, and Winslow; finally, in March, 1646, a settlement was completed, and "the Pilgrim Republic for the first time enjoyed the luxury of owing no man anything."†

Winslow and the others, having voluntarily surrendered their property to free the Colony from indebtedness, tried in vain to get Allerton to adjust his accounts. Had Allerton forced his private claims in Plymouth, he would have been better prepared to meet his obligations to the Colony. The probate files of Plymouth County show that many estates were indebted to him. Of those who died in the epidemic of 1633, Godbert Godbertson, Richard Lanckford, John Thorp, and Francis Eaton owed him respectively, £75 : 10 : 03, [        ], £9 : 04 : 04, £105 : 00 : 00. In 1643, there was due to Allerton from the estate of John Atwood, £14 : 17 : 08.‡

At length, being pressed by the Plymouth Colony Court for a settlement, upon a motion made by his son-in-law, Thomas Cushman, March 3, 1645, Mr. Allerton was "allowed a years tyme for recoūing his debts in this goūment, vpon books and papers." § Two weeks later (March 16), it is re-

On March 10, 1652, Mr. Edmond Freeman, of Sandwich, brother-in-law of John Beauchamp, together with William Paddy, whom Beauchamp in a letter called "Loveing Cozen," requested of Governor Bradford that they might have the estate of Mr. Beauchamp "recorded in the courte booke," as they held "Letters of Attorney," and were about "to make Return to England [of] all the estate of M<sup>r</sup> Beachampe." This list embraced "M<sup>r</sup> Bradfords land at Secunke . . . M<sup>r</sup> Winslows house at Plymouth . . . M<sup>r</sup> Prences house at Plymouth and five acres of land at second brooke . . . From the time the Purchasers began to find fault with Allerton, Plymouth had little of his presence. Bradford says: "so in y<sup>e</sup> end removed, as he had allready his person, all his from hence." ‡ It is uncertain when he left Plymouth. His deposition concerning the two ships proves that he retained his citizenship as late as 1639, though most of his time was spent at sea, or looking after his varied interests. As all matters of trust had been taken from him, and he was no longer their agent, he naturally turned to his own affairs and made the most of every opportunity.

It was when he went to England in the fall of 1630, in the White Angel, that he hired the same ship from Mr. Sherley for £30 a month, and fitted her out for commercial purposes of his own. Early in the spring of 1631, he set forth. His passage was perilous in the extreme, from the fact that the ship was overladen and her cargo badly stowed, and that the crew was a roistering set of fellows, who proved troublesome. Allerton was forced to put into Milford Haven, where the cargo was "new-stowed;" thence he proceeded to the coast of Maine. By reason of the delay, he was late for the fishing season, so he "sells [his] trading comodities to any y<sup>t</sup> will buy, to y<sup>e</sup> great prejudice of y<sup>e</sup> plantation here," says Bradford; "but that which is worse, what he could not sell, he trusts." He ran "into every hole, & into y<sup>e</sup> river of Kenebeck, to gleane away y<sup>e</sup> trade from y<sup>e</sup> house ther," continues the same author, "and sets up a trading house beyoned Penobscote, to cute of [cut off] y<sup>e</sup> trade from thence also."*

Whether this new trading-post at Machias (Indian name Mechisses) was opened at the "instigation" of the English partners, as claimed, or by Sir Richard Vines and Allerton, certainly no one was better fitted to carry it on than the latter. The result of this venture is concisely given by Governor John Winthrop: —

"[November, 1633] News of the taking of Machias by the French. Mr. Allerton of Plimoth, and some others, had set up a trading wigwam there, and left in it five men and store of commodities. La Tour, governor of the French in those parts, making claim to the place, came to displant them, and, finding resistance, killed two of the men, and carried away the other three, and the goods." The trading-house was burned.

La Tour, at that time Governor of Nova Scotia, was but protecting his own, for the French then claimed all the land east of the Penobscot River, and not until 1782 were the eastern boundaries of what is now the State of Maine fully defined. Early in the spring of 1634-35, "Mr. Allerton" went in his pinnace to Port Royal to fetch the men who had been taken from his trading-camp at Machias, and to demand his goods or their equivalent. La Tour told him that "he took them as lawful prize," and that if Allerton or any other English "traded to the east of Pemaquid, he would make prize of them. Being desired to show his commission, he answered that his sword was commission sufficient." Nine years later (1643), in a review of this matter before the Governor, it was stated that goods to the value of £500 had been taken at Machias, and that the seizure had been due to the violation of a tacit agreement between "Mr. Vines, of Saco, who was part owner of the goods and principal trader," and La Tour.*

The summer after La Tour's occupation of Machias, that is, in 1635, the French, by a ruse, surprised and took possession of the Pilgrims' trading-post which had been established by Ashley at "Biguyduce" (called by the Indians Matchebiguatus, and later by the whites Majorbagaduce), now Castine. While all the trading commodities were kept by the French, the men were allowed to "have their shalop and some victualls to bring them home." †

The records of Maine give proof of Allerton's association with Sir Ferdinando Gorges, and with Sir Richard Vines, other than at Machias. June 25, 1630, "Mr Isaacke Allerton, Capt. Thomas Wiggin, Mr Thomas Purchase," and three others, were witnesses to possession taken by "John Ouldham and Richard Vines Gentlemen," of land at "Swackadock," between Cape Elizabeth and Cape Porpus, now Biddeford, Maine. Their patent from "Ro: Warwicke Ed: Gorges fferd: Gorges & Tho: Smith," who constituted the "Councell for New England," was dated February 12, 1629. ‡ Allerton also witnessed, July 21, 1632, a memorandum that John Winter, attorney for "Robert Trelawny and Moses Goodyear," accepted for them of Richard Vines a tract of land extending from Cammock's patent at Black Poynt "along the sea-coast eastward." July 30, following, Allerton witnessed that possession was given to John Winter of the same land, by Vines.§

On January 27, 1636-37, "Sir Fardinando Gorges," for £100, granted to George Cleeves and Richard Tucker, of Casco Bay, a patent of that portion of the land at "Machegonne . . . to the Falls of Pesumpsca [Pesumpscott] . . .

They were then to deliver the same "vnto the say<sup>d</sup> Geo: Cleeve, and Richard Tucker, they<sup>re</sup> heyres and assigns, according to ye . . . true meaning of these P'sents." *

That Allerton also was well known in other parts of Maine is shown by a letter from William Hilton, dated Piscataqua, April 18, 1633, which says, "one Richard Foxwell . . . bringeth nuse . . . he heard from Mr. Alerton whoe was making ready at Bristol for to come to this cuntry." †

Another venture of Allerton's was located at Marblehead, in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. About 1631 or 1632, with Moses Maverick, afterwards his son-in-law, he established the headquarters of his fishing-fleet at Marble Harbor, set off from Salem in 1649 as the town of Marblehead. Here he built a warehouse, with stages for curing fish. In the spring of 1633-34, Winthrop says that Allerton, that season, "fished [here] with eight boats," while "seventeen fishing ships were come to Richman's Isle and the Isles of Shoals," off the coast of Maine. It probably was with reference to this business of Allerton's that in April, 1633, the Massachusetts Bay Court ordered: "That if any swine shall in fishing time, come within a quarter of a myle of the stage at Marble-Harbor, they shalbe forfeited to the owners of sd stage, & soe for all other stadges within their lymitts."

On February 1, 1634, Matthew Cradock's* house at Marblehead was "burnt down about midnight . . . there being then in it Mr. Allerton, and many fisherman, whom he employed that season." The fire was discovered by a "tailor who sate up that night at work in the house, and, hearing a noise, looked out and saw the house on fire above the oven in the thatch." No one was injured, and "most of his goods therein" were saved.†

The period of Allerton's residence at Marblehead was a time of misfortune. Every undertaking resulted in loss. In Bradford's opinion it was a direct judgment upon him for his "evil courses," and "God crost him mightily." Besides the failure of his trading-camp at Machias and the burning of the house at Marblehead, a pinnacle which he had sent on a trading voyage to France was lost with its entire cargo. To add to his troubles, on March 4, 1634-35, the Court of Massachusetts Bay "agreed, that Mr Allerton shalbe sent for, by pcess, to the nexte Court of Assistants, to the intent that hee may vnderstand the desire of the country for his removall from Marble Harbor, & soe to be enioyned to be att the ñexte Genall Court, or otherwise to be dealt withall, as the p̄ticular Courte shall thinke meete." The steps taken to accomplish Allerton's removal must have been summary, for on May 6 (1635) it is recorded in a "Memorand : " of the Court, "that Mr Ollerton hath giuen to Moses Mañacke, his soñe in lawe, all his howses, buildings, & stages, that hee hath att Marble Head, to enioy to him & his heires for euer." ‡

* "Mr Allerton of New Plymouth" had been entrusted, in November, 1628, with a letter from Matthew Cradock (first Governor of Massachusetts Bay, though he never came over) to John Endicott, at Salem, stating that he proposed sending over two or three hundred persons and one hundred head of cattle, and requesting that "convenient howsing" be speedily prepared for them. This anticipated the coming of Winthrop's fleet. (Massachusetts Bay Colony Records, vol. 1 : 383.)

† Winthrop's History of New England, Savage's Edition, 1853, vol. 1 : 148, 147.

‡ Massachusetts Bay Colony Records, vol. 1 : 140, 147.

Allerton is said to have departed then ; but he evidently retained some interest at that place, as at Plymouth, since, in June, 1642, his "servant" or clerk, Thomas Bryant, who had been "imprisoned neare 2. months, was discharged from prison without whipping, and sent to Mr Moses Mavericke to be employed for his master." * Isaac Allerton shared in the division of pasturage to the forty-four families of Marblehead, December 22, 1648; he was allowed shares for two cows and Moses Maverick for three.† Allerton joined the First Church of Salem, of which Marblehead was then a part, in 1647. Felt's list of members ‡ gives his name thus : "1647 — Isaac Allerton, † 1639," — the mark before the second year denoting that he was a resident that year or prior to it. A later hand has added "1634," which probably is correct.

On August 16, 1635, "a mighty storm of wind and rain" visited the New England coast, demolishing houses, uprooting trees, and causing great damage to shipping. Bradford adds that "the moone suffered a great eclips the 2. night after it." In the same tempest a bark, sailing from Ipswich to Marblehead, "was cast away upon Cape Ann, and twenty-one persons drowned." Among the lost were the Rev. Mr. Avery, his wife, and six small children, who were emigrating to Marblehead. The only ones saved were Mr. Thacher (cousin to Mr. Avery) and his wife, who were cast on shore; he, after "a quarter of an hour beaten up and down by the waves, not being able to swim one stroke; and his wife sitting in the scuttle of the bark, the deck was broke off, and brought on shore, as she stuck in it." A powder-horn and a bag of flint, a goat, a cheese, some bedding, and other necessities, also were washed ashore; which enabled them to subsist until they were taken off the island, three days later.§

The reef upon which they struck has since been known as Avery's Woe, and the spot upon which they landed, as Thacher's Island. It was Allerton who sent for Parson Avery to minister to them at Marblehead, since the Salem church was so far away that the large group of fishermen employed, described as "something loose and remiss in their behavior," rarely attended those services.* It also was Allerton's ill-fated bark which was dashed against the rocks, and was lost. The impulse which he gave to the fishing-trade at that point, of which he may justly be called the founder, has extended from generation to generation to this day. At this moment, the finest building for business purposes in the ancient town is called "Allerton Block."

The following March, 1635-36, while returning from a trading-voyage to Penobscot, Allerton came near losing another bark. She "was cast upon an island, and beat out her keel, and so lay ten days; yet he gave help from Pemaquid, and mended her, and brought her home." In the winter of 1644-45, he was shipwrecked at Scituate, with his third wife, Joanna, and some others, in a northeast storm of great violence "with much snow;" but all were saved.†

The differences between the Massachusetts Bay Colony and Isaac Allerton, at the time of his residence in Marblehead, are vaguely suspected to have been the outgrowth of Allerton's championship of Roger Williams and his peculiar religious belief; however that may be, his earlier relations with the Bay Colony were pleasant. Allerton was enabled to assist the new settlement at Boston very materially. He and Captain Peirce were the first to greet John Winthrop, on the Arbella, as she neared the port of "Nahumkeck," now Salem, June 12, 1630. Sailing by on a voyage to Pemaquid in his shallop, Allerton met the Arbella, and went aboard to welcome Winthrop and his company to the New World.

The first letter of Winthrop to his son in England, dated "Charlton [Charlestown] July 23, 1630," says: "We are forced to send to Bristowe for supply of provisions, by Mr. Peirce and Mr. Allerton, for which I have given them a bill of exchange. You must needs take order, the money may be provided presently for them, for they can't stay." * November 18, following, Captain Peirce wrote to John Winthrop, Jr., still in England: "my ship is so full y<sup>t</sup> I cannot take in what I would & should; but M<sup>r</sup> Allertown hath a ship to depart from Barnstable very shortly, vnto y<sup>e</sup> w<sup>ch</sup> we can send away what I cannot take in." † Winthrop, in June, 1631, mentions letters from Barnstable brought "out of the White Angel (which was lately arrived at Sauco). She brought [ ] cows, goats, and hogs, and many provisions for the bay and for Plimoth." When the White Angel sailed into the Bay, July 22, following, she landed twenty-one heifers and a store of supplies at Boston. On her way to Plymouth she ran aground "near Gurnett's Nose," but got off and proceeded on her way. Winthrop adds that "Mr. Allerton returned in this ship" to England. From another letter of Winthrop's it appears that the trading venture in March, 1635-36, when Allerton's bark was cast upon the rocks near Pemaquid and "beat out her keel," brought misfortune to him also. Owing to the disaster, "Mr. Mayhew and he [Allerton] could get but little provisions, and at extreme rates, but six hogsheads of bread, and a few peas. . . . Some pork they brought, but so lean as I have not seen the like salted." ‡

* The above autograph of the Rev. John White, of Dorchester, England, is pronounced genuine by Mrs. Frances Rose-Troup, of Ottery St. Mary, Devon, England, who has been engaged for nearly twenty years in writing the life of that reverend gentleman.

This bill, accompanying the petition of Isaac Allerton for its payment, evidently is a copy of an account originally presented to Governor Winthrop, who ordered the supplies. From the petition to Governor Dudley, which is without date, and the endorsement of the Rev. John White, in 1640, it is apparent that at that late date the amount of £49 : 12 remained unpaid.

While yet a citizen of Plymouth, Allerton had extended his operations eastward along the entire coast. He had a residence and warehouse at Marblehead, and was well known in Boston. At the same time he established business relations in New Amsterdam (the present city of New York) and New Haven, with a home in each place. He also acquired large interests at Delaware Bay and Virginia. In proof that the confidence reposed in Allerton by his business associates in Massachusetts Bay and elsewhere still continued, the following abstracts of "powers of attorney" are given from the records of Thomas Lechford and William Aspinwall, notaries of Boston, and other sources :—

March 29, 1639 : "Thomas Beech now remayning att the Dutch Plantation" was indebted to "Peter Garland of New England Mariner" the sum of £33 : 04 : 06, and other debts which he had been intrusted "to take up" amounting to £6 : 03 : 09. By letter of attorney Peter Garland appointed "my trusty ffriend Isaacke Allerton of New England mariner my lawful Attorney" to collect these amounts.*

tobacco-planters.”* There is hardly sufficient evidence to show that he actually raised tobacco there, but he may have done so; he certainly was a large dealer in it. Much of the arable land at Manhattan was devoted to the raising of that crop, which was considered “not much inferior” to the tobacco exported from Virginia. Allerton early saw that dealing in tobacco was remunerative, and he built a warehouse on the shore of the East River for its storage.

On May 19, 1643, Albert Cuyne conveyed by deed “a house and two lots,” at New Amsterdam, to Isaac Allerton and Govert Loockerman; † and within a month (June 2), Allerton and Loockerman received a grant of land in New Amsterdam from the West India Company, of Amsterdam, Holland. The later grant consisted of “two lots on the east side of the Great Highway [Broadway] on the island of Manhattan, containing 160 rods, 9 ft., 2 in.,” running back to the marshes. ‡ It may have been intended as a site for a warehouse, but probably was not used for that purpose, since it was sold later by the above grantees. The land upon which Isaac Allerton built his warehouse, “a capacious two-story building,” included in “Allerton’s Buildings,” he purchased, April 10, 1647, from Philip de Truy. It was a triangular lot, a few feet in width at the southern end, but broadening to the width of more than five hundred feet of water frontage on East River. The little haven upon which it abutted, long ago filled in, forms the modern Peck Slip; the site of the warehouse very nearly corresponds to numbers “8 and 10 Peck Slip,” of to-day. § The “Duke’s Plan” of New York, 1661, represents “Allerton’s Buildings” on the East River, outside of the city limits, just south of the "Passage Place" to Long Island; and the same is given on "Nicoll's Map," 1664-1668.*

There is good reason to believe that a picture of the old warehouse and residence of Isaac Allerton is shown in one of a series of sketches made, in 1679, by the Labbadist missionaries, Danker and Sluyter, taken from a boat upon the waters of the rivers and bay. The sketch shows a little bay or cove that has been filled in to make the present Peck Slip. On the lower side is a wharf, on which stands two large, two-story buildings, connected by a shed. There is little doubt that they represent "Allerton's Buildings" as shown on the various maps.†

An ordinance passed by the Director-General of the Council of New Amsterdam, in 1650, also indicates Allerton's location. Fort Amsterdam was being repaired, for "this decayed fortress, formerly in fair condition, has mostly been trodden down" by cattle; the inhabitants were warned "not to allow hogs, sheep, goats, horses or cows to run free between the Fort, the Company's Bouwery at the end of the Heeren Way [Broadway] now tenanted by Thomas Hall, and the [ware]house of Master Isaac Allerton, with out herder or driver," under penalty of a "fine of 6 fl [florins]." ‡

In 1654, Allerton's Building was hired by the burgomasters for the temporary reception of fifty boys and girls who had been brought over from the almshouse in Amsterdam, to be "bound out." When the Indians surprised the settlement on Manhattan Island, September 15, 1655, in the absence of the Director-General Stuyvesant and his soldiers, they commenced their work of violence at this warehouse. They numbered five or six hundred, but fortunately the guns of a Dutch ship in the East River were brought to bear upon them, which frightened them off before any serious damage was done. In 1656, George Woolsey,* who then lived in the house, obtained permission "to keep tavern;" at the same time he requested "to be allowed to tap" there, but was refused. Later, a license to "sell beer and wine" was granted. This old warehouse, which, during Allerton's life, was the resort of most of the English doing business in New Amsterdam, towards the close of the seventeenth century passed into the possession of the Beekman family, who owned property on the opposite side of the street. It has since been demolished.

In the summer of 1643, an Indian uprising began at New Amsterdam. The exciting cause was the killing of "an old Dutchman" by a drunken Indian. The people called upon Director Kieft to apprehend the murderer, but he "thought it not just, or not safe," so put them off. While the matter was pending, the Mohawks, "either upon their own quarrel, or rather, as report went, being set on by the Dutch," surprised some of the friendly Indians near the Dutch and killed about thirty of them. A Dutch captain, with the consent of Kieft, retaliated by slaying "about 70 or 80 men, women and children." Upon this the Indians burned the settlers' farmhouses, slew or carried off their cattle, and "killed all they could meet with." The trouble extended from the mainland to Long Island, until the Dutch were "pressed so hard" that they were forced to call the English to their aid.†

At the request of Director Kieft, the "Commonality of

* As early as 1646, George Woolsey was called servant to Isaac Allerton, that term then being synonymous with clerk or agent. He continued his relations with Allerton probably until the death of the latter in 1659. In December, 1647, Woolsey married Rebecca Cornell. Among his many distinguished descendants was Theodore D. Woolsey, president of Yale College from 1846 to 1871.

the Manhattas" elected, September 13, 1643, eight selectmen as Council in the emergency. These "Men of Eight," as they were termed, consisted of:—

"Joachim Pietersen [Kuyter]	Isaac Allerton
Jan Damen	Thomas Hal [Hall]
Barent Dirksen	Gerrit Wolphertsen
Abraham Pietersen	Cornlius Melyn" *

As it was stipulated that any person then chosen could be rejected, Jan Damen was excluded, and Jan Evertsen Bout was put in his place.

"The Eight Men" immediately drew up a letter of complaint to the "Assembly . . . of the General Incorporated West India Company at the Chamber in Amsterdam," stating the details of the Indian uprising which had devastated the country so that the "few settlers remaining were defenceless and starving." Then followed an urgent appeal for help, signed by:—

"Cornelius Melyn	Gerrit Wolphersen
Abraham Pietersen	Isaac Allerton
Thomas Hal [Hall]	Jan Evertse Bout
Barent Dirksen	Jochem Pietersen [Kuyter]

Done Manahatas this 24th October

"Captaine John Underhill and Mr. Allerton" were despatched immediately to New Haven for assistance. Their "proposition," presented to the General Court held at New Haven, October 27, 1643, was a request for one hundred soldiers, "armed and victualled, to be led forth by Captaine Underhill against the Indians now in hostility." The Court decided that the soldiers could not be sent without the consent of the United Commissioners, for fear of involving the Colonies in a general Indian war; nevertheless, if corn and provisions were needed, the Court resolved to give the Dutch all the assistance in its power.*

In November following, the "Eight Men" sent an elaborate "Memorial" to the "Noble, High and Mighty Lords . . . of the United Netherland Provinces," praying for speedy assistance or they would be obliged to betake themselves and families "to the English at the East, who would like nothing better than to possess this place." This was signed:—

"Cornelius Melyn	Jan Evertse Boudt
Tomas Hal [Hall]	Gerrit Wolphertse
Isak Allerton	Barent Dirckse
Abraham Peiterse	Jochem Pieterse Kuyter

Dated Manhatan, in New Netherland, this 3<sup>d</sup> November, 1643; Stil: Romo."†

On October 28, 1644, the "Eight Men" sent a letter to Amsterdam, charging Director Kieft with malfeasance in office and inciting the recent Indian war, and requesting his removal. Isaac Allerton's signature was second in the eight. Their efforts eventually were rewarded by the arrival, in May, 1647, of Peter Stuyvesant, who was sent over as Director-General to supplant Kieft. Within a few days after Kieft had been removed from his office, Cornelius Melyn and Jochem Pietersen Kuyter, as representatives of the "Eight Men," brought a formal complaint of ten charges against the former Director Kieft, which had been circulated for signatures by Isaac Allerton and Jacob Stoffelse. In a letter, dated June 18, 1647, Kieft says that the charges are lies, and that Allerton and Stoffelse have cheated the people and abused the "Lords Patroons." Yet Allerton and Stoffelse escaped punishment, though the "Eight Men" were prosecuted by the Fiscal, while Kuyter and Melyn were banished.‡

Isaac Allerton was a burgher or freeman in New Amsterdam, though his name does not appear in the first list, dated April, 1657. The "Burgher Right" was not established until January 23, 1657. On March 9, following, in a statement of taxes, assessed by the "Burgomaster and Schepens" in October, 1655, but now overdue, and ordered to be collected by the Court Messenger, Allerton's tax was sixty florins. Of the sixty or more persons named in the list, but five were taxed a larger amount. In November, 1656, he said of himself that he "is a Burgher here." *

The miscellaneous services of Allerton in New Amsterdam extended over a long period, and, as recorded in the Registers of the Provincial Secretary, were notable. The first group of extracts refers chiefly to business entrusted to him by others :—

1639 (entered before May 18): Note from George Homs (Holmes) to John Jenney, for "sixty carolus guilders," with receipt of Isaac Allerton for the same, dated December 29 (1638?). September 7, 1642, John Jenney gave Isaac Allerton a power of attorney to collect other money due him. In December, 1639, John "Celes" gave to Allerton power of attorney to collect money due him from George Spencer. In 1645, Jan Evertson Bout and Jan Jansen Damen empowered Allerton to sell the ship St. Peter in New England. June 6, 1647, certain men gave Allerton power of attorney "to sell horses on their account in Virginia." In September of that year, Allerton himself gave power of attorney to John Ogden and Richard "Cloff" to collect his debts; in March, 1648, he gave the same to Johannes Verbrugge to collect money from Captain Francis Aerly, Jr., of Virginia.

April 27, 1641: Note of Nanne Beets to Isaac Allerton "for 755 guilders 13 stivers;" May 29, following, a bond from Allerton as guardian of Eva, daughter to Nanne Beets. July 25, 1644, a mortgage was recorded from Jannitje, wife of Thomas Broen, to Isaac Allerton of a house on the island of Manhattan, near Fort Amsterdam. Isaac Allerton registered in Court as referee, December 12, 1642. In November, 1644, he was referee with Captain John Underhill in a case of difference between "M<sup>r</sup> Moor" and Mr. Wedderly respecting a bark. In Court Proceedings, January 22, 1643, the case of John Brint, cooper, vs. Mr. Heyl was referred to Mr. Allerton and Thomas Baxter for settlement. In 1645, Allerton was a referee in a case of violation of contract in trading.*

August 14, 1647, Isaac Allerton signed a bond as security for a debt due from John Wilcox; September 23, 1648, he was security for Nicholas Hart. Thomas Adams and Isaac Allerton gave a bond, June 8, 1654, for the delivery of 3000 pounds of tobacco to Director Stuyvesant. Thomas Adams and Edward Bushell, of "Haccomacco," Virginia, gave a bond to Isaac Allerton June 9, 1654, to indemnify him for any loss he might suffer as their security. Thomas "More," of New Haven, and Isaac Allerton, Sr., gave bond to Jan Jansen, of St. Obyn, to restore a certain bark stolen by Thomas Baxter, and sold to said "More." Declaration was made by Isaac Allerton, of Suffolk, October, 1655, that he had paid the amount of a bond that he had given for "Ralph Whory," a leather-dresser, of Charlestown.† December 6, 1655, Isaac Allerton, "the elder," gave a bond for "Grinfil Lerben," captain of the ship Charles, about to sail for Curaçao. Clearance was given, on the same date, to Isaac Allerton for the ship Charles, "Greenfield Lerben," commander, to sail to the "Curaçao islands" for salt and horses.‡

The second group of extracts gives his dealings in connection with ships and cargoes:—

† At several different periods, Isaac Allerton is mentioned as "of Suffolk;" yet in 1639, and again in 1640, Governor Winthrop certifies "that Isaacke Allerton merchant hath no visible estate reall or personall heere in this Jurisdiction or Country for the present to my knowledge and yet I am well acquainted wth him & his trade & dealings in this Country." (Lechford's Note-Book: 189, 378.)

Isaac Allerton, in January, 1642, sold the yacht Hope to Govert Loockerman. November 17, 1644, he gave a note in favor of the owners of La Garce for "500 guilders," a balance due for sugar. January 18, 1644, he gave another note to the owners of La Garce "for 3773 guilders," also for sugar. May 31, 1647, Isaac Allerton, of New Amsterdam, and Thomas Willett, of New Plymouth, were securities on a bill of sale of the ship Amandare, from Peter Stuyvesant, to go to Boston. A transfer was made, September 21, 1647, by Thomas Baxter to Isaac Allerton, of his share of a certain sloop. The certified copy of a receipt given by Isaac Allerton and others, agents of "Augustyn Herrmann," dated December 14, 1650, was for sundries delivered to them by Governor John "Prins" (Governor Prince, of Delaware Bay) on said Herrmann's account. Power of attorney was given, May 12, 1651, by Augustyn Herrmann to Isaac Allerton, to collect beavers from Governor "Prins." In September, 1652, "Carel Gabry" sued George Woolsey for payment of cordage sold to Governor "Printz," in the South River (Delaware), by Augustyn Herrmann, for which Isaac Allerton was security. March 29, 1656, intelligence was brought by Isaac Allerton's ketch that a Swedish ship, called the Mercury, had arrived at the South River, and order was given not to allow the Swedes to land.*

On August 16, 1646, Captain John Underhill † brought suit, in New Amsterdam, against Isaac Allerton; alleging that, before the plaintiff came there, Allerton had promised him that the commonalty (of New Amsterdam) would pay him higher wages than he could get from the New Haven company. The defendant denied ever having made such a promise, and demanded proof. Underhill promised in Court that the defendant should not be troubled again by himself or his heirs on this subject.*

† In July, 1642, Captain Underhill, whose early training had been wholly military, finding no employment in Boston "that would maintain him and his family," resolved to go to the Dutch,—"he speaking the Dutch tongue and his wife a Dutch woman." The church in Boston gave him leave to depart to Stamford, Conn., and provided a pinnace to transport him; but "when he came there he changed his mind, or at least his course, and went to the Dutch." (Winthrop, vol. 2: 76.) From the above it appears that Allerton was instrumental in Underhill's removal to New Amsterdam. His last years were spent at Oyster Bay, Long Island.

The Court Minutes of New Amsterdam abound in references to Isaac Allerton, his house, his servants, and his affairs. He seems to have been in great demand as security or bail for others; and, in a suit brought by "Robbert Pas-sele" against "Skipper Igsiter," in 1658, for wages earned as seaman, the skipper requested the services of "M<sup>r</sup> Allerton as interpreter," who appeared in Court.†

In November, 1656, William Beekman, of New Amsterdam, brought suit against Isaac Allerton, Sr., for the payment of the balance of a note due thirty days after the arrival of the ships from Patria, the amount being "fl. 952," with costs and damages. Allerton acknowledged the debt, but requested a delay of "3 months as he is a Burgher here," on paying interest. At the end of that time he paid. In 1658, the Court declared an attachment of Thomas Hall's tobacco by Allerton invalid, "inasmuch as his [Hall's] goods are not liable to arrest, according to the privilege of the city of Amsterdam, [he] having a house & lot here & keeping fixum domicilium."‡

About this time (1658), Allerton was somewhat embarrassed financially. He had reached the age of seventy-two years, and was beginning to feel the effects of his strenuous life. In July, he appeared before D. Van Schelluyne, notary at "Breuckelen" (Brooklyn), acknowledging that he owed Cornelis Schutt a balance of purchase-money for Virginia tobacco, "amounting to 1757 guilders." To meet this obligation, he mortgaged two mares with their foals, four cows, and, further, his house and farm on the South River near

"fort Neuwer Amstel" (Delaware Bay), occupied by Jan Jansz Van Cranenburgh. In September, following, he mortgaged his ketch called "Willem en Jan" (William and John), to meet a note of "1392 guilders, 12 stivers," dated November 14, 1656, which he had given Joannes Pietersz Verbrugge.*

Though at that time a resident of New Amsterdam, Allerton probably was one of the earliest promoters of the settlement at Delaware Bay. George Lamberton, of New Haven, a friend of Allerton's, while on a trading voyage to Virginia in his bark The Cock, discovered that there was a brisk fur trade with the Indians along the Delaware. This was in the fall and winter of 1638-39.† A company was at once formed, comprising, among others, Governor Theophilus Eaton, the Rev. John Davenport, pastor of the church, Deacon Robert Newman, and Captain Nathaniel Turner. August 30, 1641, a town-meeting was held at New Haven "which voted to itself authority over the region of Delaware Bay," and the acts of the Delaware Company were approved. Some fifty families already had removed to the Bay and settled in a plantation on Varkin's Kill, now Salem, New Jersey. A fortified trading-house was built or occupied at Passayunk (Philadelphia). The Swedes also had established themselves nearby on the same territory, calling it New Sweden, and the fort which they had erected, Fort Christina. John Printz, or Prince, was their governor.‡

The next year, 1642, the Dutch, fearing further encroachments upon what they considered their territory, "resolved to drive the insolent English away." They burned their trading-houses, imprisoned Lamberton and several other Englishmen, seized goods and did damage to the extent of £1000, sterling. The Swedes made common cause with the Dutch against the English. Lamberton was tried at Fort

Christina, July 10, 1643, by a "court of ten persons, among whom no English name appears." He showed that the English had purchased the land at Varkin's Kill, two years before, from a chief representing the sachem of all that country. Governor Printz produced testimony to prove that Peter Hollander, their agent, had bought all the country thereabouts from the head sachem himself, three days before Lamberton's bargain. "The court concluded that the English were trespassers, and that Lamberton must pay double duty on his beaver."

The difficulties arising from this triple occupation of the same territory led the United Colonies to open a commission to examine their claims, and if possible secure a peaceful solution of present disagreements. The members of this body, probably the first "Mixed Commission" ever convened on this continent, were selected from the Swedish, Dutch, and English nations. The examination is supposed to have taken place in the Swedish fort, and a degree of harmony resulted from it which was fairly satisfactory to the United Colonies. The questions and answers were long and tedious. A translation of the Dutch copy, dated "Anno 1644 Jan 16," certifies that: "The vnderwritten examination was vpon the letters of the governor of New-england to the governor of New Sweden. it was taken vpon oath in the p<sup>r</sup>sence of

The English settlers remaining at Delaware Bay, when their cup of misery seemed full from loss of homes, stores, vessels, and trade, were further reduced by "a sickness which fell upon them." But the poverty and distress were not confined to those who had risked their persons in the enterprise. The leading families in New Haven suffered severely, and the town's financial strength was crippled. But they did not despair. In 1650, the matter of colonization at Delaware Bay was reopened, at a town-meeting, with the result that another party set sail for the Delaware; this time, armed with a commission from Governor Eaton. The expedition was intercepted at Manhattan by Governor Stuyvesant, who confiscated the commission, imprisoned many of the colonists, and released them only under condition of an immediate return to New Haven. At this juncture, New Haven asked assistance from Plymouth "to plant a united colony at Delaware;" but Plymouth refused. The United Colonies were appealed to with a like result; and the Dutch remained masters of the situation.*

In July, 1651, a military force under Stuyvesant was stationed on the Delaware River, at Raccoon Creek, near Fort Christina, for the purpose of opposing the Swedish settlement. A conference was held with the Indians, who pretended they had sold no lands to the Swedes except the site of Fort Christina. This was reduced to writing; and, upon requisition of Director-General "Petrus Stuyvesant," was certified to, July 9 (new style), by "Wilhelmus Grasmeer, V. D. M. Cornelis de Potter, merchant, Isaack Allerton of Suffolk, merchant, Brian Newton, Captain-lieutenant, George Baxter, Ensign, Isaac de foreest, Selectman." These witnesses also testified to the formal gift to the Dutch of land "on the west side of the river," by the sachems Mattehoorn, Pemenatta, and Sinquesz, through "Sander [Alexander] Boyer," interpreter. This land was now occupied by the Swedes; "to wit—the land from the west point of the Minquaas Kil, where Fort Christina stands, called in their language Supeskongh, unto Boompgens hook, in their language called Neuwsings. And Pemenatta, the present and ceding proprietor," stipulated that whenever anything was the matter with his gun, it should be repaired for nothing ; also that he should be given maize, "when he come empty among our people." The conference was closed and "confirmed" by the Indians, with "solemn shaking of the hands of the General and of us the undersigned."

"Thus done at Fort Nassau, on the South river of New Netherland, this 9 July, 1651.

The "four witnesses" (Pieter Harmensen, for some reason, did not sign), all of whom were "well versed in the language of the Indians on this river," were vouched for, as "of competent age and credible," by "Marten Cregier, Captain Lieutenant of New Amsterdam burghess company," and "Abraham Staats, Surgeon and elder of Renslaers Wyck."* By virtue of this transaction, the region north of Fort Christina remained under the jurisdiction of the West India Company, and the name of the fort was changed to "Altona."

"During the next three years the New England Confederation trembled on the verge of a war with Stuyvesant." War was declared between England and Holland. In the spring of 1654, Oliver Cromwell sent out an expedition to seize New Netherland, and several men-of-war arrived at Boston. Intelligence of the projected expedition being carried to Director Stuyvesant by Allerton, the Council was instantly summoned (May 30) at Fort Amsterdam. Money was borrowed and plans made for defence ; but before hostilities began, word arrived of a treaty between the English and the Dutch, and the whole matter dropped.*

Notwithstanding all the intervening tribulations, the colonists at New Haven did not lose hope. In July, 1654, on the day when peace was publicly proclaimed, the General Court despatched a letter to the authorities at New Sweden, asserting their right to large tracts of land on both sides of Delaware Bay and River; the Court also desired "a neighbourly correspondence with them both in trading and planting there." Allerton appears to have anticipated this movement, since on June 22, preceding, Schepen Poulus Leedertsz Van de Grift made a declaration in New Amsterdam, "at the request of Isaac Allerton, merchant at New Amsterdam," concerning merchandise held for "said Isaac Allerton, Senior," in the warehouse of the Crown of Sweden on the South River.† From this it appears that Allerton sustained friendly business relations with the Swedes at Delaware Bay, as well as the English, — for he certainly was in good favor at New Haven. As for the Dutch: it was upon the protest of Isaac Allerton, Sr., dated April 6, 1657, that Jan Paul Jacquet was removed, fourteen days later, from his office as commander on the South River.‡ Governor Stuyvesant ordered Jacquet to transfer the company's effects to "Andries Hudde." This was done, and Jacquet, upon his return to Manhattan, was arrested and prosecuted. Allerton, in his so-called will, mentions debts due from Delaware Bay, showing that he retained interests there throughout his life.

The traffic of the New Amsterdam and New Haven merchants with Virginia was directly with the English planters, and not with the aborigines as at Delaware Bay. Tobacco, the staple export, and beaver, purchased from the Indians, were exchanged by the planters for supplies from England, Barbadoes, and northern Colonial ports. Yet Allerton, assisted by his familiarity with their ways, appears to have obtained his land in Virginia directly from the Indians. In Northumberland County (then including Westmoreland), it is recorded, under date of February 6, 1650, that "according to an order of the Governor and Council, inquiry had been made concerning the complaint of the Machoatick Indians about Mr. Allerton's intending a plantation upon them; . . . but due inquisition being made, the said Indians, and the werowance Peckatoan (also the name of a well-known plantation in Westmoreland) declared they were well content with Mr. Allerton staying there, so long as the land, 'wherever hee hath already cleared,' be useful." But they desired "that no more houseing be there built than is now upon it, and to keep his cattle and hogs on the other side of Machoatick river," a small tributary of the Potomac. Allerton's plantation is laid down on Herrmann's map of Virginia and Maryland, made in 1670. In 1657, William Nutt deposed "that about February preceding, he and the other commissioners of Northumberland County, being appointed by the Governor and Council to inquire concerning the seating of M<sup>r</sup>. Isaac Allerton's land at Machoatic, M<sup>r</sup>. W<sup>m</sup> Cooke being requested to be interpreter, the deponent heard Captain Peter Lefebeer promise to pay, on the said Allerton's behalf, to the said Cooke, 1,000 lbs. of tobacco in case Allerton seated further." *

After the death of his father, in 1659, Isaac Allerton, Jr., removed to this tract of land on the Machoatick River, where he built a stately mansion, and spent the remainder of his life. His descendants are prominent among the "many Virginia families of distinction . . . descended from ancestors of gentle lineage," who "intermarried with the families of Lee, Travers, Cooke, Colston, Corbin, Willoughby, Newton," etc., of Virginia.*

At what date Isaac Allerton, Sr., removed his family to New Haven is uncertain. In a deed of October 27, 1646, and repeatedly afterward, he called himself a merchant of New Amsterdam, in the Province of New Netherlands,† where he maintained his trading-house on Manhattan Island for many years. Yet, at a General Court held in New Haven, March 10, 1646-47, "when the names of people as they were seated in the meeting-house were read in Court, and it was ordered that they should be recorded," Isaac Allerton and his wife were assigned seats of honor. In the first seat were the Governor and Deputy-Governor; in the second seat, Mr. Malbon, magistrate. "In the cross seats at the end," second seat, "Thom. Nash, M. Allerton, Bro. Perry." "Secondly for the Women's seats . . . Sister Fowler, Sister Ling, Sister Allerton." This was under the pastorate of the Rev. John Davenport. After Mr. Hooke [Hooker?] became the colleague of the Rev. Mr. Davenport, new seats were assigned to the congregation, February 11, 1655-56; "M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton, sen.," was placed in the first seat "in the cross seats at the upper end," and "M<sup>rs</sup> Allerton, the elder," in the first seat "in the cross seats for women." In the third plan of the seating, by authority of the Court, on February 20, 1661-62, "M<sup>rs</sup> Allerton" was given the first seat "in the short seats at the upper end," the most prominent position for women in the church.‡ The cross seats of the brethren were always at the preacher's right; those for the sisters, at his left.

The town of New Haven was laid out in "squares," the central square being what is now the Common, or "Green ;"

about this were eight other squares. The town plan of 1641 does not show Allerton's location ; but he was granted later a lot on the east side of the present Union Street near Fair Street. The lot, consisting of about two acres, is now thickly covered with houses ; "yet it is obvious, that when Allerton built his house there, it was just such a spot as would strike the fancy of a 'sea-captain.' There was a gradual but very considerable slope towards the harbor, on the south, and towards the creek, on the west. He must have had, from his upper windows, a fair view of a great part of the town, in one direction, and the harbor and sound even to Long Island, on the other, while, on the north, the fine bluff of East Rock, and very likely that of West Rock, the refuge of the Regicides, were in full view." The house itself, a "grand house with four porticoes," must have fronted upon Union Street, between Cherry Street on the north and Fair Street on the south, near the present residence (1882) of Mr. Edward Buddington. President Styles records the tradition that Thomas Gregson's house "was one of the four which excelled in stateliness all other houses erected in New Haven by the first generation of its inhabitants ;" the other three were those of Governor Theophilus Eaton, Rev. John Davenport, and Mr. Isaac Allerton.* The house of Allerton was taken down about 1742. His warehouse, without doubt, was opposite his residence ; standing on the bank of the creek, which was accessible to small vessels until after the Revolution, but which is now the bed of the railroad.†

The Colonial Records of New Haven contain but few references to Allerton or his affairs. In 1647, "John Bishopp, serv<sup>t</sup> to M<sup>r</sup>. Allerton" was complained of for want of arms. November 12, 1649, the General Court taxed Allerton "20<sup>s</sup> for a single rate." In December, 1647, and subsequently, he was the bearer of important letters passing between Governor Stuyvesant and the Governor and Deputy-Governor of New Haven, which showed that his advice was sought by both parties.*

At a Court of Magistrates, held in New Haven, January 26, 1654, one "Lawranc Corneliusson, a Dutchman," was before the Court "charged with seuerall great miscarriages" at Milford, principally a quarrel with "another Dutchman, who had bine scandalously, and for himselfe, dangerously, drunke." Mr. Allerton, whom Lawrence "desired might be p'sent to speake for him," said "he did beleeeve they [the charges] were all true . . . but thinks the man was in such a passion as he knows not what he did." However, the Court fined Lawrence £40, which, at Allerton's request, was reduced to £30, "with three months time in which to pay" it.†

In 1655, Mr. Allerton, Ensign Bryan, and Mr. Auger appeared before the Court with the complaint that, by reason of bad biscuit and flour that they had from the baker of Milford, they had suffered much damage, "and likewise the place lies under reproach at Virginia and Barbadoes, so as when other men from other places can have a ready market for their goods, that from hence lies by and will not sell, or if it do, it is for little above half so much as others sell for." May 25, 1657: "Some difference betwixt James Mills, M<sup>r</sup> Goodyeare, M<sup>r</sup> Allerton and M<sup>r</sup> Larebee, was presented to the court, but after, by consent [it was] w<sup>h</sup>drowne and referred to a private determination."‡

That there are so few references to Isaac Allerton in the New Haven Colony Records would seem strange if it were not for his great interests elsewhere. It may be that he purposely refrained from becoming closely identified with the affairs of his "home town," choosing rather to keep it as a retreat from governmental affairs.

In the spring of 1659, Winthrop says: "The winter hath been extraordinarily long and sharp and sickly among us." The "common sickness of the town," at that time, Mr. Davenport describes as accompanied with such symptoms as "gripings . . . agues and fevers, giddiness, much sleepiness, and burning. It comes by fits every other day;" worse than all else, "the supply of medicine . . . is spent."* Isaac Allerton died at New Haven between February 1, 1658-59, when he appeared in Court as defendant in a suit brought to compel the payment of an old debt, and February 12 (the same month), the date on which his inventory was taken.† His will, informal and without date, but duly sworn to by subscribing witnesses, was allowed by the Court.‡

This will, which is little more than memoranda of debts due to him, and amounts that he wished to have collected and used to pay his creditors, gives but a vague idea of Mr. Allerton's many possessions. His homestead in New Haven, valued at £75, had greatly depreciated with other estates in the town; but his interests in New Amsterdam, Virginia, Delaware Bay, and Barbadoes, as developed by his son Isaac, gave to his immediate descendants a position which wealth only could confer. The judicial account of the settlement of the estate, in which Isaac Allerton, Jr., prayed to be dismissed from his trust as executor, "vnlesse he might be left free to act in it as he saw conuenient," is as follows : * —

"Whereas at a court held at Newhaven Aprill the 5th 1659, an inventory & an account takē & p<sup>r</sup>sented to the court, of an estate left by M<sup>r</sup> Isaac Allerton sen. deceased here, at w<sup>ch</sup> time the court was informed that there was a will left by the deceased, w<sup>ch</sup> was supposed to be in the hands of M<sup>r</sup> Isaac Allerton, who was now gone from home, vpon w<sup>ch</sup> ground the court proceeded not further in that business at that time, onely they signified there desire that the will spoken of might be brought forth at his returne ; accordingly at a court held at Newhaven the 5th of July 1659, M<sup>r</sup> Allerton appeared, & p<sup>r</sup>sented the said writeing as the will of his deceased father, but the court findeing that neither M<sup>r</sup> Allerton nor any other was willing at that time to administer vpon the said estate, it was ordered that y<sup>e</sup> bookes of accounts, wth all bills & speciallties appertaining to the said estate, should be deliured to the secretary, and that by a writeing sett vpon the door post of the meeting house, intimation should be given to such as were creditors to that estate, that if they made their appearance at the court of magistrates in October next, their demands should be considered ; at w<sup>ch</sup> court sundry creditors appeareing, to make clayme of considerable somes due from the said estate, M<sup>r</sup> Isaac Allerton p<sup>r</sup>sented a writeing, as the last will of the deceased, now witnessed vpon oath by John Harriman & Edward Preston, that it was sealed & subscribed by M<sup>r</sup> Allerton deceased, whilst he had the vse of his vnderstanding & memory in a competant measure, by w<sup>ch</sup> writeing it appeared y<sup>t</sup> M<sup>r</sup> Allerton himself & his mother, the widdow of the deceased, were made ioynt trustees to gather in & dispose of the estate for paym<sup>t</sup> of the said iust debts due from the same. The said widdow renouncing her part of that trust & nō els appeaing who were willing to administer, the court vpon request of the M<sup>r</sup> Isaac Allerton, established the sole trust of that business vpon him, to collect & dispose of the estate for the ends aforesaid, within any of the English jurisdictions in these parts of America."

* Hoadly's Records of the Colony of New Haven, vol. 2 : 307-309.

The Court instructed Mr. Allerton to make "p<sup>r</sup>sent payment proportionally" to each and all of the creditors according to the value of the estate as appraised in the inventory; and to gather in the debts elsewhere with all "conuenient speed" and make payments "yearly, in proportion to all the creditors . . . vntill all iust debts be sattisfied. . . . But M<sup>r</sup> Isaac Allerton junior, in his more serious thoughts about y<sup>e</sup> business, came the next day vnto the court & p<sup>r</sup>fessed his discouragment to proceed in that trust, vnlesse he might be left free to act in it as he saw conuenient, & might be dismissed therefrom vpon account, whenever he desired." The Court refused to discharge him until it "saw a satisfying or iust account given of the faithful discharge of that trust, w<sup>ch</sup> he was the rather to be obliged to because he was the deceaseds eldest or onely sonne, who had conferred that trust vpon him for attendance vnto righteousness on his fathers behalf." Allerton persisted in his "renouncing & refusing to vntertake the matter, vpon the tearmes aforesd; wherevpon . . . the court vpon request of the creditors, who had long waited for an issue . . . did, with the consent of the creditors," appoint Mr. Richard Miles and Gervase Boykin "commissioners in trust, for collection & conservation of the said estate."

At a Court of Magistrates held in New Haven, May 28, 1660, at the request of Ensign Bryan, Deacon Miles and Gervase Boykin gave in their account, "viz. that they had sould the time of service dew frō John Little, servant to M<sup>r</sup> Allerton deceased, for 3 ." The Court also was informed "that there is in M<sup>r</sup> Ogdens hand a mare & 2 colts belonging to this estate, onely an account wth M<sup>r</sup> Ogden is to be considered, w<sup>ch</sup> is not yet come to hand; also a debt dew frō Captaine Morris of Road Island; also that there came frō Barbadoes, (since M<sup>r</sup> Clarke came thence) to M<sup>r</sup> Lake, 4 hogsheads of sugar, part of which belongs to this estate." It was ordered by the Court, at this time, that no claims would be considered after October next. Still, one more account was allowed at a session of the Court of Magistrates, May 27, 1661, — a debt from "Isaacke Allerton sen<sup>r</sup> vnto Edward Batter of Salem . . . which being attested was by this court accepted to come in with other debts " upon his estate.*

Several matters connected with the settlement of Isaac Allerton's estate are found in the Court Minutes of New Amsterdam :—

August 23, 1659, in the Writs of Appeal, appears a summons to " Peter le Feber," to pay and discharge, upon pain of foreclosure, " a certain mortgage on his bouwery and cattle at the Walebocht on Long Island, passed to the late Isaac Allerton, and by him assigned to Wallewyn van der Veen." †

" Tues 9 Dec 1659: Mr Isaack Allerton the younger appears in Court requesting that the Court may appoint curators to the residuary estate in this country, of his father dec<sup>d</sup>, and regarding the papers remaining at New Haven in the hands of the Court there, requests that they be written to, to send them here. The Court appoint as curators Paulus Leenderzen van der Grift, Govert Loockermans, Mr Jan Lauwerens, and Mr George Wolsy." A week later, obeying a summons to the Court " to know if they will be pleased to accept " the trust, " Paulus Leenderzen van der Grift says, that there are a great many bad debts here and that those of New Haven might take the best debts to themselves, sending the creditors to them." Whereupon the Court agreed to request the magistrates at New Haven " to send the books, papers and a/cs concerning this place and to communicate with each other; arranging also together for any trouble that may attend it." They were told " to draw their fees of office;" and finally, " after much conversation," they accepted.

March 29, 1661-62 : " Abraham Van Nas, attorney for Isaack Allerton, Senior, dec<sup>d</sup>," asked to be relieved of papers and documents relating to deceased's estate, and to receive 65 fl. (florins) " commission money." He also wanted to know whom " to deal with." The Court referred him to the above named curators, who as yet had received no " Acte of Authorization," but now were supplied promptly therewith.

Two months before, January 29, one Joannes Withart brought a suit in which he insisted "on being preferred in the proceeds of the sold ketch, William and John, formerly belonging to Isaack Allerton, the Elder." His claim for furnishing "sails and rigging" for that vessel in January, 1658, was dismissed by the Court.*

The final statement of "the estate of M<sup>r</sup> Allerton deceased," in New Haven, "according to the inventory was 118<sup>li</sup>, 05<sup>s</sup>, 02<sup>d</sup>, w<sup>ch</sup> (M<sup>rs</sup> Allertons thirds of the houses and lands being deducted,) falling into the hands of y<sup>e</sup> creditors, they sould vnto M<sup>r</sup> Isaac Allerton the dwelling house, orchard & barne, wth 2 acres of meadow for 120<sup>li</sup>."† By deed of October 4, 1660, he "alienated" to his stepmother, Johanna, for life, the homestead in New Haven, with reversion to his eldest daughter, Elizabeth. Mrs. Johanna Allerton occupied the house until her death, early in 1682. On March 10, 1682-83, the deed was confirmed, and the property passed into the possession of Mrs. Elizabeth Eyres. Soon after her death, which occurred November 17, 1740, the ancient house was demolished.

The early Colonial records of New England and New Amsterdam pertaining to Isaac Allerton, so fully quoted but by no means exhausted, prove the high estimation of Allerton's abilities held by his contemporaries. It has, however, remained for the present generation, nearly three centuries later, fully to realize his worth.‡ No injustice is done to the memory of other Pilgrims by claiming for him a broad spirit of enterprise, exceeding in its results that of any other of the Mayflower passengers. With his far-reaching activities, he certainly was a strong factor in welding together the Colonies. His mission was ever one of conciliation and peace. It also is not too much to assert that, were he alive to-day, he would exercise a strong and successful influence in our commercial (and possibly political) world; but, hampered as he was by circumstances due to his environment and the narrow spirit of the age, many of his undertakings were unsuccessful.

‡ Mr. Walter S. Allerton, of the New York Society of Mayflower Descendants, has published a History of the Allerton Family, which describes the life of his ancestor, Isaac Allerton, in merited terms of praise. He depicts him as "superior to all of them [the Pilgrims] in knowledge of the world and familiarity with business, . . . his mental horizon was far wider and his views more liberal and more tolerant of the opinion of others." Of his accomplishments in London, "it is not too much to say that the very existence of the Plymouth Colony depended for a time upon the success of his negotiations there." Vide Allerton's History of the Allerton Family, 1888: 45, 46.

The records show him to have been one of the mainstays in Holland, and no other was deemed fitted to bring the last of the Pilgrims from Leyden to New Plymouth. He was one of the "first five signers of the Compact" in Provincetown harbor, who, Dr. Fowler* claims, "should be placed on the same high level in the annals of the world as the immortal five who drafted the Declaration of Independence." At Plymouth, when Massasoit, accompanied by his warriors, made friendly overtures, March 22, 1620-21, it was Captain Standish and "Isaac Alderton" who were sent out "to the brooke" to meet him and escort him in; the treaty of peace so ruthlessly broken more than fifty years later by his son Philip was then signed.† The next day, to cement the friendship, Standish and Allerton "went venterously" into the woods to Massasoit, who gave them "three or foure ground nuts, and some Tobacco."‡ Allerton also was Bradford's first Assistant; he served in that office many years, the last term being 1633-34.§

After the death of Robert Cushman, their agent in England, early in 1625, Isaac Allerton was chosen immediately to fill his place. He voyaged untiringly between the old country and the new on errands of doubtful expediency that brought him little else than unfriendly criticism; yet the supplies that he brought over during the period of disaffection of the Merchant Adventurers, though so strongly condemned by Bradford as "on his owne perticuler," saved much distress. The sums due to him from the estates of those who died in 1633 show not only that he had supplied the present necessities of their families, but that he had "trusted" a much larger amount than would have saved his home.* Later, when free to follow his own inclinations, he visited, in his bark, every known port on the Atlantic coast, besides Barbadoes, the Dutch West Indies, Spain, Portugal, and England. Carrying valuable cargoes of his own, or those entrusted to him by others, he bartered or purchased fish, grain, tobacco, and other staple commodities. He also was the bearer of many important messages and letters between the Colonies and England, as well as home ports. Mr. Trowbridge,† in a paper read, February 10, 1877, before the New Haven Historical Society, said that Isaac Allerton "well merited the title that had been given him: 'The Father of New England Commerce.'" He was more than that. He was The Father of American Commerce.

Isaac Allerton has the unique distinction of having been the only one of the Pilgrim Fathers who became a resident of New York, a fact which has been recognized by the New York State Society of Mayflower Descendants. On June 1, 1904, a tablet to his memory was placed at No. 8 Peck Slip, the site of his warehouse.‡ He was not the first Englishman to take up his abode in New Amsterdam,—Thomas Hall and George Holm (Holmes?) preceded him (in 1638) by a few months; but the part he bore in public affairs clearly shows him to have been the most prominent, in that frequently he was the only Englishman present among the Swedes, Dutch, and Indians. His presence was requested, and his suggestions and decisions uniformly were adopted.

Allerton's practical expression of sympathy was one of his strongest characteristics, so far little recognized. He was a friend in need to many an unfortunate, giving his bond in all the courts, and acting again and again, "by request," as interpreter, referee, or arbitrator. It is suspected that his censure from the Plymouth Church and Colony was due quite as much to the liberality of his religious sentiment and toleration of Quakers as to his business methods; and that his unceremonious invitation to leave Marblehead was the result of kindness shown to Roger Williams, who had been long under the ban, and who, in the winter of 1634-35, was ordered to leave the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

It was Isaac Allerton who succored the three ministers, Mr. Tompson, Mr. Knolles, and Mr. James, who came near foundering in the vicinity of Hell Gate, in the "dead of winter," 1642-43, while sailing from New Haven to Virginia. They barely escaped with their lives. "The Dutch governor gave them slender entertainment," says Winthrop, "but Mr. Allerton of New Haven, being there, took great pains and care for them, and procured for them a very good pinnace and all things necessary, . . . so as with difficulty & danger they arrived safe in Virginia." *

There is a well-founded tradition that the regicide Judges, Colonel Whalley and Colonel Goffe, found temporary shelter and concealment in the New Haven residence of Mr. Allerton, in the summer of 1661. He had died two years before, but his widow, Johanna, was living there; and, notwithstanding a proclamation had gone out from Massachusetts Bay "that whosoever shall be found to have a hand in concealing the said colnells, or either of them, shall answer for the same as an offence of the highest nature," she is thought to have surreptitiously harbored them from June 11 to June 22, if not longer.* Probably she was sustained by the thought that her husband, in her place, would have done the same. Her burial-place is unknown; but the beautiful "Green" in New Haven is supposed to be the last resting-place of our Forefather, Isaac Allerton. No monument marks his place of burial; but the site of his house, on Fair Street, has been indicated by the New Haven Colony Historical Society by a suitably inscribed tablet:—

ISAAC ALLERTON A PILGRIM OF THE MAYFLOWER AND THE FATHER OF
NEW ENGLAND COMMERCE
LIVED ON THIS GROUND
1646 TILL 1659

The house on which the tablet was placed was recently demolished, as it stood in the direct path of railroad improvements; the tablet itself is now in the rooms of the Historical Society, awaiting the time when it can be reset near its former position.

But his most enduring monuments are the localities which bear his name: Allerton Street, in Plymouth; Allerton's Hill, so called in the early settlement of Duxbury; and Point Allerton in Boston harbor (known in 1634 as Point Alderton), nine and a half miles from the city of Boston.

Physically, Isaac Allerton is described by a descendant as "slightly above the average height, of a spare but muscular frame, with dark hair and beard, a clear complexion and strongly marked features, a good looking rather than a handsome man. In the great majority of his descendants there can be noticed a great similarity of development in the upper portion of the head and face, more especially noticeable in the forehead, eyes and nose, and there can be no doubt that these physical marks, together with certain well-defined traits of character, have descended to us from our common ancestor." *

A number of autograph signatures of Isaac Allerton have appeared, without reference to their source ; but the following is vouched for as genuine by Justin Winsor, who includes it in a group of autographs of "Mayflower Pilgrims." †

The name of Allerton "will be forever cherished by the entire people of that mighty nation, the corner-stone of whose foundations was so deeply and so enduringly laid by the Pilgrims of Plymouth."

"The Maverick family was one of prominence in Colonial days, noted for hospitality, religious tolerance, and active philanthropy." Moses<sup>2</sup> was the fourth and youngest son of the Rev. John<sup>1</sup> Maverick, of Dorchester, in New England; Samuel<sup>2</sup>, Elias<sup>2</sup>, and Antipas<sup>2</sup> were his brothers. The Rev. John<sup>1</sup> Maverick, born in 1577, in County Devon, England, was ordained deacon at Exeter, England, July 26, 1597; and, later, by a bishop of the Episcopal Church, as a minister of the Church of England. In 1615, he was rector of Beaworthy, County Devon. He made the acquaintance of the Rev. John Warham, also a minister of the Church of England, who was established at Exeter.† These "West Country ministers" became imbued with the spirit of the Reformation, and joined a company of Puritans of Devonshire, Dorsetshire, and Somersetshire, who were about to embark for the New World.‡

On March 20, 1629-30, this company gathered in the "new hospital" at Plymouth, England, and there the Rev. John White, of Dorchester, preached to them in the forenoon. In the afternoon, under his direction, they formed themselves into a church, of which "the godly Mr Maverick" and "the gracious servant of Christ," Mr. John Warham, were chosen associate pastors. The company, numbering one hundred and ten, "set sail on the 30th of March following," in the Mary and John, a vessel of four hundred tons, Captain Squeb, master; and "on Lord's day, May 30th [20th], arrived at Nantasket, where the captain put them ashore, notwithstanding his engagement was to bring them up Charles river." the wilderness they made their way inland to a place which they soon named Dorchester, in honor of the home town of the Rev. John White, from which some of the settlers also had come. This settlement was formed a month before the arrival of Governor Winthrop and his company at Charlestown.*

The names of "Mr John Mañacke" and "Mr Jo : Warham" appear at the beginning of the first list of freemen in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, dated May 18, 1631.† These two men, with William Gaylard and William Rockwell, deacons of the church at Dorchester, assigned lots to the inhabitants, issued town orders, and had full control of affairs temporal, as well as spiritual, until Oct. 28, 1634, when a form of town government was established by the election of "Tenn men chosen to order all the affayres of the Plantation." Two years after this, Mr. Warham joined the swarming colony that removed to Windsor, Connecticut; Mr. Maverick remained at Dorchester. His death occurred Feb. 3, 1636-37, probably in Boston, at the age of about sixty years; he was buried in the "Old Burying-Ground" at Dorchester.‡ On Oct. 9, 1668, his widow was still living, when Samuel Maverick wrote to Secretary Sir William Morice that his mother "presents her humble service."§

The relationship of these early members of the Maverick family has been questioned; but Sumner states that "all the known circumstances connected with the births, lives, business relations, and residences of Samuel, Elias, Moses and Antipas, lead to the conclusion that they were brothers."|| John Josselyn, writing in 1674, refers to "Mr. Maverick" (whom he couples with "Mr. Wareham," calling them "Ministers"), as "the Father of Mr. Samuel Maverick, one of his Majesties Commissioners."¶ If further proof is needed, it

A brief sketch of the Maverick brothers will show how thoroughly they were identified with others mentioned in this volume:—

- I. Samuel<sup>2</sup>, b. about 1602, in England. He wrote of himself, in 1660, that he had spent his time "in America, even from the year 1624 till within these two years last past." It is now known that he came in Sir Ferdinando Gorges' first company to Wessagusset (Weymouth) in 1623, with Blackstone and Walford. From there he went to Winnisimmet (Chelsea); and, later, to Noddle's Island (East Boston), where, "with the helpe of one Mr. David Tompson," he built a small Fort, "placing therein foure Murtherers [pieces of ordnance] to protect him from the Indians." He had no sympathy with his father's dissent, and early in life was an avowed Episcopalian. This probably was the reason why he was not made freeman until Oct. 2, 1632, though his name was first on the list of "such as desire[d] to be made Freemen," Oct. 19, 1630. Yet he was popular, — "a man of a very loving and curteous behavior, very ready to entertaine strangers." He was appointed April 2, 1664, by Charles II, to be one of four Royal Commissioners; a year later, they were recalled. There is no doubt that he knew Isaac Allerton well, for he eventually retired to New Amsterdam, where he is supposed to have died before 1676. His wife was Amias, widow of David Tompson, who assisted in building his Fort. Her maiden name was Cole, or Colle. "David Thomson and Amyes Colle" were mar. July 13, 1613, in Plymouth, England.

2. Mary<sup>3</sup> Maverick, was mar., first, Feb. 8, 1655, to John Palsgrave; mar., second, Sept. 20, 1660, to Hon. Francis Hooke, of Kittery Point, Maine.
3. Samuel<sup>3</sup> Maverick, mar. Dec., 1660, Rebecca, daughter to Rev. John Wheelwright. He d. March 10, 1664, at Boston. His widow was mar. March 12, 1671-72, at Boston, to William Bradbury.
- II. Elias<sup>2</sup> Maverick, b. about 1604, in England, was of Charlestown and Chelsea. He was made freeman June 11, 1633; was a member of the Charlestown church, and of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. He married Ann Harris, and d. Sept. 8, 1681. Issue: Five sons and six daughters.
- III. Antipas<sup>2</sup> Maverick, b. —, in England, is recorded as "belonging to ye Ile of Shoals." June 23, 1646, "Edward Smale" sold his entire property at Kittery, Maine, to Antipas Maverick, who remained there until his death, July 2, 1678. (Vide page 4.) Antipas Maverick mortgaged

Moses<sup>2</sup> Maverick, the youngest of the brothers, who married Remember Allerton, was born about 1610, in County Devon, England. He was, without doubt, a member of the First Church of Dorchester, of which his father was pastor, before its reconstruction in 1636; for he was admitted freeman of the Massachusetts Bay Colony on Sept. 3, 1634, being then accounted a citizen of Dorchester,* and no one was then made a freeman who was not already a church member. While there is no record of a grant of land to Moses Maverick, in Dorchester, it is evident that he had a grant, from the mention in the Town Books, Jan. 2, 1637-38, that Goodman Greenway should have all the land at Pine Neck "for his great lott except 4 acres belonging to Good[man] Bingham and 6 Acres bought of Moses Mauericke."† This lot is alluded to again in a deed of Greenway to his son-in-law, Robert Pearce, and Ann, his wife, dated Feb. 5, 1650, when he conveyed to them all his land at Pine Neck in Dorchester, adding that "six acres was purchased of moses mauericke together with the meadow in the said necke belonging to the same together with the Comons appertayning to the six acres afore mentioned."‡

Roads says that Moses Maverick arrived at Marblehead with Isaac Allerton, in 1631, in the White Angel. They probably were directed to that point by Samuel Maverick, who later described Marblehead as the best place for fishing on this "house & land that is scittuate & being in Kittrie," Dec. 16, 1663, to Moses Maverick, of Marblehead, for £90. He also became involved in transactions with Thomas Booth; but appears to have met his obligations, at least in part, since his heirs conveyed, in 1682, forty acres of the original hundred to one Dennett. the coast. "Here be good harbour for boates, and safe riding for shippes," wrote Wood, in 1633.* The first settlement was at Peach Point, near Little Harbor, and here Moses Maverick lived as early as 1634. He and Allerton, with their servants, were engaged in fishing.

There is no record of early land-grants in Marblehead to Moses Maverick. On May 6, 1635, he came into possession of all the houses and stages of his father-in-law, Isaac Allerton, "to enioy to him & his heires for euer."† In 1650, Sarah Webber, widow of John Webber, of Lynn, made over to Maverick a small parcel of land at Marblehead, "being in the possession of the sd moses mavericke."‡ He also acquired, in 1653, a dwelling house and half an acre of land near Mr. Walton's orchard, and with William Pitt, eighty-five acres bordering on the northeast on the town of Manchester. Two years later, 1655, Thomas Chubb, of Manchester, and "Anis his wife," conveyed to Maverick and Pitt a dwelling-house, and fifty acres upon which the house stood.§

His fishing-stages, house, etc., on "his island or poynt of land comonly caled Maverick's Island," containing two acres, "Moses Maverick of Marblehead, marchant," and Eunice his wife, conveyed, Aug. 20, 1672, to William Browne, "for a valuable consideration." The island is described as "being scittuate in Marblehead aforesaid & is surrounded with the sea at high water;" by the same deed he also conveyed "one halfe of a warehouse, standing neere the orchard of Mr. Walton deceased."||

Mr. Moses Maverick became a member of the First Church of Salem in 1638; and thereafter was active in all the enterprises of the church and town. He usually appears on the records with the title of "Mr." In 1638, he was active in assisting Mr. William Walton, minister of the Salem church, to build the first meeting-house; in 1659, he was one of a committee to have the meeting-house "sealed" (ceiled). He was chosen, April 6, 1672, chairman of a committee to settle a serious quarrel as to seating the congregation in the new "lean-to" of the meeting-house.* On May 24, 1684, the First Congregational Church of Marblehead was formed, with Samuel Cheever, Ruth Cheever, Moses Maverick, and Eunice Maverick first in the list of its fifty-four members.†

On June 7, 1636, "Mr Moses Maverick paid the Gov<sup>r</sup>no<sup>r</sup> [of Massachusetts Bay] 40<sup>s</sup> rent for Nodles Iland." ‡ It is supposed that he hired the island during the absence of his brother Samuel in Virginia, in order "to hold it during his [Samuel's] Southern excursion." After this, Moses was wholly identified with the interests of Marblehead, where his tax, Jan. 1, 1637-38, was next to the largest in the town. Sept. 6, 1638, he was "pmitted to sell a tun of wine at Marble Head, & not to excede this yeare."§ Dec. 23, 1638, he and the Rev. Mr. Walton were chosen to lay out certain lots of land. In 1648, when there was a shortage of common pasture land, Moses Maverick was allowed a share for three cows, and Isaac Allerton for two.||

The record of the first town-meeting, held at Marblehead in 1649, names Mr. Moses Maverick and six others, who were chosen selectmen. In 1662, he was the first to sign an agreement as to a public landing-place or wharf in the town. Again, he was the first of a hundred and forty signers of a petition against imposts at Marblehead.¶ The Samuel Maverick who also signed is thought to have been Samuel<sup>3</sup>, son to Moses, who was of age on Dec. 19, 1668. The petition, though undated, probably was presented to the General Court about February, 1668-69. In May, 1669, a reduction of duties throughout the Colony was ordered.**

On June 1, 1677, "Mr Moses Mauericke" and two others were empowered by the Court "as commissioners to end smale causes at Marblehead according to law; and also that Mr Mauericke haue power to joyne persons in marriage wthin the sajd toun . . . , and also to administer oathes both in civil & criminal cases." * It is probable that Mr. Maverick already had served as magistrate for a number of years, though this was the first record of his formal appointment to that office, since he is mentioned as having been "the founder and for many years the only magistrate in Marblehead." Mr. Roads, in his "History of Marblehead," gives a photograph of an affidavit, dated Nov. 28, 1677, in the handwriting of Moses Maverick, "Commissioner." † The three commissioners asked the Court, March 29, 1681, to remit a fine of £10, for not having sent the town's quota of soldiers in time of war; one half of the fine was remitted. On July 4, 1684, Mr. Maverick was appointed chairman of a committee of three to investigate the claims of certain Indians, heirs to the Squaw Sachem of Saugus, to land in Marblehead.

The last of Moses Maverick's many and valuable public services, which extended over a period of fifty years, were those rendered as Town Clerk. There is no entry to show when he began to serve; it is probable that he had done the clerical work of the settlement before the town was established. He died at Marblehead, Jan. 28, 1685-86, aged seventy-six years. The town record of his death states that he "solemnized the preceding marriages and being Clerke registered y<sup>e</sup> births and deaths preceding." ‡ His widow, Eunice, survived him, and was living on Dec. 5, 1698.

The will of Moses Maverick, dated "this [ ] day of January: Anno Dom: 1685," lacked not only the day of the month but the signature. For that reason, when it was presented to the County Court, held at Ipswich, March 30, 1686, some of the children objected to its allowance.* Samuel Cheever, minister of the church at Marblehead, who drew the will, delivered it to the Court; yet the depositions of Ambrose Gale, of Marblehead, a "loving freind" of Maverick, and Archibald Ferguson and John Norman, his sons-in-law, were taken, in 1685 and 1686, at the County Court in Salem, to attest to the circumstances attending the making of the will. These depositions and the will, which was allowed, are filed in the Registry of Probate at Boston.† After making ample provision for his widow, Eunice, during her lifetime, he provided that, at her decease, "Moses Hawks y<sup>e</sup> onely surviving child of my daughter Rebecca deceased," should be paid £5; and the same should be paid to each of the four children of his "daughter Abigail deceased, viz<sup>t</sup> Sam<sup>l</sup>: Ward, Abigail Hinds, Mary Dallaber & Martha Ward." The remainder of the estate was to be divided equally between his "four daughters, viz<sup>t</sup> Eliz: Skinner, Remem<sup>b</sup> Woodman, Mary ferguson & Sarah Norman."

The inventory of the estate, taken Feb. 26, 1685-86, amounted to £342:19:00. "His house & Land with one Cow-commonage: with the outhousing," was estimated at £150; a small pasture behind y<sup>e</sup> meeting house, £8; meddow ground before the house, £60; his part in the ffarme, £60; and one Cow lease, £5." The remainder consisted of "two old swords & gun, 15<sup>s</sup>," household furniture, a few books, cattle, farming implements, etc. The widow gave a bond, July 15, 1686, as administratrix of the estate, but neglected to fulfil her duties, and several times was called upon by the heirs for an accounting. Finally, "the house [being] much decayed, and in a ruinous condition," the widow and heirs signed an agreement,‡ Nov. 29, 1698, for the sale of the entire estate, with stipulations for the "creditable and comfortable maintenance" of the widow, out of her thirds, and the division of the remaining two thirds

VII. Isaac<sup>2</sup>, b. about 1630, in Plymouth. His mother died when he was four years of age. On his father's removal to New Amsterdam, about 1639, the young Isaac remained at Plymouth with his grandfather Brewster, who prepared him for college. In 1650, when he was twenty years of age, "Isaacus Allertonus" was named in the catalogue of "Harvard College, Cambridge, New-England," as having received a degree.† Upon returning to his father's home, then in New Haven, Isaac, Jr., was closely associated in commercial and maritime pursuits with his father, for whom, in the later years of Isaac, Sr., he frequently acted in the courts.

At the time of his father's death, in 1659, Isaac, Jr., was "gone from home," but, upon his return, produced the will by which he and his stepmother were made joint trustees or executors under the will. The widow "renounced" her part of that trust, and Isaac declined to proceed "vnlesse he might be left free to act as he saw conuenient." Two others were chosen trustees; yet it is apparent that Isaac was consulted with regard to the settlement of the estate, both in New Haven and New York, and through his endeavors the homestead was saved for the widow during her lifetime. In New York, "Mr Isaack Allarton the younger" appeared in court, Dec. 9, 1659, with the request that curators of the estate be appointed there.‡ The following year he removed to the land in Virginia which his father had received ten years before from the Indians ; here he remained until his death.

Isaac<sup>2</sup> Allerton married, about 1652, in New Haven. Nothing is known of this first wife except that her name was Elizabeth, and that she was the mother of two children, who survived her. His second wife, whom he married in Virginia about 1663, was Elizabeth, widow of Major George Colclough, and daughter to Captain Thomas Willoughby, of Virginia. Colonel Thomas Willoughby was her brother.

Elizabeth Willoughby was mar., first, as his second wife, to Simon Overzee, a Hollander, who was prominent as a merchant in Maryland and Virginia. Overzee's first wife was Sarah, daughter to Captain Adam and Sarah Thoroughgood ; she was buried Oct. 9, 1658. Administration was granted, Dec. 18, 1660, to Elizabeth, widow of Simon Overzee ; and soon after she was mar. to Major George Colclough, as his second wife. Ursula, the first wife of Major Colclough, mar., first, Richard Thompson ; second, Colonel John Mottrom ; and third, Colclough. The death of Major Colclough occurred about 1662, and, in 1663, his widow was the wife of Isaac<sup>2</sup> Allerton.* By this it appears that Elizabeth (Willoughby) (Overzee) (Colclough) Allerton was married three times within five years. She died before October, 1702.

Though no mention is found of Allerton's homestead, it is evident from contemporaneous history that he became a large and successful planter, and enjoyed the friendship and confidence of his neighbors. On March 10, 1670, he entered into a compact with John Lee, Henry Corbin, and Thomas Gerrard to build a Banqueting House "at or near the corner of their respective lands, where they joined." The agreement, as recorded, states that Corbin and Lee should build the house "where Mr. Allerton & Mr. Gerard shall think fit, for the continuance of good Neighborhood." It was stipulated that every person "bear an Equal charge to the building thereof . . . and each man or his heirs, yearly, according to his due course [turn] to make an Honorable treatment [entertainment] fit to entertain the undertakers thereof, their wives, mistress [sweetheart or fiancée] & friends, yearly & every year, & to be begin upon the 29th of May [1671]."* Thus was inaugurated "that kind of dissipation which proved so destructive to Virginia."

Gerrard, professedly a Roman Catholic, died on his plantation on Machoatick Creek, and, by his will, dated Feb. 5, 1672, appointed "Major Isaac Allerton," John Lee, and John Cooper to settle his estate. In September, 1675, Major Allerton was second in command of forces under Colonel John Washington (great-grandfather of George Washington) which were sent out to dislodge the Susquehannock Indians from an old blockhouse on the Maryland side of the river.† In 1676, Major Allerton, Colonel St. Leger Codd, and Colonel George Mason were appointed to superintend the building of a garrison or storehouse, "60 × 22, and a magazine 10 feet square, at Neapsico, near Occaquan, on the Potomac River."‡ Later, he was mentioned as Colonel Allerton.§

Isaac Allerton was appointed April 22, 1663, Justice of the Peace for Northumberland County. On November 1, 1667, he was a member of the "Committee of Association of Northumberland, Westmoreland and Stafford Counties;" member of the House of Burgesses, February 16, 1676-77; "2<sup>d</sup> in the commission of the peace for Westmoreland, and of the quorum, Nov. 5, 1677;" member of the Council, 1683. Governor Nicholson, in a letter dated June 10, 1691, reported to the English government that Richard Lee (the younger), Isaac Allerton, and John Armistead, out of scruples of conscience, refused to take the oath of allegiance to William and Mary, and "so were left out of the Council;"|| it was alleged that they were papists. But Isaac Allerton again appeared on the "Roll of Burgesses at an Assembly beginning the 24th day of Sept., 1696."¶ In 1699, he was

The exact date of the death of Isaac<sup>2</sup> Allerton is unknown; his will,† dated October 25, 1702, was proved December 30, following; his age was seventy-two years. As no mention was made of his wife, she was not then living.

His will, which was witnessed by Humphrey Morriss, John Gerrard, and Daniel Oceany, bequeathed, first, to the "church of Cople parish," in the lower or eastern part of Westmoreland County, "the sum of ten pounds sterling." 17, 1723-24, was proved March 25, following. He called himself "Willoughby Allerton, Gent.," and directed his executors that he "be interred in silence, without any show of funebrious rites and solemnities, and that my grave be impall<sup>d</sup> with a brick wall, together with all the rest of my friends & ancestors, a year's time after my death, . . . and further I desire that none of my friends may wear anything of mourning-cloathing in representaçon of grief and sorrow for my death." His homestead, "some 500 acres," and his sword, he willed to his son Isaac — upon attaining his majority. To his daughter, Elizabeth Allerton, he left land and personal estate; and to his widow, Hannah, he gave back all the negroes, cattle, horses, sheep, etc., which she brought to him at her marriage.*

Issue: I. Elizabeth<sup>4</sup>; mar. — Quills, and had children, Sarah and Margaret, living in 1639.

II. Isaac<sup>4</sup>; mar. Ann —; d. 1639. In the probate of his will he was mentioned as "gentleman of Cople parish, co. Westm: [Westmoreland]." Issue: I. Garwin<sup>5</sup>. 2. Isaac<sup>5</sup>. 3. Willoughby<sup>5</sup>.

4. Sarah Elizabeth<sup>5</sup>, b. about 1670, in Virginia; probably mar., first, — Newton, and had a son, Allerton Newton. Her second husband was Hancock<sup>2</sup> Lee, son to Colonel Richard<sup>1</sup> Lee, of Virginia. The first wife of Hancock Lee was Mary, daughter to Colonel William Kendall, of Newport House, by whom he had children. Hancock Lee was Justice of Northampton County, in 1677; in 1688, he removed to Wycomico Parish in Northumberland County, where he was Justice, 1689, 1699, 1702; burgess, 1688; naval officer, 1699. In 1729, he was buried on his estate; his widow, Sarah, died two years later. The inscription on the tomb of Hancock Lee says: "and Sarah his last wife, daughter of Isaac Allerton Esq., who departed this life the 17th May, Anno Domo 1731, Aeta 60 years."

THE ANDREWS FAMILY

THOMAS ANDREWS and his son Joseph came from County Devon, England, and settled in Hingham, Massachusetts, prior to the arrival of the Rev. Peter Hobart and his company in 1635.* At the drawing of the house-lots, on September 18, 1635, Thomas Andrews drew five acres, including back land on Town Street, now North Street. His lot was the one upon which stood, in 1899, the dwelling owned by the heirs of the late Perez Lincoln. He was aged at the time of his arrival, and did not long survive. The Rev. Peter Hobart wrote in his diary, under date of August 21, 1643: "Old Thomas Andrews dyed."

* The Rev. Peter Hobart and his twin brother, Edmund, were sons of Edmund Hobart, of Hingham, England. They were baptized Oct. 13, 1604, in that town. The diary of the Rev. Peter Hobart contained many valuable records, among them the following: "I with my wife and four children came safely to New England June ye 8: 1635." He arrived at Charlestown, but in September following removed his family to Hingham, where, after a pastorate of forty-four years, he died Jan. 20. 1679. To him the town probably owes its name.

† This Thomas Andrews was not one of the Merchant Adventurers. (Vide page 607.) It is probable that Thomas and Richard Andrews, of London, who signed the agreement, were brothers. Both men assisted the Massachusetts Bay Colony with liberal contributions of money, and with their services.

Thomas Andrews served as Deputy in England before Winthrop's colony came over in 1630; he also was chosen, June 17, 1629, in England, as auditor of the Bay Company's "accompts." In 1651, "The Right Hon. Thomas Andrews esq." was Lord Mayor of London. Vide Young's Chronicles, 1846: 81; also Massachusetts Historical Society's Collections, vol. 10: 27.

been found to establish that relationship beyond the similarity of names, and the fact that this Thomas does not belong to any other Andrews family at that time in New England. He settled in Dorchester. "Mattapan" became the town of Dorchester Sept. 7, 1630, and the bounds were established six years later.

On Dec. 17, 1634, three acres of land were granted Thomas Andrews next the house which he already had built. Before 1636, he and his wife "Ann" were members of the First Church; but the date of their admission was on the early missing records. On March 6, 1637-38, the sale of Mr. Gurling's land was confirmed, and it was appointed to be laid out "by Mr Benjamin & Mr Joseph Weld to Mr Andrews."* In 1637, Thomas Andrews was one of the ninety-five inhabitants among whom Dorchester Neck was divided. He was bailiff in 1660.† "Thomas Andrews Departed this life the 20th (Mon: 3<sup>d</sup>) May 1673." His will, dated two weeks before his death, is found in the Suffolk County Probate. ### JOSEPH<sup>2</sup> ANDREWS

Joseph Andrews, born about 1597, in County Devon, England, went with his father to Hingham, Massachusetts, before 1635. His house-lot granted by the town, September 18, 1635, was "next west" of that of his father, and contained five acres, including back land.

He was the first Town Constable, being "sworne constable of Barecove" (afterward incorporated as Hingham) July 8, 1635.* At this unsettled period the office was of the utmost importance, since the law and order of the community were under the control of the Constable. Besides this, if the Captain of the Train Band were not present on training days, the Constable took his place. Joseph Andrews was sent as Deputy from the town of Hingham to the General Court of the "Bay Colony" six sessions, commencing May 25, 1636; September 8, 1636; April 18, 1637; May 11, 1637; September 11, 1637, and May 2, 1638.† He was also the first Town Clerk of Hingham.

September 8, 1636, Joseph Andrews was one of twelve "gentlemen . . . deputed as comittes to inqu<sup>r</sup> after y<sup>e</sup> townes true valuation," in all the towns of the Colony, "so as to make an equall rate for the first 600<sup>l</sup> now graunted to be levied . . . the meeting to bee at Boston, the returne to bee made to the Treasurer/." He was also one of a committee of eleven, chosen August 1, 1637, "for the raising of a rate of £400." * May 17, 1637, "the commissioners, M<sup>r</sup>. W<sup>m</sup>. Aspinwall and M<sup>r</sup>. Joseph Andrews," on the part of Massachusetts Bay, together with "M<sup>r</sup>. Timothy Hatherly and M<sup>r</sup>. Nathaniel Tilden," on the part of the Plymouth Colony, were appointed to "settle the line between the two colonies," † although the bounds were not fixed until some years afterwards.

Joseph Andrews later became a resident of Duxbury in Plymouth County, where he was "empannelled vpon a pettye jury and sworne, at Generall Court holden att New Plymouth the sixt Day of March 1654." ‡ William Bradford was then governor. Joseph Andrews also was appointed upon the "jury before Generall Court," October 3, 1654; March 2, 1657-58; October 2, 1660; and October 3, 1665. § He was chairman of "The Grand Enquest" in 1655 and 1661; || a surveyor of highways 1654 and 1655, and was chosen Constable of Duxbury, June 8, 1664, under Governor Thomas Prince. ¶

In 1757, Joseph Andrews, who described himself as "of Duxbury . . . in New England . . . Planter," conveyed to William Huser, Jr., of Hingham, for £12, "all that parcell of Vpland & Meadow lying in Hingham aforesaid neere Captaines Tent . . . containing fieve acres."

His death occurred in Hingham, January 1, 1679-80, at the age of eighty-three years, and his will was proved in the same month:—

The mention of “one pair of Taylors Shiers pressing Iron — one small hammer and two Button hole Cheezels” suggests that he was a tailor. Elizabeth, widow of Joseph Andrews, died August 12, 1688, in Hingham, probably at the home of her son Thomas.

THOMAS<sup>3</sup> ANDREWS

Thomas, eldest son to Joseph and Elizabeth Andrews, was born in November, 1632, probably in England. He lived in Hingham on the home lot, which had been conveyed to him by his parents in 1665; the original house formed part of the dwelling owned by the heirs of the late Perez Lincoln in 1889, and possibly is still standing.

Thomas Andrews served the town as Constable in 1654 and 1661; selectman, 1670, 1672, 1676, 1679, 1685, 1687, and 1688.* He was sent from Hingham, as Representative to the General Court, May 8, 1678.†

In the uprising of the people against the tyranny of Sir Edmund Andros, "Cap: Tho<sup>s</sup> Andrews" was chosen to represent the town "At the Council for the Safety of the People and Conservation of the Peace," in the sessions of May 22, June 5, October 24, and December 3, 1689.‡

On the 18th of April, 1689, Edmund Andros was arrested by the inhabitants of Boston.§ The next day, the conduct of public affairs was assumed by the Council of Safety, of which Simon Bradstreet was chosen President.|| On May

§ "In 1686 when Sir Edmond Andros came to New England as Governor . . . the rights of property were so invaded, according to Increase Mather, that no man could call anything his own. Danforth wrote, 'Our condition is little inferior to absolute slavery.' When the people pleaded for habeas corpus and the simple rights of Magna Charta, Andros answered with a gibe.

"With Dudley censor of the press, the General Court abolished, the assembling of a town meeting made an act of sedition, it is certain that to those then living the times seemed big with dangers." Vide The Social Unrest, by John Graham Brooks, 1903: 73-74.

8th, acting doubtless under the orders of this extraordinary body, the Train Band of Hingham went to Boston, where the next day were gathered the sixty-six Representatives of forty-four towns. Cushing's diary tells us that a town-meeting was held in Hingham, on the 17th of the same month, to choose a member of the Council; and the choice fell upon Captain Thomas Andrews, already distinguished in town affairs. "It was an honor wisely bestowed."

In 1684, Thomas Andrews had been appointed Sergeant of the Train Band; but soon after he was elected their Captain. On the 6th of August, 1690, he and a number of his company joined the ill-fated expedition under Sir William Phips for the reduction of Canada, Sir William having chosen Captain Thomas Andrews as one of the twenty-one captains that he desired should go with him. Three days later (August 9), they set sail from Hull, "near Boston," with a fleet of thirty-two ships and tenders, and more than two thousand men on board the whole fleet.

Adverse winds up the St. Lawrence River delayed them so that it was the 5th of October when they dropped anchor near Quebec. The castle was commanded by Frontenac, an old and distinguished French officer, who repulsed the attacks of the Colonial troops for two days. After suffering great loss, appalled at the severity of the wintry weather which had set in, Sir William Phips started on his return to Boston with the remnant of his army and fleet. On the way home, the fleet was scattered by "cross-winds;" one vessel never was heard from, a second was wrecked, and a third was lost on an uninhabited shore, so that all the men either were starved or drowned. In addition, the small-pox broke out among the troops, and many were stricken with "a kind of Camp-Fever."

The few survivors reached the harbor of Boston on November 9; but some died, even then, before they could be taken to their homes. Most of the Hingham men died on this expedition; and on November 25, 1690,* Captain Thomas Andrews succumbed to the hardships he had endured. His age was fifty-eight years. There evidently was an error in the town records as to the time of his death, as his will was dated November 26, 1690. Captain Andrews was in very comfortable circumstances, wealthy for those times. His will was as follows:—

That Captain Thomas Andrews signed this document with his mark was due to weakness, for he was a man of more than ordinary education. The inventory of his estate, which amounted to £724:7:6, is especially interesting :—

"Ex<sup>t</sup> Joseph Webb cler."

Ruth, widow of Thomas Andrews, and the mother of all his children, was mentioned in the will of Joseph Andrews (1679) as "Ruth Andrews my daughter in law," with the gift of "my newest chest." She survived her husband many years, and passed away at Hingham, October 23, 1732, in her ninety-seventh year.

STEPHEN<sup>4</sup> ANDREWS

* Matthew Hawke, from Cambridge, England, embarked with his wife, Margaret, and servant, John Fearing, in the ship Diligent, of Ipswich, for New England, and arrived August 10, 1638. The following year they were residents of Hingham, and lived on Main Street at the centre of the town.

Matthew Hawke was made freeman May 18, 1642; was the third Town Clerk of Hingham; Selectman, 1663; also schoolmaster, 1679-83.

Margaret Hawke died in Hingham, March 18, 1683-84; her husband following, Dec. 11, 1684, aged seventy-four years (gravestone inscription). He made his will Sept. 24, 1684.

† Vide The Stetson Family.

Bethia<sup>3</sup> Hawke was first cousin to Deborah<sup>3</sup> Hawke, born January 14, 1691-92 (daughter to James<sup>2</sup> and Sarah (Jacob) Hawke), who was married May 2, 1716, to John<sup>4</sup> Lewis, of Hingham. John<sup>4</sup> and Deborah<sup>3</sup> (Hawke) Lewis were the parents of Judge John<sup>5</sup> Lewis,* of North Yarmouth, who married, in 1746, Mary<sup>5</sup> Mitchell, eldest daughter to Jacob<sup>4</sup> Mitchell, Jr., of North Yarmouth, half-brother to Seth<sup>4</sup> Mitchell.

By the will of his grandfather, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, Stephen<sup>4</sup> Andrews was to become the possessor of "an Iron pott," after the death of his grandmother. His father, Thomas<sup>3</sup> Andrews, first giving to his eldest son, Thomas<sup>4</sup>, the homestead and other property, provided that the remaining portion of "all my four sons shall be equall."

Stephen Andrews, by trade a weaver, removed from Hingham soon after the birth of his third child, Benjamin, in 1706; but there is no record that shows his place of residence during the intervening years between that date and 1734, when he is mentioned as of Duxbury:—

"Stephen Andrews, Jonathan Peterson and Reuben Peterson, all of Duxborough in the County of Plymouth . . . do jointly own, and are possessed of a certain peice of salt meadow lying

ELIZABETH ANDREWS"

A few years later, Stephen Andrews appeared as a resident of Pembroke when he purchased, for £39, of Joshua Hopkins, of Taunton, a homestead in Taunton consisting of twenty acres in the home-lot and twenty acres additional. This was on March 28, 1738. In 1747, Stephen Andrews purchased, for £50, of James Andrews, of Taunton, one sixth of James's land.†

As both the Town and Church records of Taunton, previous to 1820, were burned, very little can be learned of Stephen Andrews in that town. A compilation of Taunton records, made up from every available source, bears this item: "Old Stephen Andrews died 4th March 1770."‡ His age was ninety-eight years. His will, dated October 20, 1762, when he was ninety years of age, was proved April 30, 1770. There is no record of the death of his wife Bethia, but a second "wife Mary" is named in his will: § —

His ownership of the "Great bible . . . Concordance . . . Secatarys Gide . . . Gospell Church, and all the Rest of my books to be Equally Divided between" his grandsons, Stephen and Thomas Andrews, proves him to have been much more scholarly than the average person of that period. When his will was allowed, April 30, 1770, Edward Doty and John Winslow were appointed executors. The inventory, submitted May 1, 1770, mentions clothing, "great Bible," looms, farm tools, beds and bedding, household goods, dishes of iron, pewter, "earthen," and wood; linen, a black cow, red cow, red heifer, and a "mair." Total valuation, £169 : 14 : 10.*

THE STETSON FAMILY

ROBERT<sup>1</sup> STETSON, b. 1612, tradition says, came from County Kent, England. A Stetson coat-of-arms, found among ancient papers once belonging to him, has been reproduced in a small pamphlet written, in 1847, by Mr. John Stetson Barry, and is considered authentic. The spelling of this family name in New England was somewhat erratic, as was common at that period ; but during Robert's later years it usually was "Studson." Some of his sons retained that form, though most of them changed it to Stetson.

Early in 1634, Robert Stetson appeared as a resident of Scituate, Massachusetts. The name of his first wife is nowhere recorded, and is unknown. She is supposed to have been the mother of all his children, the first of whom was born in June, 1639. His second wife, the widow Mary Bryant, survived him. After many years of usefulness in the affairs of the town and of Plymouth Colony, Robert Stetson died where he had spent his life, in Scituate, on February 1, 1702-03, at the advanced age of ninety years, — "having lived long and left a good name."

His farm was situated on the banks of the North River, his house being located on a beautiful plain nearly opposite "Cornet's Rocks." These rocks, jutting out of the river east of the farm, are well known to this day. An unfailing and valuable spring of water, from which eight generations* of the family have been supplied, marks the spot upon which the house stood. July 3, 1653, this farm was further enlarged, as follows: "Fifty acres of land is graunted [by the General Court] to Robert Studson, aded to twenty acres which he hath bought, which was James Daus his land, for which said Robert Studson shewed a deed in Court; the said fifty acars of land to lye to the seaward of Plymouth Path, towards the Indian Head Riuer, incase it has been found not to intrench on any former graunts; and incase it shalbee soe found to doe, then to haue it in soñ other conuenient place where hee shall find it."*

About 1653, Robert Studson, who was a carpenter,† Timothy Hatherly, and Joseph Tilden erected a saw-mill on the "Third Herring Brook," in Scituate, where remains of the dam still are to be seen. For this mill a very extensive tract was overflowed, now called "The Old Pond." In 1676, the mill was burned by the Indians, and never was rebuilt. Later, for valuable services rendered the struggling Colony, there was "graunted by the Court vnto Cornett Studson, two hundred acres of land . . . on the southerly side of the three mile square of land formerly graunted vnto M<sup>r</sup> Hatherly . . . to be layed out for him by Leiftenant James Torrey." This order was dated June 7, 1665; but Lieutenant Torrey having deceased, "The major and Treasurer [were] appointed by the Court to lay out the two hundred acres of land graunted vnto Cornett Studson," the bounds of which were fixed March 5, 1666-67, "on the north side by those lands that were graunted att Accord Pond."‡

In 1668, Cornet Stetson was commissioned to purchase from the Sachem Josias Chickatabutt, for the use of the Colony, a tract of land mainly included in the present towns of Hanover and Abington. It was near Accord Pond, south of land formerly granted to Mr. Timothy Hatherly. It was called by the Indians "Nanumackeuitt." The deed was made out April 13, 1668, and recorded in 1674; the witnesses were Josias Winslow and John Browne. On July 10, 1669, this land was conveyed to the Cornet, "for £7.5<sup>s</sup> of Currant New England pay," by "Thos. Prence, Governor . . . to the proper use and behoof of him the sd. Robert Stetson, hee his heires and assignes forever."*

"Robte Steedson" was chosen Constable of Scituate, March 7, 1642-43; he also appeared that year in the list of males "able to beare Armes." June 3, 1652, "Robert Studson" was made freeman.† He was on the "Grand Enquest," June 7, 1652; "on pettye jury or jury of life and death," March 6, 1654-55, March 5, 1660-61; and, as "Cornett Studson," on jury, March 3, 1662-63, and March 3, 1665-66.‡ "Cornett Robert Studson" was "approved by the Court as a selectman of Scittuate, June 5, 1666," June 2, 1667, June 22, 1674, and other years.§ He was sent as Deputy from Scituate to the General Court of Plymouth twenty-two sessions, which began on these dates:—

The military title of Cornet had been bestowed upon him October 6, 1659; at which time "Captaine William Bradford, Leiftenant John Freeman, and Cornett Robert Studson [were] confeirmed by the Court to bee comission officers of the troop of horse." † This was the first "Light Horse Corps" raised in the Colony. He previously had been on a committee "For the cecuring of the countreyes powder [and] to hier workmen to make a place to secure it in." June 10, 1662, when "the Major," Captain Southworth, and Captain Bradford were appointed by the Court "to draw vp a forme of comission for military officers [there were] aded vnto these . . . for advice and counsell . . . Cornett Studson" and three lieutenants.‡ Early in the year 1667, this "Troop of Horse" was sent on a "journey to the sachem Phillip in behalfe of the countrey," for which "the Major" received £5, as his due. At the same time (June 5, 1667), "the Treasurer" received £3, Captain Southworth 40<sup>s</sup>, and "Cornett Robert Studson, his horse, time and paines 40<sup>s</sup>;" while "two shillings and sixpence a day [was] allowed vnto the troopers . . . on the abouesaid expedition." § treaties of amity, the town fathers of Scituate ordered additional garrisons for defence; and also ordered that the "twenty three men from Scituate . . . pressed for this war" be "raised." General Cudworth, Cornet Stetson, Isaac Chittenden, and Joseph White were chosen a committee "to procure clothing &c., for the soldiers." After the "Narragansett fight" of December 25, 1675, the Indians became still more troublesome, committing ravages in every direction. In May, 1676, following an attack on Hingham, where they burned five houses, they went into Scituate by the "Indian path," which led from Scituate to the Matakeeset settlements at Indian Head Ponds, by the Cornet's mill on the Third Herring Brook. This saw-mill they burned, on May 30. The losses in the town of Scituate were given: * "13 dwelling houses burnt with their barns—one saw mill—six heads of families and many others killed and made cripples." †

The veteran Cornet Stetson during this period was constantly on horseback, either in making voluntary excursions, as tradition asserts, with General Cudworth, also "waxing old," or in returning to encourage the garrisons at home, or in guiding the directions of the Council of War. In consideration of these services and losses by the destruction of the Indians, "Major Cudworth" ‡ and "Cornett Studson" were awarded by the authorities of Plymouth Colony £12 out of the £124 : 10, which was their allotment of the £450 sent over in 1676 from Ireland, termed the "Irish Donation." §

On April 2, 1667, Cornet Stetson was appointed "to be ‡ Early in 1675, Major James Cudworth was advanced to the rank of General (at 6s a day), a title then bestowed for the first time in the Colony. After six months' service in command of the troops, he retired to civil life; but the title of Major still clung to him.

Cornet Robert Stetson also was something of a surveyor, his earliest appointment by the Court dating June 7, 1659, when he was one of a committee of three chosen "to run the line betwixt the Bay goŭrment and vs." † Not, however, until five years later — May 29, 1664 — did the commissioners of the two Colonies report to the General Court of Massachusetts Bay, the "bound lĳne betwixt the colonjes of the Massachusetts Bay and New Plĳmouth." This report was signed by three commissioners from each government, as follows: —

Cornet Stetson frequently was chosen to "lay out land," to "view the land," to "view a fence;" and, June 3, 1668, he was chosen surveyor of highways for the town of Scituate. When Thomas Andrews made petition to the Court in behalf of two "ancient servants of the town . . . that a supply of land be settled vpon them," the Court ordered "the Treasurer and Cornett Studson to lay out to each of them sixty acres of land." This was on July 7, 1668. The Cornet was appointed June 3, 1679, surveyor of highways by the General Court of Plymouth Colony. In 1678 and 1679, Cornet Stetson and Mr. Nathaniel Thomas were appointed by the Court "collectors of the rents for the proffitts of the Cape fishing," for bass and mackerel.*

Yet, with all these positions of trust filled so acceptably by Cornet Stetson, nothing exceeds in interest or importance his connection with the Kennebec trade. The Plymouth Colonists early had established, at the mouth of the Kennebec River, a trading-post with the Indians, which was a constant source of trouble and disappointment. They hoped much from it, but it never had been profitable. On July 2, 1655, "M<sup>r</sup> Josias Winslow, Sen<sup>r</sup>, M<sup>r</sup> Josias Winslow, Jun<sup>r</sup>, M<sup>r</sup> Hinckley, Th<sup>o</sup> Clarke and Robert Studson," were appointed by the General Court "as a comitte to meett with the majestrates att the next Court of Assistants, to treat with them about letting of the trade att Kennebecke, and about regulateing the disorders of the goũment there." October 6, 1659, this committee had "covenanted and agreed together with the farmers of the said traid, viz: M<sup>r</sup> Thomas Prence, Mistris Allice Bradford, Seni<sup>r</sup>, Captaine Thomas Willet, and Major Josias Winslow;" and the paper was signed by both parties, the only ones making their marks being Mrs. Alice Bradford (widow of the Governor, who had died two years before) and Robert Studson:—

"The marke of  ROBERT STUDSON."†

* Plymouth Colony Records, Court Orders, vol. 4: 181, 189; vol. 6: 12, 18.

† Plymouth Colony Records, vol. 3: 87, 170. It is not quite clear why he should have made his mark here, as his autograph signature appeared several times afterward—notably May 29, 1664.

June 13, of the following year, "Leiftenant Southworth, Mr Constant Southworth and Cornett Studson, and Mr Josias Winslow Senir., or any three of them [were authorized] either to sell or otherwise dispose of the said trad[e] in the countreyes behalfe." The measures taken evidently were successful, since at a meeting of the General Court, June 1, 1663, "Cornett Studson was appointed by the Court to accompany the Treasurer in demanding and receiueing the moneyes due to the countrey from the purchasers of Kennebecke;" and at the same meeting it was ordered by the Court "that a convenient, handsome rome [room] be aded to the Goũnor's house, and that the charg of the building therof bee defrayed out of the pay for Kennebecke, if that kind of pay will doe it . . . the major, the Treasurer, and Cornett Studson are impowered to take course for the procureing of the thinge done." * For this Kennebec service, Cornet Stetson received the grant previously mentioned of two hundred acres of land adjoining that of Mr. Timothy Hatherly.

During the "Inter-Charter" period, shortly before Andros was appointed Governor, "The Town being met together [May 27, 1686], and the New Book of Laws being read, and being sensible of our inability to undergo the Change which this new form will occasion, and what consequences thereby may accrue, if changes shall come, and being desirous to prevent what may be hurtful, chose Mr John Cushing, Samuel Clap, Capt. John Williams, Cornet Robert Stetson, Jeremiah Hatch, Elder Thomas King, and Isaac Buck, to draw up our grievances and impart their apprehensions to the Town before the next Court." The committee reported at the next town-meeting an elaborately extended protest against existing conditions and the "expected changes" of government. † This action of the town of Scituate, in which Cornet Stetson bore a leading part, is more noticeable from the fact that the general uprising of the people did not occur until three years later — 1689.

Throughout these years of hardship and danger, no citizen of Scituate bore a stronger part in the affairs of the town and Colony than Cornet Robert Stetson. His advice and assistance were sought, both in public and private capacities, and to no one did he turn a deaf ear. The last few years of retirement at his home were well earned. His will, dated Scituate, September 4, 1702, when he had reached the age of ninety years, shows that he had retained his mental faculties to a remarkable degree, although through physical infirmities it is signed with a mark. On February 1, 1702-03, he passed away. Ten days later, the inventory of his property was taken; it was presented on March 5, at the time his will was proved: —

In her father's will she was called Hannah Lincoln; it is probable that it was she who was mar. April 25, 1705, to Solomon Lincoln.

II. Benjamin<sup>s</sup>, b. Aug., 1641, bap. Oct. 6, 1645, in Scituate. (Vide infra.)

III. Thomas<sup>s</sup>, b. Dec. 11, 1643, bap. Oct. 6, 1645, in Scituate. His wife, whom he mar. in 1671, was Sarah, daughter to Anthony Dodson. dition of 1690, under Sir William Phips, Scituate furnished sixteen men. Joseph Sylvester was Captain; Israel Chittenden, Lieutenant; and John Stetson, Ensign. Ensign John Stetson served at the taking of Port Royal and the attempt to take Quebec, and died during the expedition. In the settlement of his estate, the Court ordered "that the oldest son John shall have and enjoy the house and land which his father died seized of," when said son shall attain to the age of twenty-one years, he paying to his sister Honour and to Barnabas his brother, each of them, fifty shillings, when they are twenty-one or are married, "which shall first happen." The widow was to have the use of all goods and chattels until the heir should come of age, for bringing up her children; she was to pay to Abigail, the eldest daughter, and to Anne, the youngest, each fifty shillings upon marriage or at the age of twenty-one years. The widow of Ensign John Stetson, in 1703, received £10 from the estate of her father-in-law, Cornet Robert Stetson. Deane says that the name of this widow was Mary, but the will clearly gives it Abigail. Issue: 1. Abigail<sup>s</sup>. 2. John<sup>s</sup>. 3. Honour<sup>s</sup>. 4. Barnabas<sup>s</sup>. 5. - VI. Eunice<sup>2</sup>, b. April 28, bap. May 19, 1650, in Scituate; was mar. to John<sup>2</sup> Rogers, son to John<sup>1</sup> Rogers. "Eunice Rogers" was remembered by her father with a legacy of £10.
- VII. Lois<sup>2</sup>, b. Feb., 1652, in Scituate; probably died before her father, as he did not mention her in his will.
- VIII. Robert<sup>2</sup>, b. Jan. 19, bap. Feb. 26, 1653, in Scituate. The year that he was married, 1676, his house was burned by Indians. On June 3, 1684, he was chosen Constable of Scituate,* but there is no record of his family in that town. In 1711, he was of Pembroke, and in 1712, he and his son Isaac were named in a list of the heads of families there. #### BENJAMIN<sup>3</sup> STETSON

"Benjamin Studson" was chosen Constable for the town of Scituate, June 3, 1668; and again, June 2, 1685.† In 1684, he was on a committee to make the rate; June 2, 1685, he served on a jury at the General Court. As Benjamin "Stetson," he appeared as Deputy from his native town to the General Court, two sessions in the year 1691, commencing June 2 and July 7. ‡

When the Massachusetts Bay Colony lost her charter in 1684, and her civil rights under the rule of Sir Edmund Andros in 1686, the Plymouth Colony fared no better. "If the stronger colony fell prostrate, what could the weaker do?" The power of Andros terminated with his arrest, April 8, 1689, as a result of the insurrection spreading over the country, which he termed "a general buzzing among the people." Every effort was put forth to reunite the scattered forces of the two colonies in their respective governments, and the strongest men were sent to represent the several towns. These colonies gradually had been tending toward each other, and Benjamin Stetson's services in 1691, as Deputy, were in the last sessions of the Plymouth Colony

Court.* On October 7, 1691, the two colonies were united under a new charter, as the Royal Province of Massachusetts Bay. The Governor was to be appointed by the Crown.

"Mr Benj<sup>a</sup> Stutson" was Representative from the town of Scituate to the legislature of Massachusetts Bay in the sessions commencing May 31 and November 8, 1693. He also served in the same capacity, as "Capt Benj<sup>a</sup> Stutson," May 9, 1700, and throughout that year.† "His Ex<sup>ty</sup> Richard [Coote], Earl of Bellomont, &c," was then the Royal Governor.

A second company of militia was established at Scituate in 1695, and the town records state "that the Commands of Capt. Chittenden on the north, and Capt. Stetson on the south were to be limited by the first Herring brook."‡ This year, probably, was the date of Benjamin Stetson's commission as Captain.

Captain Stetson was prominent in the church, as well as in civil and military affairs. In 1698, he was chosen with Deacon Thomas King "to go to the neighboring elders and acquaint them with our present state and condition and intreat their advice what sd. church may and ought to do." At a subsequent meeting they were appointed "to look out and get a minister for us." In 1702, he was chosen on a committee to settle Mr. Eels. In 1708, he was chosen with Mr. Collamore to make application to the town to rectify a mistake in laying out some of the parsonage land.§

He died May 4, 1711. His widow, "Bethya Stetson Relict of Capt Benj. Stetson late of Scituate deceased," was appointed administratrix of his estate, June 11, 1711; and, at the same time, a committee was appointed to appraise the land. The inventory, taken June 1, mentions books, arms and ammunition, beds and bedding, wool, linen, pewter and earthen ware, glass and iron, carpenter's tools,

The division of the estate, according to the account of Mrs. Bethia Stetson, "exhibeted June 27, 1715, and allowed," gave to the widow her thirds. REBECCA<sup>6</sup> PRATT

THE PRATT FAMILY

MATTHEW PRATT, the Weymouth Planter, is supposed to have come to New England with the Gorges Company that began the first permanent settlement at Weymouth, in August, 1623. He may have been a relative of Phineas and Joshua Pratt, who were at Plymouth in 1627,* but there is no record that establishes any connection. They all came from England, where the name of Pratt, which occurs among the earliest English surnames, is spelled variously in ancient writings. Some of its forms are: Prat, Prate, Pratt, Pratte; and, still earlier, Du Pre, De Preaux, de Pratellis, etc.; all supposed to have been derived from the Latin pratium, a meadow.

The Pratt family undoubtedly went to England from Normandy, where, in 1096, a number of that name joined the crusaders. In 1173, Hamelin and Matthew de Pratellis were of the party of the Earl of Chester and Ralph de Fougues, who joined Louis of France in the revolt of Normandy against Henry II, in which all the sons of the King were engaged against their father. The Pratts appear in many counties of the British Isle, notably Suffolk, York, and Leicester, as Knights of the Shire and as members of Parliament. They also married into titled families, and one Matthew Pratt was the younger son of a British Lord. Another Matthew Pratt was the second son of John Pratt, of Appleby, County Leicester, whose will, dated July 7, 1611, was proved December 10, 1612.† It is known that Matthew Pratt, of Weymouth, was of a knighted branch, but the writer has been unable to obtain copies of the papers sent over from England that prove it.

Little can be learned of the earlier years of Matthew Pratt in Weymouth, though the settlement there, called Wessaguscus, was second to that of Plymouth. It was the scene of the failure of Weston's Colony, upon the site now locally known as "Old Spain," in 1622, and of the more permanent settlement by Captain Robert Gorges, son to Sir Ferdinando Gorges, in 1623. On July 8, 1635, it was recorded: "There is leave graunted to 21 ffamilyes to sitt downe at Wessaguscus." On September 2, 1635, the name of Wessaguscus is "hereafter to be called Waymothe;" and, at the same session of Court, it was "Ordered that Waymothe shall have a Deputy." On May 13, 1640, "Mathewe Prat" was made a freeman of Massachusetts Bay Colony.* That year, a large body of new settlers arrived; but it was not until December, 1641, that the dated town records were begun.† A few earlier items were incorporated, particularly of possessions of land. The First Church of Weymouth names 1623 as its date of organization, but all its records prior to 1724 were destroyed by fire.

Land was granted to Matthew Pratt at "A General Court holden at Boston the 7th day of 10th month, December, A. D. 1636;" it was recorded, with grants to other old settlers, on the earliest existing records of Weymouth:—

"THE LAND OF MATTHEW PRATT

"Twenty acres in the mill field twelue of them first giuen to Edward Bates and eyght acres to him selfe all ofit bounded on the East with the land of John Gill on the west with the land of Richard Wealing on the north with Rocky hill on the south with the land of Richard Addames and Thomas Baly also Eighteen ackers of vpland first giuen to Edward Bennet now in the possession of mathew pratt bounded on ye east with the mill Riuier on the west with John whittmans lot on the north with y<sup>e</sup> mill ground on y<sup>e</sup> south with y<sup>e</sup> pond."*

Mill River flows from South Weymouth, in a northeasterly direction through Weymouth, into Whitman's Pond. Land that was bounded with Mill River on the east and "y<sup>e</sup> pond" (not Whitman's, but a smaller pond) on the south, must have been a mile southeast of the present centre of Weymouth. There are several families of Pratt descent still living in the neighborhood, but their houses are of comparatively recent date.

The name "Macut Prat" appears among the names of "townsmen," or selectmen, signed to a report of their meeting, "the Last Day of the Last Month 1648." † In 1649 and 1650, he continued as townsman; but in the town-meeting of March, 1650-51, his name is not seen. His autograph again appears in "The names of the Townsmen . . . The first Day of the 12 moth 1657."

"macuth Pratt" ‡

The same name, "macuth Pratt," is number two in a list, dated February 3, 1651, of those entitled to great lots, — "which great lots are to but on Hingham line on the East." §

As in other places, the early Planters of Weymouth were greatly troubled by the depredations of wild animals and birds; so much so that, in 1657, a bounty was offered by the town authorities for killing them :—

"[The] Town is Debitor to seuerall [per]sons for Service done & vpon account as followth: 1657 : 11 moth . . . To Macuth Pratt for a wolfe & woodp[ecker] : [£]1-6-8 payed in boards." ||

In the distribution of land by the selectmen, Matthew Pratt received grants, as follows: "1658. The 17th Day of the 10 moth" . . . it was "ordered also that Mar. Pratt should have a Swamp lot at the same place [the Great Swamp] to be layd out by Sergeant Whitmarsh." He also was to have four acres of upland, to be laid out in some convenient place "neere the head of the pond above the mill & Joyning to the Great lotts." On December 19, 1659, he was given "an Iland in the fresh pond above the mill as an addition to the fower acreses formerly graunted him;" to which was added a lot in "guppies Swamp."† In the first division, Dec. 14, 1663, of "great Lotts" beginning on the Braintree line, "Micaeth Pratt" was granted ten acres in lot fifty-one; his sons Thomas, Matthew, and John, [ ] "Acres 4, Lot 62," "Acres 5, Lot 73," respectively. In the second division, that year, "Miceth Pratt" was assigned "Acres 30, Lot 52;" while his son Thomas received "Acres 21, Lot 20," and Matthew, "Acres 12, Lot 44." The son John was not mentioned in the second division.‡

The wife of Matthew<sup>1</sup> Pratt was Elizabeth Bate or Bates. She is said to have been daughter to an older brother of Elder Edward<sup>1</sup> Bates, of Weymouth, whom Matthew names in his will as "kinsman," but there is no evidence that the older men of the name in the town or state were related to Edward. It is more probable that Elizabeth was sister to Edward Bates. She was generously provided for by the will of her husband, of which she was made sole executrix. Very little of the property was to go to the children until after her death, which occurred in 1676.

Matthew Pratt died October ("8<sup>mo</sup>") 29, 1672, in Weymouth. His will, dated March 25, 1672, was proved April 30, 1673, as follows : —

I. John<sup>2</sup>, b. about 1622, probably in England. He was made freeman of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, May 10, 1643,* which is proof that he was then of age. On Nov. 22, 1656, he mar. Mary<sup>2</sup>, daughter to John<sup>1</sup> Whitman, of Weymouth; she d. July 10, 1716, three months before her husband, aged eighty-two years.

John Pratt, lovingly called "uncle John" by his numerous nephews and nieces, exercised a fatherly care over the whole town. His house was a landmark; and, in the affairs of his family and friends, he was sought as a witness, appraiser, or executor, again and again, particularly in the later part of his life. In 1684, and probably other years, he was Constable;† he also held other town offices. He accumulated a considerable estate. By trade, he was a cooper; late in life, he was called a husbandman. No children are recorded, and he probably never had any, which would account for the small bequest of his father in his will of "one ewe and lamb."

John Pratt d. Oct. 3, 1716, in Weymouth, aged not less than ninety-four years. His will, signed with his autograph, "John Pratt," and dated July 12, 1714, was proved Nov. 19, 1716, at Boston,‡ by William Dyer and Mary Dyer, executors. It said that he was "aged and weake in body but of Perfect mind & Memory;" provided that his wife Mary (who passed away before him) should enjoy the "whole estate," both real and personal, "for her Support and Comfortable Maintenance during her Natural life;" and set "at perfect liberty and freedom" his two "servants," or slaves, Ruth Pratt and Silence Critchfield, with presents of goods and money, and "Liberty to dwell in my house until they See Cause to Dispose of themselves otherways." John Pratt also gave to his "kinsman John Gurney Twenty and five pound when he Shall arive at the age of Twenty one years if he live with me so long as I live or to the age aforesaid ;" to his "nephew Lieu<sup>t</sup> John Pratt [son to Samuel<sup>2</sup>] of Weymouth," £10; and to his "nephew Deacon Thomas Pratt of North Purchase [Easton]," £10. To his nephew, Ebenezer<sup>3</sup> Pratt, youngest son to Samuel<sup>2</sup>, he gave the sum of "fourty pound if he Do bring up a Son of his at the Colledge and when he dose put his Son to the Grammar School, in Order there unto to have five pound paid to him and so five pounds p year until the forty pound be paid." Lastly, he gave the "residue of my whole Estate," after his wife's decease, to Mary Dyer, daughter to Samuel<sup>2</sup> Pratt, who had lived in his family before her marriage, and "now near two years Since She was married together with her husband William Dyer . . . provided they Continue with us and be faithful to and careful of us." By this arrangement he secured for himself and his wife the attention they needed in their extreme old age.

- II. Thomas<sup>2</sup>, b. in Weymouth as early as 1626, since, on May 26, 1647, he became a freeman of Massachusetts Bay Colony.* His first wife was Mary —; his second wife, who survived him, was the widow Lydia —. In the first division of land in Weymouth, Dec. 14, 1663, Thomas Pratt is named with the grantees, but the amount of land is not given; in the second division, 1663, he received twenty-one acres in lot number twenty, on the Braintree line. By the will of his father, dated 1672, he was to become the possessor of more than thirty acres of land, after the decease of his mother; but he probably died before her, in the same year.

Sergeant Thomas Pratt, of the Weymouth Militia, was killed by the Indians not far from his home in Weymouth. The date is shown by the "Diary" of his eldest son, William, who wrote: "My father was slaine by the Indians the. 19th day of April, in the year 1676." This encounter was the occasion of a petition from the Town to the General Court representing "the danger to the terror-stricken town and asking for protection, and at least that six men impressed for general service may be discharged and returned to the distressed town." William Torrey, Captain of the Weymouth Militia, also petitioned the Court that more "men should remain at home and defend their own firesides," for we "have the enemy appearing daily at our very doors, four killed already, all in danger wheresouer we go; in expectation every day and hour of being assaulted, stand continually on our guard, whereby planting is obstructed and all things turning into confusion and destruction." * The losses which the town sustained in this war were sufficiently severe to induce the General Court to allow the abatement of a portion of its tax.†

Thomas Pratt left no will; but the inventory of the estate of "Serg<sup>t</sup> Thomas Pratt of Weymoth, who was Slain by the Indians the 19th day of April 1676," ‡ was "apprized by Elder Edward Bate and John Kingman." Besides household goods, a variety of farming-tools, produce, and a few cattle, it mentions: "a dwelling house barne & part of the Orchard adjoining," £45; "13 acres  $\frac{1}{2}$  neere the house 4 acres by Rich<sup>d</sup> Fosters and 2 acres in weary land," £66; " $\frac{3}{4}$  of Salt Marsh by bound brooke and 1 acre  $\frac{3}{4}$  at Hockley," £20; marsh and land at "Drakes lott," £11.10; "18 acres at the old cedar Swamp plain" and "21 acres in the 1st and 2<sup>d</sup> division," £7; "13 acres of Land neare the house that was the widdow Pools house," £10; "a Sword," £6; "The Estate the widdow brought with her apprised — in pewter," £1:05:05; and "an Iland in the fresh pond about two acres," £2. Total value of the estate, £278:11:01.

Lydia Pratt, widow of Thomas, who had been appointed one of the administrators, "appearing in Court July 27, 1676," declared that she had agreed with John Pratt, the other administrator, as follows: "to bee paid . . . twenty pounds in money . . . and to have all the Estate Shee brought with her . . . in full of her Dower." "Brother John Pratt and brother-in-law White" were appointed guardians to the four children under age. In the division of the estate, Jan. 27, 1679-80, it was set forth that John Pratt, administrator and guardian, with Thomas White, the other guardian, and Ephraim Frost, husband of the eldest daughter, Hepzibah, agreed as to the division.*

Issue: 1. Hepzibah<sup>s</sup>, b. about 1653; since she is mentioned in the settlement of her father's estate, in 1676, as "about twenty-three years" of age. Before Jan. 27, 1679-80, she was mar. to Ephraim Frost.

2. Sarah<sup>s</sup>; called "helpless and incapable" in the settlement of the estate of her father. Her grandfather, in his will, left £5 to Sarah, daughter to his son Thomas, "at my wives decease."

3. William<sup>s</sup>. During his life he kept a little "Pocket Almanac, or Diary;" a few extracts from it best tell his history: "I was borne on the 6th of March in the year 1659. I was married the 26th day of Oct. in the year 1680. I removed from Weymouth to bridge-water the 19th day of December in the year 1705. — removed from Weymouth to dorchester about the middle of April in the year 1690. I was taken sick with the smal pox the 26th day of March in the year 1691. In the year 1697, the 16th day of December I was ordained Ruling elder of the Church of Christ. Swearing in a religious manner is a duty when called unto it."

This perhaps needs a little explanation. His wife was Elizabeth Baker, of Dorchester, in New England, who was b. 1655; d. Aug. 20, 1728, aged seventy-three years. In 1690, they removed from Weymouth to Dorchester, where he became interested in an organization "for Carrying the Gospel Ordinances" to South Carolina. In the "Brigantine Friendship," of Boston, he sailed with the expedition to Ashley River, above Charleston, where a town was planted named Dorchester. It was there that he was ordained Ruling Elder over this small "religious colony." The climate did not agree with him, and he soon returned to Weymouth. In 1705, he removed to Bridgewater, Mass.; and subsequently (about 1711) to Easton, where he died Jan. 13, 1713. His grave and that of his wife are in the Old Burying-Ground at Easton.

The inventory of his estate, valued at £429 : 11 : 06, includes "two young negroes, £50;" their names were Heber and Hagar. They became the property of the widow Elizabeth, and lived with her until she gave them their freedom and a portion of land, in 1722. Heber was called "Heber Honesty," and "was held in good esteem by all." The widow Elizabeth was mentioned as "a person of excelling Piety and uncommon prudence . . . one of a Charitable spirit."

Matthew Pratt received various grants of land from the town of Weymouth. After the decease of his mother, by the terms of his father's will he came into full possession of the homestead, "with all my Housing and all my orChards and my Land ajoyning."

Matthew Pratt and his wife were totally deaf; yet their large family of three sons and six daughters were carefully and intelligently reared, their infirmities not appearing in any of their descendants. The name of Matthew more frequently appears in this line than in any other.

Cotton Mather, in his "Magnalia," in connection with the ministry of the Rev. Thomas Thatcher, thus refers to the worthy couple : * —

"One Matthew Prat, whose religious parents had well instructed him in his minority, when he was twelve years of age became totally deaf through sickness, and so hath ever since continued. He was taught after this to write, as he had before to read; and both his reading and his writing he retaineth perfectly; but he has almost forgotten to speak; speaking but imperfectly, and scarce intelligibly, and very seldom. He is yet a very judicious Christian, and being admitted into the communion of the church, he has therein for many years behaved himself unto the extream satisfaction of good people in the neighbourhood. Sarah Prat, the wife of this man, is one also who was altogether deprived of her hearing by sickness when she was about the third year of her age; but having utterly lost her hearing, she utterly lost her speech also, and no doubt all remembrance of everything that refers to language. Mr. Thatcher made an essay to teach her the use of letters, but it succeeded not; however, she discourses by signs, whereat some of her friends are so expert as to maintain a conversation with her upon any point whatever, with as much freedom and fulness as if she wanted neither tongue nor ear for conference. Her children do learn her signs from the breast, and speak sooner by her eyes and hands than by their lips. From her infancy she was very sober and modest, but she had no knowledge of a Deity, nor of anything that concerns another life and world. Nevertheless, God of his infinite mercy has revealed the Lord Jesus Christ and the great mysteries of salvation by him unto her, by a more extraordinary and immediate operation of his own spirit upon her. An account of her experiences was written from her by her husband; and the elders of the church employing her husband, with two of her sisters, who are notably skilled in her way of conversation, examined her strictly hereabout: and they found that she understood the unity of the divine essence, the trinity of persons in the Godhead, the personal union in our Lord, the mystical union between our Lord and his church, and that she was acquainted with the impressions of grace upon a regenerate soul. . . . Yea, she once in her exercise, wrote with a pin upon a trencher, three times over, 'Ah, poor soul!' and therewith, before divers persons, burst into tears. . . . She was admitted into the church with the general approbation of the faithful, . . . and her carriage is that of a grave, gracious, holy woman."

This sketch of Matthew Pratt and his wife by Mather conveys to the thoughtful reader much of interest. It appears that they had some sort of a sign code, in which the sisters of Sarah Pratt also were skilled, that they used with considerable facility. Her writing "with a pin upon a trencher" is evidence that the endeavors of her pastor (the Rev. Mr. Thatcher) to teach her "the use of letters," were more successful than he thought; or that her husband had taught her later. The travail of soul through which she evidently passed, and catechising by the Elders of the church, were in accordance with religious methods of that time; and this "gracious, holy woman" was thus enabled to enjoy the privileges of church fellowship, which meant so much more to her than to others.

Matthew<sup>2</sup> Pratt d. Jan. 12, 1712-13, in Weymouth, aged eighty-five years. His will, dated July 30, 1711, was proved June 4, 1713, at Boston.* His three sons, Matthew, William, and Samuel, were named executors. He gave to his "Beloved wife Sarah Pratt" his dwelling-house and barn, with land adjoining, on "the way that leadeth to my Brother John Pratts house," together with all the personal estate, for life. The sons, Matthew and William, were to pay annually to their mother fifty and forty shillings, respectively. To his son Matthew he gave "All that my housing and Lands I bought of my cousin William Pratt," and other land; to his son William, various tracts of land; and to his son Samuel the homestead, after "my wifes decease." To his daughter, Susanna Porter, he bequeathed £10; to Mary Allen, £15; to Dorothy Whitman, £15; to Sarah Ford, £10; to Anne White, £13; and to his daughter, Hannah Whitmarsh, a lot of land "near the late Dwelling house of Samuel Whitmarsh in Weymouth." Stephen French, Sr., and Capt. John Hunt, "my loving Friends," he appointed to be "overseers." The will was signed with his autograph:—

"MATTHEW PRATT"

Nearly all the legacies were to be paid after the decease of his wife; in consideration of her infirmity, no inventory was taken of the estate until after her death, which occurred August 3, 1729, at the age of eighty-nine years. The inventory of the estate of "M<sup>r</sup> Matthew Pratt of Weymouth" was taken Dec. 6, 1731, as follows:—

Matthew Pratt, the eldest son, had long been a resident of Abington, William, the second son, died a year after his father, and Samuel, "one of the Surviving Executors," and the only son remaining in Weymouth, made oath that it was a true inventory of the estate of his father, at Boston, Dec. 13, 1731, before the "Hon<sup>ble</sup> Josiah Willard Esq<sup>r</sup>," Judge of Probate. Of all the sons of Matthew<sup>1</sup> Pratt, Matthew<sup>2</sup>, Jr., despite his infirmity, became the wealthiest.

His widow, Sarah, conveyed, June 12, 1720, to her children, "land which descended to [the said] Sarah Pratt from her father Hunt."* She was at that time eighty years of age.

On March 11, 1673-74, "Joseph Pratt Wejm" was made freeman of Massachusetts Bay Colony.* That he was of "Wejm [Weymouth]" was recorded to distinguish him from another Joseph Pratt, who was made freeman the previous year.

Joseph<sup>2</sup> Pratt was the youngest son, and lived with his parents until about the time of his marriage. In the town records, where his birth, marriage, and death appear, he is shown to have been prominent not only in town affairs, but in the church. In 1666 and 1673, he was a fence-viewer; in 1667, he cut five hundred shingles for his house. He was appointed, in 1681, to cut five cords of wood a year for the pastor; in 1682, was on a committee to rebuild the meeting-house. In 1685, he was a "way-warden;" 1686, a surveyor; 1693, named a "freeholder;" 1706, surveyor of highways; 1709, chosen to lay off land adjoining his own. In 1710, eighty-seven rods of land were laid out for Joseph Pratt, senior, bounded by land owned by himself and Samuel Whitmarsh, who had married his niece. His occupation was that of a "husbandman."

The death of Joseph Pratt occurred Dec. 24, 1720, in Weymouth, at the age of eighty-one years; his will, dated March 5, 1718-19, was presented for probate, at Boston, on Feb. 10, 1720-21,† by his son Samuel, executor. To his aged wife, Sarah, he bequeathed all the "moveables and Household goods and a good convenient maintenance so that she may live comfortably upon the Income of my Estate to be brought in unto her by my Executor." To his son Joseph he left ten shillings beside what he already had given him; to his "Son John Pratt, Ten Shillings if he should ever come hither again;" to his son William, five shillings "besides what he hath had of my Estate already." He gave ten shillings to Aaron Pratt, his son-in-law, to be equally divided between the children of "his late wife Sarah Pratt;" to his daughter, Experience Battle, £8, "beside what she has had;" and to his daughter, Hannah Hines (?), £5, "beside what she has had." His son Samuel was appointed the "only & sole executor," with the gift of all the "Housing Lands Messuages and Tenements in Weymouth and all my Meadow Land." This will was signed with the mark of Joseph Pratt, probably from illness, as he mentioned himself, at that time, "through . . . Old Age weak in Body;" it was witnessed by Edward Bate, John Reed, and Joshua Torrey.

2. Joseph<sup>a</sup>, b. Feb. 2, 1665, in Weymouth; mar., first, Sarah Benson, of Hull, by whom he had twenty children. He lived to a great age, and his will, dated March 13, 1755, when he was ninety years of age, mentions but seven of them.

In 1704, he sold a mill at Abington, and soon after removed to Bridgewater. As Joseph Pratt, Jr., he was a fence-viewer, surveyor of highways, etc., in Weymouth. In Bridgewater he served on the grand jury, Feb. 17, 1720, and as selectman in 1739. He was called "Little-leg Joe," on account of one leg being a trifle short.

The wife of his old age, whom he mar. Dec. 14, 1721, in Bridgewater, was Ann Richards; she d. March 21, 1766, aged ninety-two years. "The Boston News-Letter" of January 31, 1765, gives the following account of his death: "On the fourteenth of this month died at Bridgewater Joseph Pratt, aged 100 years. A man of good character and religious profession. He had twenty children by his first wife, but none by his second, who still survives him, about 90 years of age."

On Nov. 26, 1651, William Chard was granted lot number fifteen, in the "great lots on the East side of Fresh Pond, next to Mrs. Richard's mill." In the first division of the grant of 1663, he received "Acres 6, Lot 12," and in the second division, "Acres 18, Lot 53,"* on the west side of the town near the Braintree line. He was the schoolmaster of Weymouth almost continuously from April 10, 1667, to 1696; he also was chosen the first Town Clerk, and continued in that office many years. As the "Town Scrivener" he wrote many wills, as well as conveyances of land and public documents. On June 24, 1689, in a town-meeting, he was reëlected Clerk; and, at the same time, was appointed "to Ring the Bell & Sweep the Meeting house," his services to begin July 6, 1689. The pay for the latter was to be "forty shillings a year in money, or three pounds in town pay."

William Chard removed about 1696 to Abington, where he probably died. Elizabeth Chard d. Feb. 26, 1726, in Weymouth.

Samuel Pratt, fourth son to Matthew<sup>1</sup> and Elizabeth (Bate) Pratt, was born about 1637 in Weymouth, but the date of his birth is not upon the records. He married September 19, 1660, Hannah<sup>2</sup>, daughter to Deacon John<sup>1</sup> Rogers, of Weymouth.

Deacon John Rogers was in Weymouth before 1643, and probably was the John Rogers who was admitted freeman with Edward Bate, March 13, 1638-39.‡ He often has been confounded with others of the name who were early residents of Plymouth, Duxbury, Marshfield, and Scituate. Mr. Drummond, in his exhaustive researches to separate these men, believes that John Rogers of Weymouth "must have lived there for some years previous" to 1643; and that Judith, his widow, was probably a second wife.* He was selectman in "1645, 1646, 1652, when, as such, he witnessed the addition to the Indian deed of Weymouth, 1654, 1655, 1657, 1659," and other years; in 1651, he was chosen "town recorder." He died in Weymouth, February 1, 1661. The will of "Deacon John Rodgers [dated] this 8 12<sup>mo</sup> 1660" (written in the third person), bequeathed to his wife Judith the life use of her thirds; gave legacies to his son John, "without wife or child," to his daughter Mary Kane, wife of John Kane, to his daughter Lydia White, wife of Joseph White, and to his daughter Sarah Pratt; to his daughter "Hannah Pratt five pound." Samuel Pratt (not called son-in-law) was to have the son John's portion in case the latter died unmarried; † John, however, married January 29, 1662-63, Mary<sup>2</sup>, daughter to Elder Edward<sup>1</sup> Bate, of Weymouth, by whom he had several children.

Samuel Pratt was made freeman of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, May 23, 1666.‡ He was a large land-owner in Weymouth, and frequently filled town offices. On July 16, 1673, Samuel Pratt, of Weymouth, carpenter, and Hannah his wife, conveyed, for a valuable consideration, to his brother, John Pratt, one acre of salt marsh near John's house.§ By the terms of his father's will, Samuel Pratt was to receive "twelve acres of Land neare his House . . . and when he hath fenct it out as far as it is Pasture he shall have it and not before;" also an acre of salt marsh by John Pratt's house, which he conveyed to John, as above, soon after it came into his possession. To this was added a part of the "Comon lot . . . at Smelt Brook," two acres of swamp land in the woods, and "one Cow in stead of that spot I thought he should have in my orChard."

The exact date of the death of Samuel Pratt is not known ; but he died between April 12, 1679, the date of his will, and September 5 of that year, when his inventory was taken. His age is supposed to have been about forty-two years. The seven children were all minors ; John, the eldest, being sixteen. His will, written by another in a small hand very difficult to decipher, is signed with his mark, probably because of illness : —

* A river that flows from the Rockland line through the swamps to the Fair Grounds at South Weymouth was anciently called Pen River, because near the river was a "pen" in which sheep were enclosed before shearing. The plain near by was known as Pen Plain, later Dyer's Plain.

Another plot of land in Weymouth, "wearieland," mentioned in the will of Matthew<sup>1</sup> Pratt, is said by Mr. Quincy L. Reed to have probably taken its name from "Weary All Hill," now called Otis Hill, in Hingham. The land between the hill and the Weymouth line, including part of Weymouth, may have been known as Weary Land. In that vicinity the United States government has secured a site for a naval magazine.

"Hoclie," also mentioned in the will of Matthew<sup>1</sup> Pratt, was a familiar landmark for years. In 1752, it is described in a deed as "Hockley's Meadow," lying partly on land owned by "the heirs of William Dyer . . . partly on Joshua Lovet . . . and Northerly on the Dam including the Dam." (Suffolk County Deeds, Book 89: 243.) To-day it is known as a tract on the banks of Back River, at East Weymouth. Vide pages 734, 1733.

ISSUE

- I. "Judah [<sup>8</sup>], son of Samuell & Hanna pratt Born June 25 — 1661," ‡ in Weymouth; died before his father made his will.
- II. John<sup>8</sup>, b. Aug. 17, 1663, in Weymouth; mar., first, Mary —; mar., second, Elizabeth, daughter to Thomas Swift, of Milton. She d. Dec. 25, 1736, aged seventy-five years; and he mar., third, Dec. 8, 1737, Sarah Gardner, or Garner, a widow, of Hingham.

John Pratt early in life attained the rank of Lieutenant, and as "Lieut. John," his name frequently appears on the town records in positions of trust and honor. He was a man of great energy, not only in the affairs of the town and military matters, but also in the church. His pew was near that of his brother Ebenezer, "on the west side of the great dore" of the meeting-house, for which he paid £3. Lieutenant John<sup>8</sup> Pratt was mentioned in the will of his uncle, John<sup>2</sup> Pratt; he d. Feb. 8, 1743-44, in Weymouth, aged eighty-one years.

Issue by first wife: 1. Samuel<sup>4</sup>, b. Oct. 15, 1683, in Weymouth.

Issue by second wife: 2. Nathaniel<sup>4</sup>, b. Oct. 26, 1702, in Weymouth. 3. Thomas<sup>4</sup>, b. Jan. 3, 1705, in Weymouth.

- III. Hannah<sup>8</sup>, b. Dec. 21, 1665, in Weymouth; mar. in 1699, to Ebenezer Shaw, of Hingham.

VI. Experience<sup>3</sup>, b. Jan. 8, 1672, in Weymouth.

VII. Ebenezer<sup>3</sup>, b. 1674, in Weymouth. (Vide infra.)

EBENEZER<sup>3</sup> PRATT

Ebenezer<sup>3</sup> Pratt, youngest child to Samuel<sup>2</sup> and Hannah (Rogers) Pratt, was born in 1674, at Weymouth. He mar., first, about 1700 or 1701, Martha —, who was the mother of all his children; she d. May, 1720. He mar., second, Dec. 25, 1720, the widow Waitstill Washburn, of Bridgewater; mar., third., Hannah —, who survived him. He paid £4. 5<sup>s</sup> for a pew in the meeting-house, on the "west side of the great dore," near that of his eldest brother, John; and was active in matters pertaining to the welfare of the church. He also held a number of town offices.

On March 6, 1699-1700, Ebenezer Pratt and Martha, his wife, conveyed, for £85, to Robert Waterman, of Hingham, "a dwelling house & Barn & about Thirty acres of Land," in Weymouth, near the Elder's Mill-Pond, which he inherited from his father. It was bounded on the north by land of * Vide page 737.

John Pratt, of Bridgewater, late of Weymouth; on the west "by y<sup>e</sup> said Fresh pond." They also gave a deed, on the same day, for £20, of an acre of salt marsh to Nathaniel Nichols.* It is probable that, after this sale of the homestead near the centre of the town, Ebenezer removed to North Weymouth, and built the house afterward occupied by his son Samuel. To enlarge his estate in that section of the town, "Ebenezer Pratt Sen<sup>r</sup> of Weymouth, Weaver," purchased of John Pratt, Sr., and Elizabeth, his wife, for £450, on January 18, 1724-25, sixteen acres; described as bounded "Northerly partly by land belonging to Humphreys & partly by land lately sold to Philip Torrey westerly by the Towns Common Southerly and Easterly by the Land of Ebenezer Pratt aforesaid." † By will, Ebenezer Pratt divided all his real estate between his two sons, Ebenezer and Samuel, the latter to have "the North end of my dwelling house he now lives in, and also My Barn;" and by the above boundary lines his land can be traced for several generations.

Ebenezer Pratt was identified with the establishment of the fishing trade between Weymouth and Cape Sable. At a town-meeting held March 7, 1715, "John Torrey, James Humphrey, Joseph Torrey, Ezra Whitmarsh, Enoch Lovell, Ebenezer Pratt & divers others their partners who had agreed to begin a fishing trade to Cape-sables, requested of the town that they might have that piece or parcel of land at the mouth of the fore river in the northerly part of Weymouth called and known by the name of Hunts Hill and the low land and Beach adjoining thereunto, that is so much as they shall need for the management of said trade. The Town after consideration thereof Voted that they should have the said land and Beach to manage their fishing trade." ‡

By the will of his uncle, John<sup>2</sup> Pratt, Ebenezer was to have £40, "if he Do bring up a Son of his at the Colledge." It does not appear, however, that either of his sons enjoyed an extended education.

The death of Ebenezer Pratt occurred about January, 1751-52, at the age of seventy-four years; he was buried in the "Old Burying-Ground" opposite the Pratt School-house, in North Weymouth. His will, dated Dec. 5, 1744, was proved Feb. 11, 1752; it is unique in that every line but three, except the seven interlined before signing, begins with a capital letter. The will was written in a large, clerkly hand by another, but the signature is his own autograph:—

"In the name of God Amen:

There is no record of the marriage contract which evidently was broken by the terms of the will. The small, separate paper preserved with the original will, signed with the autograph of Hannah Pratt, was as follows :—

Hannah Pratt

The sons, Ebenezer and Samuel, were sworn February 11, 1752, by Edward Hutchinson, executors of their father's estate, and agreed to bring in an inventory “at or before the 11th Day of May next Ensuing;” there is, however, no record of its return. As no deeds were at any time recorded from Ebenezer to these sons, they appear to have made the amicable division desired by their father.

SAMUEL<sup>4</sup> PRATT

Samuel<sup>4</sup> Pratt, youngest surviving son to Ebenezer<sup>3</sup> and Martha (—) Pratt, was born December 19, 1712, in Weymouth. His first wife, whom he married February 17, 1736-37, in Weymouth, was Betty<sup>5</sup>, daughter to Benjamin<sup>4</sup> and Susanna (Humphrey) Bicknell.* Betty Bicknell was born

* The ship "Assurance de Lo" (Assurance, of London) sailed for America in the spring of 1635, from Gravesend, County Kent, England, with one hundred and six emigrants. Among them were "Zachary Bicknell aged 45 yeare . . . Agnis Bicknell his wife aged 37 yeare . . . John Bicknell his sonne aged 11 yeare . . . John Kitchin his servant 23 yeare." They arrived at Wessagusset, now Weymouth, in the following summer, where they were soon enjoying the house built by Zachary on land granted him by the town. There is a tradition that he was a Captain in the English Navy, retired on half pay, and that his English home was near Weymouth, in Dorsetshire. Unaccustomed to the hardships of a new settlement and a still harder climate, he died two years after his arrival, in 1637, æt. forty-seven. His widow, Agnis, mar. Richard Rocket, or Rockwood, of Braintree, by whom she had a son John, b. Dec. 1, 1641. She d. July 9, 1643, in Braintree, æt. forty-five.

John<sup>2</sup> Bicknell, only child of Zachary<sup>1</sup> and Agnis Bicknell, b. 1624, in England, received a comfortable fortune from his father, and became an influential citizen of Weymouth. He was selectman many years; in 1661, he was one of a committee to repair the meeting-house. The record of this service reads: "Bro Bicknell for making the meeting house title: 3 pounds." He was chosen Deputy to the General Court, a short time before his death.

About 1650, he mar. Mary —, who d. March 25, 1658. His second wife, July 16, 1720, in Weymouth; the date of her death is unknown, but she was the mother of all his children. The second wife of Samuel Pratt was Mary —, who survived him.

He was one of the executors of his father's will, by which he came into possession of the north end of the house, and the barn, and half of the land. He enlarged this farm by purchasing additional land, and followed the occupation of a farmer throughout his life. He lived in what is now North whom he mar. Dec. 2, 1659, was Mary<sup>2</sup>, daughter to Richard<sup>1</sup> and Ruth (—) Porter, of Weymouth, who survived him. His will, dated Nov. 6, 1678, was proved Jan. 20, 1679, at Boston.

Weymouth, on Green Street. The street lies north of the village, and curves toward the northeast and north in a gentle ascent around a grassy hill. The house, which probably was built by his father, Ebenezer<sup>3</sup> Pratt, about 1700, stood a short half-mile from the present (1905) North Weymouth post-office, on the northwest side of the street, facing the village. After this ancient house was burned in 1789, Jonathan<sup>5</sup>, one of the twin sons of Samuel<sup>4</sup>, rebuilt upon the same spot. Like the houses erected later by his brothers, it is a substantial two-and-a-half story frame house, in good repair, and is now (1905) occupied by Miss Clara Bell<sup>8</sup> Pratt, youngest daughter to Washington<sup>7</sup> and Narissa (Baker) Pratt. Washington<sup>7</sup> Pratt was son to William<sup>6</sup>, youngest son to Jonathan<sup>5</sup> Pratt, who rebuilt on the homestead site. Miss Pratt was for many years a teacher in the public schools of Weymouth.

Three other sons of Samuel<sup>4</sup> built and settled near their father, on the same side of the street. Samuel's land extended along both sides of the road, in which a bridge was made near each house for convenience in passing under the roadway down to the fields beyond. The four houses still are standing and are occupied, but all except Jonathan's have passed long since out of possession of the Pratt family. Peter<sup>5</sup> was the second to build; then, beyond him to the south, Benjamin<sup>5</sup> and Sylvanus<sup>5</sup> put up a house together; later, they sawed it in halves, moved one half farther up the street, put an ell on each, and reared their families independently.

In 1807, Jonathan<sup>5</sup> moved a shop which he owned at Fore River to Green Street, and set it on the corner of Shaw Street, almost opposite his own dwelling. The shop was converted into a house, an ell was added, and this became the home of William<sup>6</sup> Pratt until the death of his father, Jonathan<sup>5</sup>, in 1732. William<sup>6</sup> then moved into the larger house, while the smaller one was occupied by his son Charles<sup>7</sup>, whose widow, Mrs. Maria C. (Totman) Pratt, aged seventy-eight years, with her son Charles<sup>8</sup> and a grandson, still lives there. Mrs. Sarah Louisa<sup>7</sup> (Pratt) Cleverly, also seventy-eight, daughter to William<sup>6</sup> Pratt and widow of Thomas F. Cleverly, is living at the head of Shaw Street by the school-house. Her notebook furnished the date of the burning of Samuel<sup>4</sup> Pratt's old house and the rebuilding by his son Jonathan<sup>5</sup> upon the same spot.

Many descendants of Samuel<sup>4</sup> Pratt are now living in North Weymouth, with a goodly number of the old-fashioned names repeated in the younger generation. Recently, as a bevy of small boys were rushing out of the Pratt school-house, one shouted to another: "Sam Pratt's coming out to play with us this afternoon."

There is no doubt that Samuel<sup>4</sup> Pratt served as private in the early part of the Revolutionary War. Mr. Nash, in his Historical Sketches of Weymouth, mentions David, Benjamin, Sylvanus, Matthew, and Samuel Pratt, Jr., among the men in that service.* For a time the "Jr." was puzzling, until it became evident that this Samuel was called "Jr." as the younger man of the same name in the town, a practice common at that period. In 1759, Ebenezer<sup>4</sup> Pratt, for "love and good will," gave to his son Abner<sup>5</sup>, cordwainer, twelve acres "belonging to my homestead bounded northerly on my Brother Samuel Prat and Philip and William Torrey;" in 1761, Abner Pratt, cordwainer, as executor of his father's estate, conveyed land, it "being the Easterly part of said deceased's Homestead, and is butted & bounded as follows viz: Northwesterly on the land of Samuel Pratt junr. North on the saltmarsh of Philip and William Torrey," etc. The use of the Jr. is further confirmed by the deed of "Samuel Pratt Jr." to his son Jonathan<sup>5</sup>, May 5, 1766.†

The ancestors of Samuel Pratt from the first had been prosperous farmers of good standing in the community, who staid by their own firesides. But when those firesides were threatened with British invasion, Samuel prepared to resist to the uttermost. He joined the company of Minute Men of Weymouth who, for months, had been quietly drilling for any emergency that might arise. Furnished with ammunition by the town of Weymouth, these Minute Men, commanded by Captain Jacob Goold, upon the alarm from Lexington marched, on the run, to Roxbury, arriving too late to participate in the fight. Still, the record says that the company served eight days in Colonel Benjamin Lincoln's regiment.* On the last day of that service, April 27, Samuel Pratt enlisted for the "Eight Months Service," signing the form of enlistment adopted on April 21, at a meeting of the Committee of Safety, which was as follows

"I, A. B., do hereby solemnly engage and enlist myself as a Soldier in the Massachusetts service, from the day of my enlistment to the last day of December next, unless the service should admit of a discharge of a part or the whole sooner, which shall be at the discretion of the Committee of Safety; and I hereby promise to submit myself to all the orders and regulations of the Army, and faithfully to observe and obey all such orders as I shall receive from any superior officer." †

The pay of each private was to be £2 per month, and "besides the above a Coat for a uniform to be given to each of the Noncommissioned Officers and Privates, as soon as the state of the Province will admit of it." Each town was expected "to furnish good Blankets" for its men. Such was their equipment. On April 29, 1775, the defence of Cambridge consisted of "six three-pounders complete, with ammunition, and one six-pounder." That same day, one half of the militia was ordered to go to Roxbury and Cambridge. Samuel Pratt was stationed at "Fort No. 2," in the latter town. The Committee of Safety, on May 16, sent out notices to the effect that the "female friends of America, in the neighboring Counties, are hereby desired to send such quantities of Rags as they can spare, to the Selectmen of their respective Towns, the latter to send them to Comisary Craigie," at the hospital in Cambridge.*

Samuel Pratt was discharged September 14, 1775, after a service of five months and thirteen days. His autograph appears on an order for a "Bounty Coat or its equivalent in money," signed by forty-six men (two making their marks), his name being number eleven.

There is nothing that shows any participation in the Battle of Bunker Hill. Men of his age (sixty-three), and even older, formed a large part of the Regiment of Guards at Cambridge. The records of the town of Weymouth, under date of May 7, 1778, state that orders were drawn by the selectmen "To several Persons who served as soldiers at Cambridge last winter" (in addition to the Wages allowed by the Continent) four months and 22 days . . . to each nine pounds & ten shillings." Among these thirteen men was "Sam<sup>l</sup> Pratt 24," † who is thought to have been the same person who was at Cambridge in 1775.

The difficulties encountered in attempting to determine whether this record of Revolutionary service belongs to this particular Samuel Pratt have been discouraging. But, by a process of elimination in several directions, the conclusion seems to be justified that he is the one entitled to the credit of it. There was in Weymouth a Samuel<sup>5</sup> Pratt (son to Samuel<sup>4</sup> who died in 1774), born in 1722, died May 12, 1792; there was another Samuel<sup>4</sup> (son to Matthew<sup>3</sup>), born in 1705, living in 1756, and date of death unknown. He may have been the Samuel Pratt, Sr. A third Samuel<sup>5</sup> (son to Daniel<sup>4</sup>), born in 1751, died May 22, 1830.* Not one of these had a brother Ebenezer, nor a son Jonathan. Hence it is quite safe to assume from all the evidence that Samuel<sup>4</sup> Pratt, born December 19, 1712, served in the Revolution. He died December 28, 1793, in Weymouth, aged eighty-one years and nine days. He left no will, having previously divided, by deed, all his property among his children.

- II. Asa<sup>6</sup>, b. July 8, 1742, in Weymouth; probably died before reaching his majority, as he was not mentioned by his father or brothers.
- III. David<sup>6</sup> (twin), b. Feb. 12, 1745, in Weymouth; removed before his marriage to North Yarmouth (afterward set off as Freeport), Maine. (Vide infra.)
- IV. Jonathan<sup>6</sup> (twin), b. Feb. 12, 1745, in Weymouth; was published March 1, 1766, to Sarah, daughter to William and Susanna (—) Dyer, Jr. Sarah Dyer, b. Dec. 19, 1748; d. a widow, Dec. 25, 1833, aged eighty-five years.
- "Samuel Pratt Jr.," yeoman, of Weymouth, conveyed to "his son Jonathan Pratt, house carpenter," on May 5, 1766, for the consideration of £2:13:04, ten acres of "swamp land lying near the Dwelling house of said Samuel Pratt Junr;" bounded southerly by land of widow Hannah Torrey, westerly by land of Joshua Torrey, northerly and easterly by land of "Samuel Pratt Jr.," the grantor. This deed was not recorded until Jan. 6, 1789. On May 5, 1791, not long after the old house was burned, "Samuel Pratt," for £15 paid by his son Jonathan, then called a housewright, gave him a deed of "a House lot as follows viz. ten Rods in front five to y<sup>e</sup> Northward of the middle of y<sup>e</sup> house lately burnt and five to y<sup>e</sup> southward & extending so far back as to make one third of an Acre, with all the Appurtenances (except y<sup>e</sup> buildings now standing)." It was here that Jonathan built the house now occupied by Miss Clara Bell<sup>8</sup> Pratt. Three months later, Aug. 1, 1791, his father conveyed to Jonathan, for £30, three acres more of the choicest part of his farm. It is described as situated "in the North part of the first Precinct in said Town; being apart of Homestead of said Samuel," and bounded "Northwardly partly on the land of James Humphrey, partly on the land of Philip Torrey; Easterly on Rocky bottom fence; Southwardly on the Grantor; Westerly on the Road partly, & partly on the Grantees House." Both deeds were recorded Sept. 13, 1791.*

These three deeds, so accurately describing the situation of the homestead of Samuel <sup>4</sup> Pratt, might be called the key to the whole estate; the lands of the other brothers are traced from them. After the death of his father, Jonathan was looked to as the head of the family. His immediate descendants are found in Weymouth, Braintree, Quincy, and Windsor, Mass., and Wilson, New York. His death occurred July 6, 1832, in Weymouth, at the age of eighty-seven years. He left no will.

Benjamin Pratt and his brother Sylvanus occupied, for a time, a large double house, which appears to have been built for them by their father. For reasons not now apparent, they decided to cut the house in two and separate. On May 7, 1783, their father, Samuel Pratt, conveyed to Benja-

DAVID<sup>5</sup> PRATT

David Pratt, twin to Jonathan, was born February 12, 1745, in Weymouth. He was the second son born to Samuel and Betty (Bicknell) Pratt, but the first to reach majority. Imbued with the pioneer spirit that already had taken many of his townsmen to North Yarmouth, Maine, he resolved to follow them. The date of his arrival there is not known; the first record is his marriage, March 28, 1771, at the age of twenty-six years, to Rebecca, daughter to Edmund and Mercy (Fogg) Chandler, of North Yarmouth. Rebecca Chandler was born April 30, 1753, and baptized June 17, following, in the old First Church of North Yarmouth.

On March 2, 1774, David Pratt, "yeoman," of North Yarmouth, purchased of Samuel Grant a lot consisting of thirteen acres, three quarters, and thirty rods, it being part of "lot No. 37, drawn in Right of home lot No. 3 . . . Original, Samuel Smith."† Other acres were added from time to time, until he became the possessor of a large farm. To-day, he is best remembered as a prosperous farmer, although he had learned the trade of a mason; a trade followed by several of his sons.

The house which he built, "on the Neck," was demolished years ago, but the lines of the cellar are easily traced. It stood on the top of Mitchell's Hill in North Yarmouth, that part of the town that became South Freeport after the division of 1789; the site is easily found by its proximity to a gaunt old pine that has been struck by lightning. The pine stands, maimed and alone, towering above every other tree in its vicinity. Efforts made in town-meetings by some of the citizens to have it removed invariably have been voted down, because of its value as a landmark to the seafaring men of Casco Bay. Mitchell's Hill rises with an abrupt slope on the easterly side of the eastern branch of Cousins's River. The most northerly of the three early settlers on the hill was David<sup>5</sup> Pratt, with Ira Mitchell to the south, and Barnabas<sup>5</sup> Soule still further south. Pratt's house was reached by a lane from the road upon which Mitchell's and Soule's houses stood; the latter winding around the hill to what was then called the Neck Road, the only road leading to Freeport village. Within the remembrance of some of the older people, the present Marsh Road has been built at the foot of Mitchell's Hill, on the westerly side, over which the trolley runs from Portland to Brunswick. The landing beside the bridge over the eastern branch of Cousins's River is called Bailey's wharf.

The site of the house is indicated by a few scattered stones and two doorsteps of split stone, the one near the middle much larger than the other. A depression at the easterly end in which a juniper bush is growing marks the cellar. All that is left of the chimney that probably was built in the middle of the house is a heap of stones. The green spot at the northwesterly corner, of which the outlines are uncertain, is without doubt where the barn once stood. Though the ancient well has been filled to the brim with stones, the water still unceasingly bubbles up and trickles through the rank growth of grass down the hillside; and mounds of spongy moss show where corn was once planted.

The view is picturesque, and extensive on all sides except the north. From the front doorstep, southeasterly, it commands the shore and islands of Casco Bay to Portland harbor; to the south and west, the small streams meandering through fertile fields, dotted here and there with farm-buildings, can be followed to their source in the high hills beyond. Late in life, David Pratt left this home "on the Neck" and removed to Pownal. No one remembers the date; but Mrs. Rebecca Pierce said that his daughter Sally, who married

Captain Enos Soule in 1817, was the first child married in the new home. David Pratt and his wife were among the earliest members of the First Baptist Church of North Yarmouth, and they retained that church connection after their removal to Pownal. It was through the marriage of their daughter Rebecca to Edward<sup>7</sup> Small that this branch of the Small family became adherents of the same faith.

David Pratt and his wife spent their last years in the home of their eldest son, Deacon Edmund. He lived to be eighty-two years old, and died, June 10, 1827, "down in the field west of the house owned about 1860 by James and Peter Tuttle;" his widow, Rebecca, survived him. A letter written by their grandson, Captain Enos C. Soule, to his cousin, Robert H. Pratt, dated Newton, February 10, 1893, stated that, as he was but seven years old when his grandfather died, his recollections of him were slight; but he "remembered grandmother well." He added: "It has always been a matter of curiosity to know something about the Pratt family; all I ever heard was that grandfather came from Weymouth (Mass.), and grandmother never saw any of his relatives but once, when she was first married. He took her up there in a carriage to visit his family and she anticipated a good time, but grandfather only consented to stay two days. I never heard he was a twin before I read the [Pratt] Genealogy, and never saw one of our [Massachusetts] relatives until I came up here. . . . She was a woman with a tenacious memory; imbued strongly with the superstitions of her younger days, she believed in witchcraft thoroughly. Moll Day was the famous witch of the neighborhood, and the family Bible was kept in the baby's cradle to shield the child when left there alone. . . . When General [Edward] Russell delivered the address in the old church at North Yarmouth Foreside, at the Centennial of the first town-meeting ever held at North Yarmouth,* he made the statement that grandmother Pratt related correctly all the old history of the town as she had heard it from her forebears." Her deposition taken at this time, to which Captain Soule referred, appears in the form of a series of answers to questions. From the fact that the paper has been preserved,* it is judged that her information then was considered of great value: —

"June, 1833. Rebecca Pratt, aged 80 last April, daughter of Edmund and Mercy (Fogg) Chandler, born where Reuben Chandler now lives, says: Edmund Chandler, the original owner of lot 81, came from Duxbury, and was my grandfather, and was also grandfather of the first Peleg Chandler of New Gloucester. Joseph Chandler, the boy who was taken by Indians, was my brother. My brother Joseph died in Hispaniola in 1763.

"I suppose Perez Bradford belonged to Duxbury. I have heard that Samuel Fisher came from that town, also Cornelius Soule, also Southworth. Heard my father speak of Dr. Wadsworth of Duxbury. I think Samuel [John?] White came from Weymouth; he married Parson Loring's sister. Have heard my uncle Judah say that Dea. White told him where he lived in Weymouth.

"The Fogg family came from Hampton [N. H.]. My mother was a Fogg, daughter of Benoni Fogg by his first wife. My grandmother Fogg's maiden name was Abigail Cass of Hampton.

"I think I have heard that old Mr. Drinkwater came from Stonington. His wife was a Latham, and had relatives in Carolina.

"Mrs. Cutter was Dorothy Bradbury, sister of Moses. Colonel [Jonathan] Mitchell's wife was a Loring, but not a sister to Parson Loring.

"Issacher Winslow, brother of Gilbert, was killed by the stone between Loring's and Powell's. He was the father of 'Chiz Gilbert,' so called. They were making a stone sluiceway.

"I remember that Master Wiswell kept a shop at Mrs. Cutter's. He was the first person that I remember who kept goods to sell.

"Capt. Sykes was an Englishman and an army officer. He came before I was ten years old.

Daniel was with the Indians ten years and ten months."*

It was said that she remembered the date of birth of every child in town. She stated that whiteweed, the bane of New England farmers, was first brought into the neighborhood by some visitors who came from a distance, provided with hay to feed their horse.

Rebecca Pratt died in Freeport, at the home of her eldest son, Deacon Edmund Pratt, April 1, 1837 † (March 31, in family records), aged eighty-four years.

- I. Edmund Chandler<sup>6</sup>, b. Jan. 11, 1772, in North Yarmouth; was married Jan. 20, 1797, in Freeport, by Mr. Alfred Johnson, to Sarah, daughter to Bailey Talbot, of South Freeport. "Master" Bailey Talbot lived on the "curved road" to South Freeport. The musical talent of this branch of the Pratt family is said to have been inherited largely from the mother.

Deacon Edmund Pratt lived near Hedgehog Mountain in the north part of the town. He was a mason by trade ; and by the thoroughness of his work and sterling integrity he accumulated a comfortable property. He is remembered as a person of very few words, yet observant and of good judgment, a man often called upon for aid or advice. A grandson describes him as possessing a profound mind, with a taste for literature of a high order ; and, as far as his opportunities afforded, he kept in touch with the best writers. His mental grasp was remarkable ; he could "analyze the propositions of Butler's Analogy and Watson's Apology, was thoroughly read in ancient and modern history, was well versed in chemistry, made a study of astronomy and could calculate the declension of the sun." After sixty years of age, never before having had the leisure, he mastered lower and higher algebra. His familiarity with the Bible was equally remarkable.

When he was twenty years of age, he resolved never again to touch alcoholic beverages, and kept his self-made pledge to the end. He was opposed to slavery, "but not ultra." About 1793, he joined the First Congregational Church of Freeport. Later, "through much spiritual exercise and deep reading . . . an entire change of religious view overtook him," which resulted in his early becoming identified with the First Baptist Church of North Yarmouth, of which he became a member July 7, 1799. Upon the formation of a church of that denomination in Freeport, on April 11, 1807, he was dismissed from the church of North Yarmouth, November 15, and received into the Baptist Church of Freeport, November 20, 1807. Four days later (Nov. 24), he was appointed Deacon. Through all these changes his name remained on the list of members of the Congregational Church until June 22, 1815, when he was "dismissed . . . to join a Baptist church."* Evidently there was a period when he did not serve as Deacon, since the church records show that on "July 12, 1817 :— At a monthly conference held at the meeting-house voted that Brother Edmund Pratt be restored to his former office as Deacon of the Baptist Church in Freeport."* This office he retained until his death, though unable for the last few years to perform its duties.

His wife, Sarah, was received June 12, 1808, into the same church. She d. April 2, 1865, in Freeport; he d. Sept. 27, following, aged ninety-three years and eight months. Their married life, extending over a period of sixty-eight years, was ideal; after the children had left home, they lived alone for many years, declining either assistance or company. They were nearly of an age, and both retained their physical strength and mental faculties in a remarkable degree to the end.

The Rev. Edgar H. Gray, who was ordained pastor of the Baptist Church of Freeport in October, 1839, wrote to a friend of the death of Deacon Edmund Pratt, as follows:—

"Good old Dea. Pratt has reached home! Truly he will rest and his works will follow him! He is the only man I ever knew in whom I saw no guile. If ever man lived and sinned not, that man was Dea. Pratt. He was a man of few words, yet his influence was great in the Church; a man of no pretensions, still he possessed the best balanced mind of any man I ever knew. He was always regular at all the meetings of the Church, and always in season; a man of great natural diffidence, yet always at his post. Possessed of small pecuniary means, yet always liberal—indeed, any good thing and every good thing can truthfully be said of Dea. Pratt. I regarded him with veneration when I first knew him—my reverence increased with acquaintance; truly he was a model Christian man."

At the time of their marriage, he and his wife were considered "an exceedingly handsome couple; both tall, he a blonde and his wife with black hair and eyes, and both with high color in their cheeks." Philendia Pratt became a member of the First Congregational Church of Freeport, Aug. 3, 1828, and retained her membership until her death, which occurred July 16, 1835, in Freeport.* The second wife of Simeon Pratt, whom he married in March, 1838, was Mary<sup>4</sup> Dennison, b. July 23, 1807, daughter to Joseph<sup>8</sup> and Dorcas (Lufkin) Dennison. Her stepson George had the greatest love and veneration for this mother; late in life, he told of her kneeling down with him to pray. She died Oct. 1, 1840, aged thirty-three years. Simeon Pratt mar., third, May 14, 1844, Joanna Emerson<sup>4</sup> Dennison, b. Oct. 9, 1814, in Freeport, daughter to David<sup>8</sup> Dennison by his second wife, Susan (Haraden) Griffin,† widow of Captain Benjamin Griffin. This wife also "was greatly loved by all the children;" she died Dec. 27, 1891, in California, aged seventy-seven, having survived her husband sixteen years.

Simeon Pratt, when four years of age, fell into a spring behind the barn at his home; his mother, missing him, rushed for the most dangerous place, and found him there. It was with great difficulty that he was restored to consciousness. Because a fever, from which he suffered in his youth, left one side of his body somewhat weakened, "his father sent him to school more than the other boys;" later, he became a merchant, and in middle life enjoyed perfect health. He received the title of Colonel from his rank in the state militia. He kept store first at the "Old Tavern" at Freeport Corner, and afterwards on the old wharf at South Freeport. In those days he also kept books for the ship-builders, and prospered. During the years when he was a merchant at South Freeport, he lived in the house afterward owned by Captain Enos Soule. It was beautifully situated, commanding a view of the river where it flows into Casco Bay, and overlooking a group of small islands called Crab Islands, and beyond, Little Bustin's Island. The latter is still in possession of the Soule family. Colonel Pratt removed from there to the "old Weatherspoon farm," where he remained for a time.

When his father became too feeble to manage his farm, he gave it to Simeon as compensation for the care and support of himself and his wife for the remainder of their lives. The aged couple retained two or three rooms, where they lived independently, while Simeon's family occupied the remainder of the house.

Colonel Pratt invested in mackerel-fishing at a time when the waters of Casco Bay and vicinity swarmed with schools of this fish, and great quantities were caught. But there came a day when the fish, though plentiful as before, refused to take the bait. Simeon Pratt, "who had a good many irons in the fire," failed. He was an "indulgent creditor;" had he been able to collect his debts, the result might have been different. This was about the time of his second marriage, in 1838. He then commenced school-teaching, and was teaching at the time of his third marriage.

The town of Freeport manifested its confidence by electing Colonel Simeon Pratt selectman in 1826, 1829, 1830, 1831, 1832, 1834, 1835, and several times afterward. He was Town Clerk several years, was Justice of the Peace, and frequently was appointed administrator of estates. He also surveyed land; his sons have vivid remembrances of tramping through wet underbrush on dewy mornings as they carried the chain.

For many years he was the teacher of singing-schools for the whole country side. The winter singing-schools are a thing of the past, but their memory lingers with those who are so fortunate as to have attended them. One of Colonel Simeon's former pupils, an elderly lady, says that they were the joy of her life; she could sing alone at home, but "the part-singing was so inspiring." She describes her teacher as "at least six feet tall, handsome, cultivated, a fine singer, and withal a great ladies' man." It is said that his voice was the best tenor of that neighborhood,—a voice which developed to the age of forty-five, held its own for ten years, and never wholly left him. His children still remember the evenings when their father "sat by the hearthstone and poured out a stream of song, as he loved to do when all was quiet and the day was done."

The brothers, Colonel Simeon, Rufus, Enoch, Thomas,

Ambrose, and Edmund, Jr., are remembered as "large men of broad ideas," Simeon and Thomas six feet tall, the others somewhat shorter, but all with "strong frames." Parmenas, the youngest and seventh son, with his pranks and jokes, was a constant source of worry to his father, who expected nothing less than that "Parmenas will end up some day in state's prison." Simeon, on the contrary, was a courtly man of the olden type, whose strongest trait was "reverence and respect for both God and man."

In 1871, Colonel Pratt and his wife spent six months in California with his sons Robert, George, and William, who had gone there in 1849. The circumstances of his death, in 1875, were peculiarly sad. He had broken up his home in Freeport, and was on his way to join his sons in California. In Boston, while attempting to board the East Boston ferry-boat, — a little tardy, — he miscalculated, and fell into the dock as the boat was moving out. Assistance was rendered, but it was too late. The First Baptist Church of Freeport records the following: "Col. Simeon Pratt was baptized July 28, 1839, and was received into the church on the same date. April 13, 1848, he was chosen Deacon. Drowned in Boston, Aug. 26, 1875, on his way to California." * He was in his seventy-eighth year. The night before he was drowned he spent at the home of his nephew, Josiah N. Pratt, in Lawrence. His brothers, Enoch, Thomas, and Edmund, also were there, and the four passed the larger part of the evening about the piano, singing the old-time songs and hymns they so often had sung together in Freeport. Those who were present never will forget that singing, especially the beauty of Simeon's voice, which even then, at the age of seventy-seven, was strong and full. In the course of the evening he remarked that in going to California he had but one regret, — that he should not be buried in Freeport. After the accident, he was taken to Freeport and buried in his own lot; his last desire was fulfilled.

In 1847 and 1848, he was in Lawrence, Mass., working as a mason on buildings with his uncle Enoch. During the excitement caused by the discovery of gold, in 1849, he joined a number of his friends, who chartered a brig to take them to California. At first he engaged in mining; later, with his brothers, he purchased an extensive tract of land which took their name — Pratt Valley. It lies in Napa County, in which the town of St. Helena sprang up. St. Helena became his home. Having acquired a competency, he leased his house and went to Europe for two years. Upon his return, he was engaged by the Southern Pacific Railway, and filled several offices, ending as assistant general manager. He now (1905) is president of the Yosemite Stage Company.

In 1849, he and his brother William went to California by way of the Isthmus of Panama; for about two years they engaged in gold mining on the American River, near Auburn. In the mean time, their brother Robert arrived, and the three purchased a large cattle ranch in the Sacramento Valley.

After operating it for a time together, they sold it to Dr. Glenn, a large land-owner of that neighborhood. George Pratt then turned his attention to a ranch of his own, about a mile from Pratt Valley toward the city, upon which he has remained. He has been successful in business, and retained his position as director in a local bank until past eighty years. He never married; is now (1906) rather feeble from a shock of paralysis.

III. William Augustus<sup>8</sup>, b. April 29, 1827, in Freeport.

He went, by way of the Isthmus, to California, in 1849, with his brother George, where they were joined by Robert, who had taken the longer course in a brig "round the Horn." Together they engaged in mining and ranching. In 1852, William Pratt returned to his old home, expecting to stay; but after two years, he decided that California afforded larger opportunities for a young man, and again went west. For ten years he was associated with his brothers in the cattle business. In 1864, he removed to Napa City; while there he married Miss Mary Ellen Findley, b. April 8, 1849; in 1871, he became a resident of St. Helena. With his brothers, Robert and George, he purchased, in equal shares, five hundred acres of land, comprising what is now known as Pratt Valley, and the southern slope of Howell Mountain where the buildings of the St. Helena Sanitarium now stand. He was one of the few men who organized the association that began, in a small way, what is widely known as the St. Helena Sanitarium, now of such vast proportions; he was ever one of its most liberal friends and supporters.

His farm, situated about two miles north of St. Helena, was very productive, and devoted largely to the cultivation of fruit. He took pride in it, and was constantly improving it. At first he had vineyards; but from religious scruples, because the grapes he sold were made into wine, he uprooted all the vines and set out prune orchards — the first in that section. When the scourge of phylloxera destroyed his neighbors' vines, to their great loss, he was made still more prosperous by the demand for prunes, at a high price.

Though the early religious teaching of William Pratt was strongly of the Baptist belief, his views in later years became somewhat modified. He was a devoted member of the Adventist Church of St. Helena to the end of his days. Dearly loved by all his family, — particularly his half-sisters, — he was equally liked and respected by all who knew him. For nine years he was in failing health, but the failure was so gradual that he was able to attend to business until a few months before his death, Feb. 29, 1896, in St. Helena. His widow survived him.

* The first pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Edgar H. Gray was at Freeport, Maine. "Dea. Edmund Pratt, Dea. Reuben Harvey, Brethren Simeon Pratt & Samuel Soule" were the committee chosen to make arrangements for his ordination,

For some years they have resided in San Francisco. Their house was scarcely affected by the earthquake of the spring of 1906, though at the time they "seemed to be travelling over huge rocks;" neither was it reached by the fire, which fortunately was stayed two blocks away. They considered themselves "greatly blessed," in retaining their home.

Mr. Pratt in his younger days served an apprenticeship with the firm of Small, Knight and Company, builders of parlor-organs in Portland, Maine;* at the same time he lived in Mr. Daniel Small's family for a year and a half. He now is a professional musician.

by baptism into the First Baptist Church of Freeport. Their home was next to that of his brother Enoch, and was afterwards occupied by Ambrose Pratt and his family.

Rufus Pratt followed the sea, and became master of some of the best ships sailing from Freeport and vicinity. He was so much away from home that no one now living in Freeport remembers much about him. He was in prosperous circumstances, which enabled his four sons to acquire good educations. They all served in the United States Army throughout the Civil War, though the youngest, Lucius, was but twenty years of age when he enlisted. Two of them were seriously wounded, but all survived and returned home.

In 1838 and 1839, Enoch Pratt was selectman of Freeport. June 9, 1839, he and his wife, Eliza, were received into the Baptist Church of Freeport; they were dismissed Aug. 10, 1845, to the Baptist Church of Saco.† In 1848, they removed to Lawrence, Mass., where they became identified with the Baptist Church of Lawrence. He was musical; he played the bass-viol, sang bass, and early joined the choir, with which one or more of his children or grandchildren have been connected ever since.

He taught school in his younger days, excelling in mathematics; later, he followed the trade of a mason, like his father. In Lawrence, he was one of the principal builders in brick, constructing the old High School, the former Post-Office, Saunders Hall, the police building, the larger part of Essex Street, etc. During his last years, he was associated with a partner, under the name of Littlefield and Pratt. Though not aspiring to office, he was elected a member of the Massachusetts legislature and served one year. He was not so tall as some of his brothers, about five feet, eight inches, but of sturdy build. His death occurred in Lawrence, Sept. 26, 1877, at the age of seventy-four years; he was buried in Bellevue Cemetery, where, six years later, his widow was placed beside him.

VII. Edgar Gray<sup>8</sup>, b. Nov. 24, 1843, in Freeport; mar. April 30, 1874, in Lawrence, Mass., Adeline Cecilia Richards, b. Aug. 17, 1849, in Kennebunk, Maine, daughter to John Madison and Adeline (Watson) Richards, of Lawrence.

After finishing her school life in the east, Mrs. Richards spent some time with relatives, Dr. and Mrs. S. W. Jones, in Leavenworth, Kansas. "She at once became the centre of a musical circle, where her voice was always heard with pleasure; and for about two years she was the soprano of a quartette in St. Pauls church." Returning east, she was married to Mr. Pratt. Her home was in Lawrence, Mass., until October, 1897, when she again went west in hope of restoring her health by a change of climate. For a time she seemed to be benefited, and had made plans to return home, when she was stricken with paralysis, and passed away on Aug. 3, 1898, in Leavenworth, Kansas. She was buried on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, in Lawrence, Mass.

Mr. Edgar G. Pratt was educated in the Lawrence High School. He was proficient in mathematics, discovering, with his brother Enoch, certain processes for shortening mathematical problems, which he has demonstrated in a chalk-talk before some of the professors of Berkeley University, California. In August, 1862, he enlisted as private in Co. B., 4th Mass. Infantry, and was in active service in Louisiana for about a year, under General N. P. Banks. About the middle of April, 1863, Mr. Pratt was in action at Bayou Teche (Camp Bisland); John Bartol, of Freeport, was with him. At the siege of Port Hudson, under Captain George S. Merrill and Colonel Walker (later Commander of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, Boston), he participated in the unfortunate assault on Port Hudson, June 14, 1863,* and was wounded in both legs by the same bullet. This was fourteen days after his term of enlistment had expired. Ten weeks spent in the hospital enabled him to recover sufficiently to be sent home. In 1864, he entered the firm of Littlefield and Pratt, of Lawrence, retaining this connection a number of years after his father's death, in 1877. He now is retired. Such leisure as has come to him has been spent mainly in travelling to the Pacific coast and other parts of the United States. Probably no other member of the Pratt family has so extensive personal acquaintance with his kin as he. Mr. Pratt is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. Except in church he has held no office, but for years was prominent in the choir of the Baptist Church, where his children, as they grew up, followed him. Since the death of his wife, Mr. Pratt has lived in Lawrence with his sisters.

Thomas Pratt, six feet in height, "was called the best looking and most popular of all the brothers. He was quiet, even retiring; a Christian gentleman of the highest type. His wife was one of the kindest, most genial, hospitable souls I ever knew," writes a relative; "in her earlier years she was considered a beauty." Thomas Pratt had a fine bass voice; he was a skilled mechanic, and noted as a stair-builder. He was industrious, and prospered. His residence during the earlier years of his married life is not known, but about 1846 or 1847, he came into possession of the homestead of his father-in-law on Rock Street, Lowell, and remained there. Of his four children, one only is living, and she has lost her mind. There were no grandchildren, so the family is practically

When a little child, she received an injury to the left side of her face from the kick of a horse, which left a conspicuous scar. At maturity, she was about medium height, with dark brown eyes and hair, rather slight, and, even in her old age, she was surprisingly agile. She was educated at South Freeport and at the Old North Yarmouth Academy,* the latter a famous school in its day ; she taught school in South Freeport and vicinity until her marriage. Lacking the opportunity in her earlier years, she studied music and French after she was forty. Throughout her long life she was a great reader, until nearly ninety years of age, when blindness threatened her. With complete rest, she partially recovered her sight.

On May 28, 1848, she was married to the Rev. Hosea Pierce, son to Ephraim and Hannah Pierce, of Freeport, b. Aug. 7, 1823, in that town. She was then thirty-nine and her husband under twenty-five years of age, but the union was particularly happy ; it was saddened only by the death of their only child, a daughter, at the age of fifteen years. At the time of their marriage, Hosea Pierce was about completing his studies for the ministry ; not long after, he accepted a call from the Baptist Church of West Gardiner, Maine. He had been a member of the Baptist Church in Freeport since Aug. 6, 1843 ; his wife, Rebecca, had united with it on May 30, 1840. She was dismissed Feb. 17, 1850, to the church in West Gardiner. The Rev. Hosea Pierce later was settled over churches in Hallowell and one or two other Maine towns, and completed thirty years of ministry at Skowhegan. The quick wit and cheerfulness, kind heart and every ready sympathy of his wife must have been especially helpful to him and his parish. Throughout her life she was blessed with the most perfect health, and with a large store of self-reliance ; those who knew her best recognized a character in which were blended the noblest qualities of mind and heart.

Her husband died March 10, 1879, in Skowhegan, aged fifty-six years; she soon returned to Freeport, where she resumed her old church relations. She purchased a small cottage near the main road at South Freeport, and lived very comfortably for a time upon the small sum remaining from the scanty savings of a country minister's wife. But her years were many, and she was obliged to accept remittances that came regularly from her nieces and nephews in California. Finally, in the fall of 1900, she sold her house with the proviso that she should remain in it as long as she lived, without paying rent. The money so obtained was used for necessary expenses, and was not all gone when she died.

The companion of Mrs. Pierce's old age was a widowed sister of her husband, less than a month older than herself, Mrs. Joanna (Pierce) Bean, widow of Andrew Bean, Jr. Together they lived in the little house, with only the assistance of a relative, who occasionally came in "to tidy them up a bit;" their mutual helpfulness was very beautiful. In the summer of 1902, when the trolley-line from Portland to Brunswick was opened beside her home, she and her sister-in-law, Joanna, were taken to Brunswick; it was the first trolley-ride in their lives, and the last. Early in January following, Mrs. Pierce was stricken with the grip, and passed away a few days later, — January 7, 1903, — aged "93 years, 10 months, 18 days." Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Bean, died February 17, following, at the age of "93 years, 11 months, 14 days."

It is given to few to retain all their powers, both physical and mental, as did Mrs. Pierce. Each birthday her friends called to offer congratulations, with the hope that she might see many more years. The townspeople were proud of her, and frequently appealed to her to elucidate some long-forgotten matter of years before, with her clear memory of facts and often of dates. The writer also acknowledges great obligations to her.

Ambrose Pratt was by trade a mason. About four years after his marriage, he went to Lawrence and Methuen, Mass., with his brother Parmenas, where they commenced the erection of brick houses. This took him away from home for long periods, for his family still remained on the farm that he owned in Freeport. This farm, which had acquired the name of "the Todd place" from a previous occupant, was near the "old Wetherspoon place," where Simeon Pratt was then living. Because of failing health, Ambrose returned to Freeport about 1850. He sold his farm and built a house at "the Corner," now Freeport village, in order that his children might have better school privileges.

Ambrose Pratt possessed the same love of music as his brothers; he sang tenor, played the violin, and taught music. He and his wife were worthy members of the First Baptist Church of Freeport. He d. Josiah N. Pratt was educated in the schools of Freeport; at one time he was under the instruction of his aunt Rebecca (later the wife of Rev. Hosea Pierce), whom he remembers with great love and veneration. At the age of eighteen years, he went to Portland, Maine, where he served an apprenticeship as mason. From 1861 to 1864, he was employed as a skilled mechanic on the fortifications of Portland harbor (principally in the construction of Fort Gorges), and at Fort Knox, on the Penobscot River. On Sept. 2, 1864, he enlisted, in Portland, as landsman, on board the U. S. S. Enterprise, though credited to the Freeport quota. Soon afterward, he was transferred to the U. S. S. Ohio, at the Charlestown (Mass.) Navy Yard, where he remained until March 1, 1865. At that time, he was drafted to the U. S. S. Trefoil, Captain G. C. Wells, which was ordered to the West Gulf Squadron, to report to Admiral Thatcher, who had succeeded Admiral Farragut. The Trefoil was engaged with the fleet in the combined movement against the city of Mobile, Alabama, the land forces under General Granger closing in at the same time. The siege lasted from March 26 until April 11, when the remnant of Confederate troops fled to the interior. On the 12th, the Mayor of Mobile surrendered to Admiral Thatcher and General Granger;* Mr. Pratt was one of the first who landed in Mobile after the surrender. The Confederate naval fleet, which fled up the Tombigbee River, also surrendered soon after. At about the beginning of the siege, Mr. Pratt was appointed Yeoman of the ship, and held that office until discharged, on Aug. 31, 1865, at the Charlestown Navy Yard. He returned to his home in Freeport, and was reinstated in his former position at Fort Gorges; but, having contracted fever and ague in the service, he was obliged to resign in order to get away from the seacoast.

Immediately following the great fire in Portland, Maine, in 1866, Mr. Pratt had charge of the construction of some of the most prominent buildings in that city. Two years later, he removed to Lawrence, Mass., where he also engaged in building. In 1882, he became connected with the Jarvis Engineering Company, as superintendent of construction; in 1887, he was appointed treasurer and general manager. His specialty is constructing steam motive power for electrical plants, under the name of "The Pratt Construction Company." Since 1888, he has resided in Somerville, Mass. He served that city as alderman in 1895 and 1896. He is a Free-

Mr. Ambrose E. Pratt removed with his parents to Lawrence. He learned the drug business, in which he became engaged, in 1881, at Sandwich, Mass. In 1886, he "took up" journalism, representing Boston and New York papers on Cape Cod. During the presidency of Grover Cleveland, he was stationed for four summers at Buzzard's Bay, "covering the movements of the President." From 1895 to 1901, he occupied the position of private secretary, at different intervals, to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, and Congressmen Simpkins, Greene, and Sprague. Since 1901, he has been confidential secretary to Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, formerly wife of Congressman Sprague; he also is editor and publisher of the Brookline Press. May 25, 1841, in Freeport, Mary Grant Alden, daughter to Samuel<sup>6</sup> and Hannah (Reed) Alden, of Freeport. Mary G.<sup>7</sup> Alden, b. Nov. 2, 1816, in Freeport, was of the seventh generation from John<sup>1</sup> Alden, who came over in the Mayflower, 1620, and was the last survivor of the forty-one signers of the Compact.* Samuel<sup>6</sup> Alden, her father, was b. July 19, 1784, in Duxbury, Mass., d. Feb. 21, 1866, in Freeport; her mother, Hannah Reed, was b. Dec. 9, 1787, in Freeport; d. there, 1849.

Edmund Pratt lived in Freeport, about three miles from the village, in what long has been recognized as the "Pratt neighborhood." He was a carpenter, and followed that trade all his life. Like his brothers, he was a large man, of sturdy physique, strong mentality, and some musical talent; he sang bass, and played the clarinet and violin. At the time of their marriage, his wife was a member of the Congregational Church of Freeport, which her parents had joined in 1824; but when her husband became a member of the Baptist Church, on June 6, 1858, she left her own church and went with him. Ten years later, March 15, 1868, they were dismissed to the Baptist Church of Portland, Maine,† to which city they had removed.

After two of their children had married and removed to Boston, where they built houses and made homes for themselves, Edmund Pratt and his wife followed, about 1872. In 1877, they removed to Roslindale, within the limits of the city of Boston, and lived in a part of the house occupied by their daughter, Mrs. Hudson, until their death. Mr. Pratt never was in perfect sympathy with the Baptist belief, though strongly religious. Late in life, through association with the Rev. Charles F. Dole, of Jamaica Plain, he became a Unitarian. He d. May 25, 1882, in Roslindale; his widow d. there, March 3, 1887.

IV. Florence R.<sup>8</sup> (twin), b. Jan. 13, 1849, in Freeport ; mar. Oct. 13, 1869, to William R. Hudson.

Mr. Hudson enlisted for three years in the regular army, 17th U. S. Infantry, during the Civil War. He was stationed at Fort Preble, Portland Harbor, most of the time. At the end of his term he was discharged, greatly incapacitated from having broken both ankles and their not being properly cared for. He recovered sufficiently to walk with a cane, but used his feet with difficulty as long as he lived. He d. May 10, 1906, in Roslindale, where his widow remains.

11. Parmenas<sup>7</sup>, son to Edmund<sup>6</sup>, b. July 12, 1818, in Freeport ; mar. April 11, 1844, in Hampstead, N. H., Tryphena Webster Mooers, b. July 4, 1825, in Hampstead. She was daughter to Edmund and Hannah (Brickett) Mooers, of Hampstead.

Parmenas Pratt, the youngest child in this large family, was full of life and fun, a great favorite with everybody. He sang, and played on every instrument that belonged to his brothers. He liked to dance, which was a great trial to his father, Deacon Edmund. From his father he learned his trade, and soon became a master-mason. Searching for larger opportunities than his home town afforded, he made his way to Massachusetts, with his brother Ambrose, where he built the first brick house in the city of Lawrence ; it is now standing. He also constructed other buildings in neighboring towns and cities, and prospered. In 1849, he joined the expedition to the gold-fields of California that chartered a brig to take them "round the Horn." As a good business venture, he carried a quantity of house-frames, ready to be put together quickly. The voyage was tedious ; six months were consumed before they entered the Golden Gate at San Francisco. His nephew, Robert H. Pratt, four years younger than himself, was of the company. Afterward, in describing the voyage, Robert said that his uncle Parmenas was much depressed, and seemed to regret the step he had taken. Parmenas did not long survive ; he died of an acute illness, near Weaverville, Trinity County, California, on Oct. 4, 1850, aged thirty-two years. His nephew Robert was with him at the time.

His widow was married, second, Feb. 17, 1856, in Manchester, N. H., to Nathaniel Marshall Ladd, by whom she had one son. They reside at Bordentown, N. J.

Issue: I. Rosa Lucretia<sup>8</sup>, b. July 1, 1847, in Methuen, Mass. She was graduated from the Framingham Normal School, and taught before her marriage. On April 2, 1872, she was married in Andover, Mass., to Henry Chapin Sawin, b. Aug. 22, 1843, in Saugus, Mass., son to the Rev. Theophilus Parsons Sawin. That same year, 1872, Mr. Sawin accepted the position of head master of the Bigelow School, in Newton, Mass., a position which he ably filled for thirty-three years, until his death, on April 28, 1905. The services held in Eliot Church, Newton, on May 8, were attended by a large number of people, old and young, who came to pay loving tribute to his memory; and the casket was buried beneath a wealth of rare flowers.

His influence for good in the community cannot be overestimated. Two generations — for many of his later pupils were children of those who were under his teaching in earlier years — were guided and uplifted by his judicious counsels to a desire for a higher education, not only for their own gratification, but that they might be of use to others. A friend wrote of him as "a man possessed of a quiet, retiring, unostentatious disposition. He was never known to even refer to his long years of public service in behalf of the education of the young; he was never known to shirk a duty; he was always at his post, and was ever alert to acquire new methods and new ideas. He was a great reader, a broad thinker, and a ripe scholar. . . . We mourn the demise of such a valuable public servant and loyal fellow-citizen." His widow resides in Newton.

- III. Samuel<sup>6</sup>, son to David<sup>5</sup>, b. May 6, 1776, in North Yarmouth. His marriage certificate was dated Dec. 19, 1801, certificate given March 10, 1802, to Sally Soule, of Freeport.* Little is remembered of him. He left his wife and two young children to go on a voyage, and never returned. It was supposed that he was lost at sea; but, many years afterward, it was reported that an old acquaintance had met him in the south.

Issue: One or two children — names unknown.

- IV. David <sup>6</sup>, son to David <sup>5</sup>, b. July 6, 1778, in North Yarmouth; mar., first, Polly Mann, of Freeport, b. 1781.

Their marriage intention was dated Feb. 27, 1801, certificate given April 22, 1801, in Freeport.† Her name at this time was recorded as Polly, and her sisters always called her Polly, though late in life she oftener was called Mary. As "Polly Pratt" she appears in a list of the members of the First Congregational Church of Freeport, who were admitted "between 1806 and 1810;" on Aug. 9, 1818, she was dismissed to the Congregational Church of North Yarmouth.‡ It was about this time that they removed to the latter town, where she d. Jan. 28, 1840, aged fifty-nine years.

The second wife of David Pratt was Margaret (Humphrey) Favor, widow of Timothy Favor, of North Yarmouth; they were married "at the house of the bride," Sept. 11, 1842. Margaret Humphrey, b. June 10, 1796, was mar., first, May 6, 1822, to Timothy Favor, b. 1777; he d. Sept. 16, 1837. They had one daughter, Sarah Favor, b. May 17, 1823; she became the wife of Asa Humphrey, and d. Dec. 31, 1858, leaving one daughter. The second wife of Asa Humphrey was Abby Frances <sup>8</sup>, daughter to Ambrose <sup>7</sup> and Lydia Ann (Nelson) Pratt.

In his youth, David Pratt learned the trade of a shipwright, and was employed in constructing vessels in the then famous shipyards of Freeport. These yards have long been idle, and, though some of the wharves and buildings remain, they are in a dilapidated condition. At this time he lived in his father's house on Mitchell's Hill, at South Freeport. It was a "roomy" old house, measuring forty feet across the front, by thirty feet at the end, with a low, gable roof. Before 1835, it was demolished. On Nov. 3, 1807, Cornelius Soule and Edmund Pratt, both of Freeport, yeomen, together "with David Pratt Ju<sup>r</sup> of the same Freeport Shipwright," for $350, paid by Barnabas Soule, conveyed to him "a certain piece of land lying in Freeport aforesaid adjoining the easterly side of the Eastern branch of Couzens's River Containing about fifty acres more or less known by the name of Equivalent Lot, Number<sup>d</sup> twenty six, bounded westerly on Couzens's River, Northerly on William Brown's land, Easterly on land of Cornelius Soule, and Southerly on land of David Pratt Jun<sup>r</sup>."* This lot was on the westerly side of Mitchell's Hill, and either a part of David Pratt, Sr.'s original land, or adjoining it. The settlers on this hill were few; David Pratt's house near the pine tree was the most northern; † to the south, divided by a stone wall still there, was the homestead of Ira Mitchell. A little southeasterly was the house of Captain Enos<sup>6</sup> Soule, whose wife was Sally<sup>6</sup> Pratt; and, about west from the latter, the house of Barnabas<sup>6</sup> Soule, father to Captain Enos<sup>6</sup>. On April 25, 1834, Ira Mitchell and his wife, Sarah, conveyed to "Enos Soule of s<sup>d</sup> Freeport mariner," a small strip of land "on the East side of the Town road leading from the County road by said Soules now dwelling house." ‡ These two deeds give a good description of David Pratt's location.

In 1808 and 1809, David Pratt, Jr., was a surveyor of roads in Freeport; he does not appear to have filled other town offices. Before 1818, he removed to North Yarmouth; the house that he owned and occupied there still is standing, in good condition in its exterior. The interior is much out of repair. Originally it was a small house of one story, which he purchased of Dr. David Jones and moved nearer the street.§ He added to this another room, and built a second story over the whole, with a commodious woodshed in the rear. The steep and narrow stairway, like the companionway of a vessel, the woodwork of the interior and outside frames of the windows, all suggest the work of a shipwright rather than a carpenter. After the death of "Master David," as he was familiarly called, the house and all its furnishings were sold, the house passing into the possession of Mrs. Susan (Pierce) Pratt, wife of his youngest son, David<sup>6</sup>. Several years later, Susan Dunham, daughter to David<sup>5</sup>, bought the house and lived in it. She sold it to a Mr. Plummer. When occupied by David Pratt, the house was the first on the right of the road to Freeport, after crossing the bridge just below the first fall on Royal River. It stands on a slight elevation that, in his day, sloped to the river with an unobstructed view of his shipyard. Since then, another house has been built between it and the river. In recent years, the ancient wooden bridge has been replaced with a substantial structure of iron.

One of the earliest industries of North Yarmouth was getting out lumber; much of it was white oak, of a quality so superior for shipbuilding that many of the most prominent men turned their attention that way. For many years an upright saw-mill at Gooch's Falls (the second falls, near the present Pulp-Mill) was owned and operated by "John Gooch, David Pratt, John Sargent, Benjamin Gooch, Rufus Gooch, John Cutter, James Russell, Joseph Russell, Ebenezer Pratt, and Jeremiah Baker."*

David Pratt's shipyard was on the bank of Royal River, south of his house. How early he launched a ship of his own construction does not appear. The first on record was the brig Cornelia, of 160 tons, built in 1826. There were other builders, but few ships were set afloat in North Yarmouth of more than 500 tons; "Master David" confined himself to the smaller craft in great demand for the coasting and fishing trade. His "vessels were noted for their thorough build, graceful models, and superior sailing qualities." The following is a list of the ships he built, with their tonnage; three schooners, not included because their

Several of "Master David's" sons-in-law worked in his shipyard, and afterward became builders on their own account. Why he should have built the J. Baker, in 1857, after thirteen years of idleness, is not apparent, unless it was to show that, notwithstanding his seventy-nine years, he could construct a large ship as well as the younger men. The decline of shipbuilding in North Yarmouth was due to various causes, prominently the fact that long voyages of two or three years' duration ceased to be as profitable as formerly. The old shipmasters were passing away, and the younger generation did not care to follow the sea. The last ship launched from the yard, in 1885, was photographed.† After years of idleness and decay, the banks of Royal River at this point are being utilized for other purposes; and the trolley line from Portland passes by.

David Pratt was a member of the First Baptist Church of North Yarmouth for many years. The records of the church at this period are so fragmentary that reference to volume and page is impossible, but from them it is gleaned that, in 1823, Edward Small, David Pratt, and Ebenezer Pratt were the standing committee of the church.‡ In 1824, David Pratt was taxed on an "income of $2,120" the previous year. The revenue for support of the church appears to have been a pro rata tax on the incomes of the members, and he paid the highest tax; few other incomes exceeded five hundred dollars a year. He was considered a wealthy man. The causes that led to his change of faith are unknown, but on March 1, 1829, he and his wife Mary were received, "by public profession," into the Congregational Church of North Yarmouth, and the date of her death is recorded there.* It appears, from her being received a second time as a member of that church, that she probably for some years attended the Baptist Church with her husband.

Margaret, the second wife of David Pratt, was a devoted member of the Baptist Church; she always attended its services, while her husband went to the Congregational Church. He died, from what is now called pneumonia, on May 1, 1861, aged eighty-two years and ten months. His widow Margaret died in the summer of 1882, aged eighty-six years.

Issue by first wife: 1. Timothy<sup>7</sup>, son to David<sup>6</sup>, b. about 1802, in Freeport; mar. Jane Chandler, b. March 6, 1802, in Freeport. She had a twin sister, Charlotte; they were daughters to Joel<sup>5</sup> and Pamelia (Lincoln) Chandler, of that town.†

Timothy Pratt followed the sea from his boyhood, and early attained the rank of captain. His home was a cottage situated on the main street of Yarmouth, just above where the Cumberland road comes down to Main Street,‡ near the Baptist Church. This cottage was destroyed about 1848, by fire; the family and such household goods as were saved were sheltered temporarily in a house near by. The following spring, rumors of the discovery of gold in California reached the Eastern States. Captain Timothy determined to go there; and it is thought to-day that the loss of his home was responsible for his taking so many of his family with him. He chartered one of his father's ships, the bark Abby

Baker, called his eldest son, Augustus, from his studies at Bowdoin College, and made him first mate ; Enos, the next son, was second mate. The only daughter, Jane, was placed in school, and the third son, Franklin, was left with a near neighbor who was very fond of him. The captain's wife and twin sons, William and Henry, completed the family of six that sailed, with a few seamen, on that eventful voyage. The cargo was house-frames.

It was not often that sailing vessels attempted to go through the Strait of Magellan ; Captain Timothy, however, tried it, with the result that he was becalmed for eighty days, under the most trying conditions. They were becoming short of provisions and of water, to say nothing of the harassing delay. Favorable winds at last took them out on the open sea, and they sailed up the west coast of South America. One day the captain dropped dead on deck ; it was thought his death was caused solely by grief and anxiety. The sailors rowed ashore and buried him on the nearest land, an island near San Luis Obispo, about a hundred miles below San Francisco, on the coast of California. The son Augustus then took command of the ship, and brought her into Sacramento Bay. Shortly after reaching port the cholera broke out ; the sailors deserted the ship, and "robbed them of everything they could lay hands on." Augustus commenced a letter to his aunt, Susan Dunham, saying, "Already the ravages of this dread disease are upon us." The unfinished letter finally reached her and was kept for years. After Augustus and Enos, William, one of the twins, aged about eleven, was the next to succumb. The mother died of a broken heart. Captain Talbot, of Freeport, happened to sail into the harbor ; he went on board and found Henry Pratt, the other twin, the only survivor on board. He buried William and the mother, and took Henry with him, with such effects as he thought prudent. Captain Talbot's voyage was long, and it was a year or two before Henry reached home. What became of the Abby Baker is not known ; she probably was taken for salvage. If a bark of only 259 tons should undertake such a voyage to-day, it would be thought suicidal.

Albion Seabury was one of the most prominent shipbuilders of his native town; his shipyard was on the northeast side of Royal River, at East Yarmouth. The first vessel that he launched probably was the brig Harry, in 1831. Other vessels of his construction were the schooners Union, Exchange, Albion, Hope, Kate Aubrey, brigs Helen, Maria, Star, Sophia, Persia, Russia, America, Union, Ann M. Knight, sloop Gull, and the ship Hudson. From 1842 to 1847, he was associated with George Dunham, as "Seabury and Dunham," and from 1849 to 1879, with Joseph Seabury, as "J. and A. Seabury."*

The house built and occupied by Albion Seabury, opposite that of his father-in-law, David Pratt, is a large and beautifully constructed building, which is now (1906) the home of his youngest daughter, Mrs. Dresser. Mr. Seabury and his wife, Dorcas, for many years were members of the old First Congregational Church of Yarmouth; on March 30, 1859, they were dismissed to the Central Congregational Church.† He d. in Dec., 1881, in Auburn, Maine; his widow, Dorcas, d. Oct. 13, 1897, in Yarmouth, aged ninety years.

Maine, son to Caleb and Margaret (Morse) Dunham, of Brunswick.

George Dunham was a large shipbuilder, as well as a shipowner, in Yarmouth. He was associated with Albion Seabury, under the firm name of Seabury and Dunham, from 1842 to 1847. During that time they built the barks Henry Kelsey, 200 (tons), Archimedes, 291, J. W. Blodgett, 250, Polka, 165, Ellen, 200, schooners Westogustogo, 105, Petrel, 130, sloop Empress, 35, brig Vancouver, 180, and ships Helen Augusta, 450, Blanchard, 598. They also had a large sail-making loft in a storehouse on Union Wharf.* Mr. Dunham, in 1848, formed a partnership with Matthias Allen; during that year they constructed and launched the bark Sunny-Eye, 252 tons, and the brig Harriet, 173. The following year, 1849, Mr. Dunham removed to Winterport, then called Frankfort, on the Penobscot River, where he built large ships, chiefly by contract. One of his large ships, a clipper called the Nonpareil, is said to have crossed the Atlantic in nine days, and "broken the record."

In 1856 and 1857, during a season of great business depression, Mr. Dunham built two large ships with his own capital. He held them for a time, but finally was obliged to sell them at a loss; this caused his failure. He gave his comfortable home and everything to his creditors, and removed to a farm in Strong. But "Sandy River was not navigable," and farm life was not congenial; a few years later, he removed to Bangor, and resumed shipbuilding, which he continued until his death. He is described as "genial, generous, and hospitable." His wife "was essentially a home-maker, devoted to her family, fond of reading, and particularly gifted in the use of her needle." They both were members of the Congregational Church.

7. Eliza<sup>7</sup>, daughter to David<sup>6</sup>, b. May 17, 1818, in Freeport; was mar., about 1839, to Captain Hiram Chesley Hatch, a seafaring man. He was b. 1812, in Minot, Maine, son to Chesley and Betsey (Perkins) Hatch, of Minot.

✓ Chesley Hatch was a blacksmith, who had removed to Minot from North Yarmouth. His father, Hiram Hatch, of North Yarmouth, appears to have been the first manufacturer of wagons and carriages in that section; the iron-work he used came from the blacksmith shop of his son Chesley. It also is recorded that Hiram Hatch "made the first "bel lows-topped chaise," and wore the first "long trousers," in town. His wife was a Brown, whose "father lived to be over ninety years old." This Hatch family doubtless was descended from Barnabas Hatch, cooper, sometime of Tolland, Conn., of Duxbury, 1727, and of North Yarmouth, 1729.*

✓ Hiram Hatch lived in what was called "No. 9," opposite the schoolhouse. For a time, after his marriage, the family of Captain Hatch lived in his grandfather's house. Early in the "gold fever" of 1849, the captain went to California, where he remained. After the marriage of her eldest daughter, Mrs. Hatch joined her husband in the fall of 1856, taking with her the two younger daughters, Harriet and Mary. But the climate did not agree with her, she had constant trouble with her throat while she was there; in about a year she returned to Portland. In 1861, she moved to Falmouth, where she lived, with all her children, in the old Buckman Tavern; later, her sisters induced her to return to Yarmouth, and she was living there when her husband died, in 1863.

Captain Hatch was very successful in his business enterprises on the Pacific coast ; he was interested in mills, and had established a line of vessels that were plying between Humboldt Bay and San Francisco, with passengers and merchandise. Between those two points there was a dangerous shoal, called "The Bar," upon which he was wrecked on Feb. 22, 1863. His vessel was lost, with all on board, but his body was found and buried on the shore. As soon as Mrs. Hatch received the letter informing her of her husband's death, she went to San Francisco, leaving home on April 11. When she reached there, the people were very kind and sympathetic, for her husband was well known as a careful and skilful navigator ; but the main object of her long journey was not realized. Captain Hatch's partner, one McLean, was lost with him, as well as valuable papers ; and she was told that there was no estate to settle. On reaching home, July 8, 1863, she removed to Portland, where she lived until her death, Dec. 26, 1883, at the age of sixty-five years.

She was the thirteenth and last child of John and Sarah (Mitchell) Pierce. Sarah Mitchell's family lived at Falmouth Foreside. Susan Pierce was tall (five feet, seven and a half inches); her usual weight was about one hundred and twenty-two pounds.

David Pratt, Jr., did not attain the height of his father; he was only five feet, nine inches tall, but he was powerfully built. At the age of sixteen years he commenced going to sea, and made his first voyage with his brother, Captain Timothy, "round the Horn," in 1839. After that he sailed as mate on the Reaper, a number of years. As captain, he succeeded Captain Benjamin Webster in the Heloise, and sailed in her for five years (1862 to 1867), carrying passengers and freight, between San Francisco and Hongkong. During this time he was forced to remain at Hongkong, for six months, by the Confederate cruiser Alabama. The Alabama had come into Chinese waters, by way of the Cape of Good Hope and the Indian Ocean, and coaled at Singapore, Dec. 23, 1863; not until she was reported to have rounded the Cape of Good Hope, on her return to France in March, 1864, did any American shipping dare venture out.* Captain Pratt and his wife were royally entertained at Hongkong by the American consulate and by Chinese mandarins. A Russian corvette, whose officers were all noblemen, took them up to Tokio, where they spent several weeks. But as soon as the embargo was off, Captain Pratt resumed his regular trips from San Francisco. The intervals between these trips were consumed in coasting from San Francisco along the shore to what now is Alaska,† at his own venture, for ice, furs, and fish. He was the first person to introduce trade in fresh fish at San Francisco.

Early in 1868, Captain Pratt and his wife returned to their home in Yarmouth; from there he made several short voyages, usually without his wife. His last voyage as captain was on the J. Baker, built by his father in 1857. He was to take her "round the Horn" to California, for other parties, but the bark was overladen by those who sent her out, and at Callao the crew mutinied because they considered her unsafe. With difficulty he quelled the mutiny, but not before he had received several wounds, one of which permanently injured the sight of one eye. At Acapulco the ship was condemned and sold. Because of defective eyesight he never again took command, but was sailing-master for a number of years on the Alice Cooper, of which John H. Humphrey, of Yarmouth, was captain. About 1884, he removed with his family to Atlantic (a village in the town of Quincy, Mass.), where he engaged in stair-building. He d. March 1, 1892, in Atlantic, aged sixty-nine years.

Susan Pratt passed through the experiences common to the wives of seafaring men. In the earlier years of their married life, when her husband was at sea most of the time, she lived with her children in a small cottage between the home of her father-in-law and Daniel L. Mitchell. When "Master David's" house was sold, after his death in 1861, she bought it, and moved in with her little family. But she had not been there much more than a year before her husband returned, obtained command of the Heloise, and took her with him to the Pacific coast. Her home was broken up, the daughter was placed in boarding-school, and the son with relatives. Upon her return to Yarmouth, five years later, she resumed housekeeping. The valuable curios, gathered by her and her husband in foreign lands, she left by will to her only grandson, William Frederick Pratt. She d. Jan., 1896, in Atlantic, having just passed her sixty-ninth birthday.

Issue: I. Susan Adelaide<sup>8</sup>, b. June 6, 1850, in Yarmouth, Maine; was mar., first, in Boston, Dec. 10, 1870, by the Rev. Justin Fulton, to John Edward Robinson. He d. Jan. 16, 1891, in Revere, Mass., their home. She was mar., second, Dec. 16, 1895, in Montgomery, Alabama, to Warren Ralph Dickinson, who was killed in a railroad accident, Sept. 10, 1896. Her third husband, to whom she was married March 2, 1901, at her home in Revere, is Frank Tuthill Sterling.

Mrs. Sterling received her early education in Yarmouth. While her parents were abroad, 1862 to 1867, she attended the old North Yarmouth Academy, and boarded in the family of the principal, Edwin Hoyt. Those five years had changed her from a rosy little girl of twelve to a rather tall and pale young lady of seventeen, whom her father did not recognize when he returned. After her marriage, she lived many years in Revere; but in 1893, she sold her property there, and since has resided in Somerville, Mass.

He mar., second, about 1878, in Portland, Oregon, Maud Cornelius, of Portland, Oregon. After her death, he mar., third, about 1889, in Norfolk, Virginia, Lily Dozier.

Captain Pratt first went to sea with his father, at about the age of seventeen years. Several years later, he went on a voyage as mate with another captain; the captain became insane and jumped overboard, and Pratt brought the ship home. The owners of the ship gave him the position of captain on her next voyage; and thereafter he sailed in command of large ships on foreign voyages, until about the time of his third marriage. From 1891 to 1895, he was manager of hotels in Fernandina, Florida, Thomasville, Georgia, and Suwanee, in the same state; then he went to New York City. For some time Captain Pratt has been in command of the yacht Aquilla, owned by Mr. Eno, of the New York Yacht Club.

Early in life, Timothy Pratt followed the sea; but, a few years after his marriage, he engaged in farming on a tract of land which he cleared on the "Merrill Road," bordering on the line between Freeport and Pownal. About 1818, he removed with his wife and three children to Jay, Maine. He lived in Jay and Canton, Maine, until after his daughter, Mary Richardson, went to Concord, Mass. He and his wife spent their declining years with this daughter, or near her. Hannah Pratt d. Sept. 4, 1862, in Concord, aged seventy-nine years; she was buried in the adjoining town of Sudbury. Timothy Pratt d. Feb. 17, 1865, in Concord, aged eighty-four years, and was buried beside his wife.

May 13, 1786, in North Yarmouth; d. there, May 15, 1853, aged sixty-seven years.

Joseph Pratt lived about two miles from the village of Yarmouth, on the road leading to Pownal, but only a short distance from the main road to Brunswick. Timothy Davis, whose daughter Eunice married Samuel<sup>5</sup> Soule, lived in the last house in town on that road, with Joseph Pratt beside him.* Mr. Pratt kept a small store, near his home, where he received farm produce and cord-wood in exchange for West India goods, calico, etc. All trade at that day was by barter, very little money being in circulation. After a time he gave up the store and purchased a farm near his house; but he always lived on the same place until a few years before his death, when he purchased a house in the village and moved there. All the children were born in the first house, and remained at home until scattered by marriage. On August 14, 1818, Joseph Pratt and his wife Mary were received, from the First Congregational Church in Freeport, into the First Congregational Church in North Yarmouth.† He died Nov. 21, at the age of seventy-three years, and was buried Nov. 24, 1855, in the Baptist burying-ground. His wife, who had been buried in Davis's family burying-ground on the Davis farm, was removed and placed beside him.

Captain Darius Pratt was well known as a man of superior ability. He commanded large ships that sailed to foreign ports, on voyages of two and three years' duration. In 1854, while master of the Pumgustic, loaded with railroad iron, from Cardiff, Wales, to New York, he was shipwrecked. His wife and only child were with him. The ship was lost; but Captain Pratt, with his family and a part of the crew, was rescued and taken to Liverpool. They sailed for home on the ill-fated Arctic, which was lost in September, 1854. After leaving England the Arctic never was heard from, and the supposition was that she encountered an iceberg and foundered in mid-ocean.

10. Thomas Odiorne <sup>7</sup>, youngest child to Jonathan <sup>6</sup>, b. Feb. 27, 1838, in Freeport. His wife was Sarah Ann Carver (known as Sally), twin sister to Mary Jane Carver, wife of Enos Pratt Allen.* They were married about 1863.

In his earlier years, Thomas Pratt followed the sea. He never would talk of his experiences, but another sea-captain of Freeport, who was an eyewitness to the affair, tells this story:

Thomas Pratt had risen to the rank of second mate, when a mutiny occurred among the crew of his vessel as they were nearing the Canary Islands. The fourteen men comprising the crew intrenched themselves in the fore-castle and refused duty; at the same time they threatened death to any one who tried to enter. Not one of the other officers dared to make a move, but Pratt declared that he would fight it out single-handed, if he could get no help; and he did. With only his hands to aid him, he made a rush for the forecastle; "there was some wild work for a few minutes," but he effectually quelled the mutiny, though he received a stab in the back that nearly ended his life.

During the Civil War, he was in the 30th Maine Regiment of Volunteers. After the war was ended, he returned to Freeport and worked as ship-carpenter. He lived in Brunswick and Bath, Maine; about 1897, he was mysteriously drowned at New Haven, Conn.

XI. Rispah<sup>6</sup>, daughter to David<sup>6</sup>, b. Aug. 1, 1794 (1796?), in Freeport; mar. Nov. 5, 1811, in Freeport, to John Toby.*

This family is quite lost sight of, but the story of "Aunt Rispah's" first visit still lingers in Yarmouth. It is said that, after having been away for some years, she went home for a visit, and her first appearance to her sister, "Sally Soule," was in this fashion: unheralded, she made her way around the house to the back, where she found Sally sitting on the doorstep shelling peas. Putting her carpet-bag down on the grass, she seated herself in silence and commenced shelling peas, too. It is not remembered which spoke first, but the end was a real old-time visit, such as is unknown in this generation; the visitor helped with the housework and sewing, "swapped receipts," exchanged family news in detail, and assisted in spinning, weaving, or knitting, whichever was on hand.

Rispah Tobey is said to have lived about three years in Wales, Maine, and then removed to China, Kennebec County, where she died. China is now a small, but picturesque country village, where few records were kept until recent years.

Of ten children, the ninth, Sarah Morton, is the only one living, and she is too feeble to be of assistance. The grand-

Early in life a sailor, he rose by gradual but certain steps to the command of some of the largest vessels that left the harbors of Maine; among these were the ship Don Juan, of 645 tons, built in 1841, and the ship Haidee, of 655 tons, built in 1843. He was one of the "Soule Brothers" (Enos, Henchman S., and Clement H.), who, for more than a quarter of a century, carried on a large shipyard at Strout's Point. One or another of these brothers at first commanded the vessels built by the firm; eventually they retired from the sea, but continued to build and to manage vessels. Some of the largest, staunchest, and handsomest ships built during that period were constructed and launched in their yard; among the number were ten large ships, five barks, two brigs, and three schooners, besides innumerable smaller craft.

In the war of 1812, Captain Soule, then about twenty, was taken prisoner on the high seas and carried to Dartmoor prison, in England. He was but one of the 2500 sailors captured at sea soon after the breaking out of hostilities against the United States, and imprisoned; their only "crime" was refusing to serve in the British navy, because they were American citizens. They were treated with great harshness ; and those who were so fortunate as to survive were kept until the end of the war. Enos Soule spent two years within those walls. His record in Freeport as "a model citizen, public-spirited, patriotic, and of unbending integrity," survives him ; but the last few years of his life were clouded by hallucinations and fancies, — harmless, though often extravagant, — which made it necessary to place a guardian over his extensive financial interests. His condition then was largely attributed to the sufferings he endured in Dartmoor prison, from which he never fully had recovered.

The homestead of Captain Enos Soule, on the road between Freeport and South Freeport, is said to have been the land once owned and occupied by John Hayes<sup>5</sup> and Hannah (Bowdoin) Mitchell.* Later, he removed "to the old field called the Neck." Captain Enos C. Soule began a seafaring life at the age of seventeen years ; he became master in 1846, and sailed on long voyages until 1860. At that time he took charge of the old shipyard so long controlled by the "Soule Brothers," and constructed, within the next few years, the ships Enos Soule, of 1518 tons, Lucille, 1394 tons, Tam O'Shanter, 1602 tons, Uncle Tobey, 1100 tons, Superior, 1240 tons, Yerick, 1187 tons, besides other craft.* Eighteen years later (1878), he stopped building, "under the conviction that iron would soon replace wood in naval architecture," and soon after removed to Newton, Mass.† He d. "There is no spot on any of Joshua Soule's descendants; they are honest, moral, temperate men and women," writes a distant relative. During "the great famine in Ireland," 1846-47, Captain Rufus Pratt brought over two Irish girls, Annie and Margaret —, to save them from starvation. Annie was sickly and did not live long; Margaret was adopted by Joshua Soule. She was "a remarkable girl, the life of the home circle, a sincere Christian, and a member of the Baptist Church." She became a milliner, and went into business at Augusta, Maine, where she made her home with friends of the family of Hon. James G. Blaine. "She did as much for the comfort of Joshua and Rachael Soule in their declining years as any of their children." Afterward, she married an "educated and handsome man, who had the misfortune to have lost a leg." Her son was young at the time of his mother's death.

THE CHANDLER FAMILY

EDMUND CHANDLER, of Duxbury, Massachusetts, in 1633, is supposed to have been the person of that name who was with the Pilgrims in Leyden, though there are no records that positively prove it. Yet the positions of trust to which he was chosen, in the early settlement of the town of Duxbury, show that he was well acquainted with the others who had removed there, and that they had confidence in him. He may have been with the Pilgrim band at Amsterdam, but his name does not appear until after their removal, in the summer of 1609, to Leyden. He was admitted to citizenship in Leyden, November 11, 1613, under the guaranty of Roger Wilson and Henry Wood. This is evidence that he was then of age; consequently the date of his birth may have been as early as 1592, if not earlier. Subsequently, he "guaranteed" others for citizenship; on April 27, 1615, John Keble, on May 5, 1623, Roger White, and on April 17, 1626, Edward Coolidge. Like the others who, as Bradford says, had been "constrained to leave their native soyle and countrie, their lands & livings, and all their freinds & familier acquaintance"* in England for the shores of Holland, to escape religious persecution, he was enabled to engage only in the most menial occupations. When he was admitted to citizenship, in 1613, he was called a "say-weaver," — "say" being a coarse woollen cloth, something like a blanket. In 1623, he was mentioned as a "draper," in 1626, as a "pipe-maker." He buried a child March 26, 1619, in St. Peter's; he then lived in Nieuwestadt.†

These records, which are all that have been found in Leyden concerning him or his family, prove that he belonged to the remnant of the Pilgrim body that remained after the first three ships, the Mayflower, the Fortune, and the Anne, had been sent to New England. Impatiently they awaited the time when they, too, should join their brethren. Their beloved pastor, John Robinson, had sickened and died (March 1, 1625); this added greatly to their discouragement, "and many, being aged, begane to drop away by death." But the little band continued to "hould close togeather, in peace and quietnes; . . . though . . . very weake." * Through the instrumentality of Isaac Allerton, aided by Mr. Sherley, they were brought over in two companies, the first in 1629, the second in 1630.†

In 1633, Edmund Chandler, then a resident of Duxbury, was made freeman, church membership (before 1686) being a necessary qualification. He again appeared in lists of freemen, March 7, 1636-37,‡ and in 1658.§ On January 3, 1636-37, he was chosen Constable for the town of Duxbury, and "sworne" to that office on March 7, following.¶ At that time, and for many years afterward, the Constable was the chief executive officer in the parish or town; he carried a staff, and his duties were surrounded with much formality. "Edmond Chandler and Jonathan Brewster" were sent, June 4, 1639, as the first Deputies from the town of Duxbury to the Plymouth Colony General Court; Bradford was then Governor. Edmund Chandler again served, as Deputy from Duxbury, in sessions beginning August 29, 1643, and March 5, 1643-44.¶¶ Like most of the early settlers, Edmund Chandler acquired large tracts of land by purchase and by grants:—

is not recorded, but in assigning the plots for "mowing of Grasse for the p<sup>r</sup>sent yeare, 1633 . . . Manasseh Kempton" was given "that at the Iland Creeke abutting vpon Stephen Tracies ground & Edmund Chandlers." On "Oct. 20, 1634, Edmun Chanler came and had recorded that he had sold [for £12] unto John Rogers a lot of land adjoining the land of Robert Hicks, on Duxbery side, the lot which he had bought of John Barnes." * "April 2, 1638: Threescore acres of land are graunted to Edmond Chaundler, lying on Duxborrow side and to be layd forth for him by Captaine Standish & M<sup>r</sup> Alden, w<sup>ch</sup> was accordingly layd forth on the northeast side of the lands graunted to Moyses Symons, & ranging as his doth in length north & by east and south & by west from the marked trees." † This was his homestead which was occupied later by his sons.

"July 19, 1639: M<sup>r</sup> Thomas Besbeeche [Bixby] of Duxborrow," for twenty shillings paid by Edmund Chandler, conveyed to him one acre of land on the north side of his land, "next to the highway . . . the said Edward is to set up the fence betwixt them before the beginning of the next March." Here Chandler built a house. In 1647, Bixby sold to "M<sup>r</sup> John Reiner [Rev. John Reyner] of Plymouth," all "his house and houseing and sixty acars of vpland . . . excepting one acar sould vnto Edmond Chandeler of Duxbery." This acre "Edmond Chandeler" conveyed, June 8, 1650, to "John Browne of Duxborrow, weaver." It was then described as "an house Scittuate in Duxburrow aforesaid, and an acar of land on w<sup>h</sup> the said house standeth next aioyning vnto the house and land of M<sup>r</sup> John Rener above the path . . . with all the boards shelues dores locks and windows belonging vnto the said house with all the fencing stufe and all other apurtenances now standing vppon the aforesaid acar of land," etc.‡

November 2, 1640, in a grant of land by the General Court, at "North Riuer," the share of "Edmond Chandlor" was "fifty acres, wth some meddow to y<sup>t</sup>" This tract of "marsh meddow and vpland" Chandler sold, June 7, 1651, for £10, to "Thomas Byrd of Scittuate."* On May 4, 1653, James Lendall, of Duxbury, tailor, for £3, sold to "Edmond Chandeler of the towne aforesaid . . . planter," two acres of marsh meadow, "sometimes the meddow of Peeter Brownes Children . . . neare unto the Dweling place of the said Edmond Chandeler; being bounded on the one side with other land of the said Edmond Chandelers; and on the other side with a certaine pcell of meddow belonging to John Washburn Junier." This sale was acknowledged before "Mr John Alden asistant." On July 15, 1653, Edmond Chandeler exchanged, "upon equall tearmes," with Edward Bumpas of Marshfield, all his interest "in Duxburrow New plantation commonly called and knowne by the Indian Names of Satuckquett and Nunckatatesett [Bridgewater] and places adiacent; ffor all . . . Right title or enterest the said Edward Bumpas hath . . . as one of the thirty-foure purchasers . . . att the places commonly called and knowne by the Indian names of Cushnet and Coaksett [Dartmouth]; and places adiacent." This exchange also was acknowledged before "Mr John Alden asistant."† "Duxburrow New Plantation," later Bridgewater, had been granted, in 1645, to fifty-four persons who were proprietors of the town of Duxbury, including Edmund Chandler.‡

On July 3, 1656, the General Court granted unto sundry of the ancient freemen of that jurisdiction certain tracts of land from "Assonate Neck to Quaquerchand, alias the Plain"—afterward called Freetown. Three years later (April 2, 1659), a deed was signed by the Indians, conveying this tract to Captain James Cudworth, Josiah Winslow, Constant Southworth, Edmund Chandler, Love Brewster, Kenelm Winslow, John Waterman, son to Robert Waterman, and others.* This share of land "by Taunton Riuer" Chandler left, by will, to his son Joseph.

For a few years the services of Edmund Chandler, in the town of Duxbury and in the Colony, were important and varied. As his name does not appear in the list of males able to bear arms, in 1643, it may be inferred that he then was over sixty,† or incapable of performing military service. At a session of the General Court, held October 2, 1637, "Jonathan Brewster & Edmond Chandler for Ducksborrow" were chosen a committee, with the Governor and Assistants, to divide a tract of five hundred acres of "meadow grounds betwixt Eele Riuer and South Riuer."‡ The First Church of Duxbury "was gathered" in 1632; but steps were not taken to build a meeting-house until March 21, 1635-36, on which date the two factions that could not agree upon a site met together. On one side were "Mr William Collier, Stephen Tracy, Mr Joh. Howland, Edm. Chandler [and] Josuah Pratt," on the other side, "Capl. Myles Standish, Manasseh Kempton, George Kenrick, John Jenney, & Edwards Bangs." All were present but Edward Bangs; seven of the nine held "Jones River to be the fittest place & there to build a meeting howse & towne . . . the other two preferred Morton's Hole."§ The "old burial place" is near the site of the meeting-house built during that year, and of the second structure erected in 1706 on the same site. The oldest stone in the graveyard bears the date of 1697.||

On June 7, 1636, Edmund Chandler was chosen upon a "jewry that serued vpon trials;"¶ September 1, 1640, he served on jury before the General Court, and October 5, following, on jury before the Court of Assistants.* In 1639, he took to himself an apprentice, with the customary bond, as follows:—

“29 Jan. 1638–9. Memorand: That John Edwards hath put himself apprentice to Edmond Chaundlor, of Duxborrow, yeom. [yeoman] and after the manner of an apprentice wth him to dwell from the last day of September next ensuing the date hereof vnto the end & terme of fve yeares thence next ensuing, to serue him in all such lawful labors as the said Edmund shall ymploy him in during the said terme; the said Edmond Chaundler fynding vnto his said servant meate drinke and apparell during the said terme, and in thend thereof to giue him double apparell throughout, in conuenient manner, wth one suite for Lords days and another for working days.” †

The inventory of the estate of Godbert Godbertson (Cuthbert Cuthbertson) and Sarah (Allerton), his wife,‡ which was presented in Court November 11, 1633, mentions £2:05 due to “Edm. Chandler.” On November 13, 1637, the inventory of the estate of William Palmer, “the elder,” of Duxbury, was taken by “Jonathan Brewster Edmond Chaundler Willia Basset & John Willis,”—due to “Edmond Chandler . . . 00:05:0.”§ On page sixty-two of the “wast book,” or blank book, now called The Brewster Book, which is supposed to have belonged to Elder William<sup>1</sup> Brewster, and is known to have become the property of his eldest son, Jonathan<sup>2</sup> Brewster, is this incomplete memorandum, in the handwriting of Jonathan:—

“[worn] nd Chandeler had of me the [worn] of June. 1644. in bookes.”||

These books may have been the same that were mentioned in the inventory of Edmund Chandler, in 1662, as “a pcell of bookes att . . . 00:10:00.”

The only transaction in which Edmund Chandler appears with a member of his family is where he gave bail, May 30, 1637, for Samuel Chandler, his eldest son. John Jenney brought suit "against Samuel Chaundler, in an action vpon the case to the damage of XX<sup>l</sup>, wherevpon a pcell of beauer of the deffen<sup>ts</sup> was arrested aboard the s<sup>d</sup> M<sup>r</sup> Jenneys bark. Edmond Chaundler became bayle to the action, and to satisfy the debt what it should be." Upon the agreement of Edmund Chandler to pay the indebtedness, the action was "wthdrawne." Two years later, June 2, 1639-40, Samuel Chandler brought an action in court against "John Jenney gen<sup>t</sup> . . . to the da<sup>m</sup>. of XL<sup>l</sup>;" the jury found for the plaintiff.* Possibly it concerned the same matter.

No mention of a wife of Edmund Chandler is made, either in Leyden or in New England, yet it is probable that he married at least twice. His eldest son, Samuel, was of age in 1633, and he lost a child in 1619, at Leyden; the children of a younger, or second, wife were Benjamin, married about 1671, Joseph, married before 1673, and four daughters, who all appear to have been unmarried when his will was made, in 1662. His death, when he probably was more than eighty years of age, occurred between May 2, 1662, the date of his will, in which he calls himself "old and weake," and the taking of an inventory of his personal belongings and debts, on June 2, following. His homestead and other real estate in Duxbury, Dartmouth, and Taunton, together with the "three thousand and five hundred [weight] of sugar," at Barbadoes, were not included in his inventory, which is chiefly a list of the effects of an aged man whose wife was not living. His will was as follows:—

- I. Samuel<sup>2</sup>, b. as early as 1612, in Leyden, since he was of age when he was taxed, March 25, 1633, in Plymouth, "[£]00:09:00," in corn at six shillings per bushel; March 27, 1634, he was taxed the same.*

In 1637, John Jenney brought suit against him for £20, and held a "p̃cell of beaver . . . aboard the s<sup>d</sup> Mr Jenneys bark," as security; two years later, Samuel Chandler recovered £41 from John Jenney, which may indicate that the original action was unwarranted.† In 1639, Samuel Chandler was mentioned as a "planter," of Duxbury.§ In 1657, he took the Oath of Fidelity at Duxbury.§ At the time of his father's death in May, 1662, Samuel had occupied his father's house, and had the use of his father's land and cattle for two years of a "tearme of six yeares (which hee tooke them for)." The next year, Dec. 1, 1663, he made complaint "that the range of the land is not sett betwixt Moses Simons & himselfe;" the Court ordered three men to "run the line with the best care they can." On May 1, 1666, an error in this line, which was acknowledged by the Court "a mistake," was rectified. That same year, June 5, Samuel Chandler and Joseph Wadsworth were chosen surveyors of highways in Duxbury.* Joseph Chandler and Samuel Chandler served on a jury to lay out a highway for George Soule; their report was dated "19—first month—1678—79."†

Three years after the death of his father, Samuel Chandler received his first grant of land from the town of Duxbury—"Sixty acres of land between Indian head river, and the great Cedar Swamp, with the condition that he shall not sell it except to a townsman." This grant was dated Oct. 21, 1665.‡ In 1678, he sold, for £10, to John Rouse, Jr., all his interest in "those Lands . . . which goe vnder the Name of the servants Lands . . . at a place comonly knowne by the name of Saconett Necke," which he bought of "Thomas Bryant one of the companies servants." Samuel Chandler died, intestate, at Duxbury, in 1683. The only mention of his wife is in the above deed and in the settlement of his estate; in neither, however, is her name given. After his death, the following order was passed by the Court:

"March 5, 1683-84

Thomas Delano

John Rouse"

While he was treated in the Plymouth Colony with due consideration, Samuel Chandler appears to have been a son quite unworthy of his respected father. It is easy to conjecture that his early surroundings in Holland had bred in him the very evils which the Pilgrims, as a body, feared from a long sojourn there.* He was inclined to be lawless ; he was improvident and illiterate. In support of these statements, on Oct. 2, 1637, he was "warned . . . to appeare at the next Court to answer for shooteing off three guns in the night tyme, as if it were an alarm." A little later, he was warned "to psonally appeare at the next Gefñall Court to answere . . . concerneing opprobrious & slanderous words spoken by him against the Gou<sup>r</sup> and goûment." Several times he was presented to the Court "for being drunke ;" the last time on record was in June, 1670, when he was fined five shillings, and John Sprague was fined the same "for sufferring Samuell Chandler to be drunke in his house."† The estate settled by the Court upon his widow amounted to the small sum of £26 : 16 : 06. He signed all papers with his mark, and his son Samuel did the same. There probably were other children, but the only one identified is the son Samuel, Jr.

Issue: 1. Samuel<sup>2</sup>, of Duxbury. He married Margaret Bonney, widow of Joseph<sup>2</sup> Bonney, of Pembroke.

The date of marriage of Samuel Chandler does not appear. He was a respected citizen of Duxbury, and lived on land adjoining that of his cousin, Joseph<sup>3</sup> Chandler. On Feb. 1, 1724, they settled the bounds between their farms on Brewster's Brook,‡ in the centre of the town. Samuel also shared in the several divisions of the common lands of the town, of which mention is made in connection with Joseph<sup>2</sup> Chandler. The date of Samuel Chandler's death is not known. There was no inventory of his estate, nor division. His will, dated July 17, 1742, was proved Aug. 2, 1742. It was signed with his mark.

was to have his land, homestead, stock of cattle, utensils on the farm, etc. His son Thomas was to have £30, "when he comes of age," and half the "moveables," etc., after his mother's decease; his daughter, Abigail Delano, was to have £10, with the other half of the "moveables," under the same condition. The witnesses to his will were Thomas Phillips, Keturah Samson, who made her mark, and Jonathan Peterson.

The will of Margaret Chandler, widow, of Pembroke, to which town she had returned, was dated Sept. 27, 1754, and proved Aug. 7, 1758.* She mentioned sons, Ezekiel Bonney, Nathaniel Bonney, and Thomas Chandler, daughter Margaret Robinson, "daughter Foster's daughter, . . . daughter Delano's daughter," granddaughter "Margrat Crocker," and granddaughter "Martha Delano." The inventory of her estate was extensive.

Issue by first husband:† I. Mary* Bonney, b. Nov. 14, 1708; mar. to Josiah Foster, Jr. She had a daughter, and probably other children.

serving in the "Army at the westward." His inventory was taken in 1761, and his property was divided among the heirs in 1765. Thomas Chandler, on Dec. 3, 1763, was appointed guardian of Jonathan Delano, son to David, deceased, and "nephew of the said Thomas."* Issue: Jonathan Delano, and other children.

VII. Samuel<sup>4</sup> Chandler, b. Oct. 3, 1723, in Duxbury. Although not quite of age, his father appointed him executor of his estate, which is shown by the following: "Item, I give to my Well beloved daughter Abigail Dellano the sum of Ten pounds . . . to be paid when my Executor Comes to y<sup>e</sup> age of One and twenty years by my Executor."

II. Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, born in Duxbury; mar. about 1671, Elizabeth Buck, b. 1653, daughter to Cornet John Buck, of Scituate.

Cornet John Buck was in Scituate before 1650. He and his brother Isaac are supposed to have been sons to James Buck, who came early to Hingham. John Buck was the first proprietor who settled on Walnut Tree Hill in Scituate; his house was on the west side of that hill. He succeeded the veteran Robert Stetson as "Cornet of the Troopers" before King Philip's war,‡ in which he saw constant service. His first wife was Elizabeth, daughter to Samuel Holbrook, of Weymouth.§ Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Chandler, was his eldest daughter; there were also five other daughters and four sons.|| Cornet John Buck's will, dated Sept. 4, 1697, gave legacies "to my Daughter Chandler" and "to all my Grand children living at yarmouth and Sandwich."*

Benjamin Chandler, although he received several grants of land in Duxbury,† was a resident of Scituate as late as 1683, and probably several years after. Immediately following the death of his brother Samuel, that is, on "Jan. 20, 1683 [-84] . . . Benjamin Chandler of Scituate," for £10, paid by Edward Wanton, sold to him "all that my sixty acres of land . . . within the Township of duxborough between the old path called the massachusetts path and the great Cedar swamp . . . as it was laid out & bounded by Sam<sup>ll</sup> Nash and phillip dellano," by order of the town of Duxbury, "after it was granted to samuel Chandler now deceased." These sixty acres he confirmed to Wanton, as "all those my lands at s<sup>d</sup> duxborough that were lately in the occupation of the above-named Samuel Chandler." This deed was signed:

"Benjamin Chandler (seal)

The marke of X Elizabeth Chandler" (seal)

It was acknowledged, March 27, 1685, by Benjamin Chandler, before "John Alden assist:" ‡

Benjamin Chandler removed to Duxbury before 1691; in that year he died intestate. The inventory of his estate, taken by Thomas Delano and Edward Southworth, was as follows:—

5. Mary<sup>s</sup>, b. 1678, in Scituate.
6. Joseph<sup>s</sup>, date of birth unknown. That he was a son of Benjamin is proved by the following extract from the town records of a petition* presented by Joseph Chandler to the town of Duxbury, March 1, 1747-48:—

"Whereas my honoured Father Benjamin Chandler late of Duxbury County of Plymouth, Dec<sup>d</sup> died seized of a considerable real Estate in said Town of Duxbury and after his death to wit on third Tuesday of March 1691-2 the County court then holden at Plymouth settled the whole of the Real Estate aforesaid upon the four Sons which my Father left behind him  $\frac{2}{3}$  to the Elddest of the said sons  $\frac{1}{3}$  part to each of the other said sons" the said Joseph made complaint that although an inhabitant and a freeholder he had not received his share of the common lands divided in January, 1709, and prayed "that I may yet have my right." This petition was not granted.

7. Keturah<sup>s</sup>, mentioned in her mother's will.

8. Elizabeth<sup>s</sup>, also mentioned in that will.

III. Joseph<sup>s</sup>, b. in Duxbury. (Vide infra.)

IV. Sarah<sup>s</sup>, b. in Duxbury. She and her sisters probably were unmarried at the time of her father's death, in 1662. Her share of his estate was one third of his sugar "att Barbadoes."

V. Anna<sup>s</sup>, b. in Duxbury. To her, also, was bequeathed a third of the sugar.

VI. Mary<sup>s</sup>, b. in Duxbury. The remainder of the sugar was given to Mary. At that early period corn, sugar, and beaver-skins were used as currency; and, later, tobacco.†

VII. Ruth<sup>s</sup>, b. in Duxbury. With her brothers, Benjamin and Joseph, she was to receive from her father's estate the "rent" of the homestead due from his son Samuel, and a share of the cattle when they were divided at the expiration of Samuel's lease.

Joseph<sup>2</sup> Chandler, son to Edmund<sup>1</sup> Chandler by his second, or last, wife, was born in Duxbury. His father, in his will, dated May 3, 1662, appointed him executor, which is proof that he then was of age; consequently the date of birth of Joseph may be considered as previous to 1641. There is no record of his marriage, but the name of his wife and proof that Edmund was his father are contained in the following extracts from a deed, acknowledged July 7, 1673, by "Joseph Chandeler and Marcye his wife." This deed was written in the old English form, so rare in Plymouth but more common in the other New England Colonies: —

"Know all men by these p'sents That I Joseph Chandeler of the Towne of Duxburrow in the Jurisdiction of Plymouth in New England in America Blacksmith for and in consideration of the sume of thirty pounds in currant pay of New England to me in hand payed by henery Brightman of Portsmouth on Rhode Island in the Jurisdiction of Providence plantations in New England in America yeoman;" convey "To him the said henery Brightman and his heires and assignes for euer; a certaine tracte or psell of land belonging to mee lying and being on the easternsyde of Taunton Riuer in the Jurisdiction aforesaid vnto sundry of the freemen of that corporation; It being in Number the fourth lott bounded on the southsyde with the land of Christopher Wadsworth, and on the Northsyde with the land of Samuel house abutting vpon Taunton Riuer aforesaid as yett vndeuided lying on both sydes Taunton Riuer, from Mattapoissett vpon the said Taunton Riuer on both sydes the said Riuer viz: all that my said lott of land which is the fourth lott bounded as aforesaid being on the eastern syde of Taunton Riuer with the Meddowes thervnto appertaineing; excepting my meddowes or Rights of meddowes att Sepecan; To haue and to hold [etc.] . . . This Joseph probably was the "Joseph Chandeler" who, with "Certaine psons of Sandwich," was fined ten shillings by the General Court, May 7, 1661, "for refusing and neglecting to assist marshall Barlow, in the execution of his office." † The death of his father, the following year, doubtless was the cause of his return to Duxbury, where he was a prominent citizen throughout his life.

On June 3, 1679, Joseph Chandler and Samuel Chandler were chosen by the General Court to lay out a highway for George Soule. At the same session of the Court, Joseph Chandler was chosen "Constable for Duxbury." ‡ In a bill of charges of the town of Duxbury for the year 1686, Joseph Chandler was paid "[£]0-2-3 . . . for a cunstables stafe & a small matter dew before." § He was "sworne . . . July 1, 1684," to serve on a jury. || March 21, 1700-01, "Joseph Chandler Sen<sup>r</sup>" was chosen Grand Juror. "Joseph Chandler" and others "desiring to take up their freedom" were approved by the Town May 28, 1689.*

For many years the common lands of the town of Duxbury were let out to proprietors. In 1692, Joseph Chandler was charged "[£]00-6-0 . . . rent dew" for town land.† March 27, 1694-95, he "subscribed" to pay "£00-02-0" for the use of town land, for the term of seven years, "on little wood neck."‡ On May 17, 1703, measures were taken by the town for a division of the commons, but action was deferred because of the remonstrance of thirty-two citizens, including "Joseph Chanler Sen. [and] Edmund Chanler." On September 12, 1707, however, it was voted in town-meeting that every freeholder and housekeeper should have twenty acres of the commons, and those who had previous grants should have enough more to make up the twenty acres. Yet a protest was entered at the town-meeting of March 7, 1709-10, by "Joseph Chandler, Sen<sup>r</sup>, Edmond Chanler, Samuel Chandler," and others, against acts passed concerning the division.§ Their protest availed nothing and appears not to have operated against them, since the members of the Chandler family recorded, June 5, 1710, in a list of those having rights in the commons, were Samuel, John, Benjamin, Joseph Sr., Edmund, and Joseph Jr. With the exception of Samuel, all of the above shared in the divisions by lot, on July 12, 1712, and December 13, 1713. On June 29, 1714, Samuel shared with them in the drawing. As late as May 10, 1748, the list of voters who had rights in the common meadows, at Duxbury, included:—

Benj Chanler (2½ rts)	Joshua Chanler /"

The early farm or homestead of Joseph<sup>2</sup> Chandler consisted of twenty acres, at the lower end of the town, bounded by "meeting house path" and the Plymouth road. It is best described by the following extract from the Town Records:

"Whereas formerly a tract of land was granted by the town of Duxburrrough to Joseph Chandler, lying between the meeting house path and Plymouth road, and was laid out to him, but now no record to be found of it, We Ensign John Tracy, Thomas Delano and Abram Sampson, being desired by Joseph Chandler, have laid out unto him twenty acres of land, more or less, bounded on the East by the meeting house path to a red oak tree marked on four sides, and from said tree by a west south west line to a pine tree which is the corner mark of the town land, and from said pine tree by the same line, a range of trees marked, until we come to a cart road, where we marked a red oak sapling, and then bounded by said path and Plymouth road, and by said road to the lotted land of said Joseph Chandler, and so by Joseph Chandlers line to the meeting house path. . . . This 17th day of February 1699-700."*

That this land remained his homestead is proved by the provisions of his will, dated April 21, 1721. He gave to his son Joseph all his cooper's tools and "half of y<sup>e</sup> smiths Tools & y<sup>e</sup> anvil that he hath in his Possession;" and to his "Grandson John Chandler . . . y<sup>e</sup> other half of my smiths Tools." The death of Joseph Chandler, Sr., at above eighty years of age, probably occurred in November or December, 1721; the inventory of his estate, which does not include his many and valuable tracts of land, was taken on the 28th of the latter month. The date of death of his wife, Mercy, for whom he made ample provision, is unknown. The following is a copy of his will and inventory; the originals have not been preserved:—

ISSUE

- I. Edmund<sup>3</sup>, son to Joseph<sup>2</sup> and Mercy (—) Chandler, was born in Duxbury. His wife was Elizabeth<sup>3</sup>, daughter to Jonathan<sup>2</sup> Alden.

Jonathan<sup>2</sup> Alden, son to John<sup>1</sup> and Priscilla (Mullins) Alden, inherited and occupied the home of his father, in Duxbury. His wife, whom he mar. Dec. 10, 1672, was Abigail, daughter to Benjamin Hallett, Esq., of Barnstable. Captain Jonathan Alden died Feb., 1697, and was buried, under arms, on the 17th day of that month. He left no will, but the division of his estate mentions widow Abigail, eldest son John, who received a double portion, and the two brothers and three sisters of John.* On July 2, 1711, "Jonathan Alden, Andrew Alden, Edmond Chandler and Elizabeth his wife, Thomas Southworth and Sarah his wife," all of Duxbury, signed a deed, acknowledging that they had "Received of our Brother John Alden of Duxborough . . . full satisfaction as to our Parts and claims to any Part of the Lands that was our Fathers Jonathan Alden's in Duxborough afores<sup>d</sup>;" May 20, 1723, the deed was recorded.† The name of the third sister did not appear.

Edmund Chandler is not mentioned as holding any town office in Duxbury. Although a remonstrant, with his father and brother Joseph, against the division of the town's common lands, he shared with them in the divisions of 1710,

Issue : 1. Mary<sup>4</sup>, b. in Duxbury.

2. Keturah<sup>4</sup>, b. Sept., 1688, in Duxbury ; mar., Jan. 19,

1703, to Nathaniel <sup>8</sup> Sampson (Abraham <sup>2</sup>, Abraham <sup>1</sup> Sampson). He was b. about 1682, in Duxbury, and d. there in 1749. Keturah Sampson d. Jan. 14, 1777, aged eighty-eight years, four months.*

3. Elizabeth <sup>4</sup>, b. in Duxbury.

4. Samuel <sup>4</sup>, b. in Duxbury.

5. Joseph <sup>4</sup>, b. about 1694, in Duxbury, was of Pembroke. He mar. Sept. 8, 1720, Elizabeth, daughter to Samuel Delano; he was then called "Joseph Chandler 3d." About 1748, he removed to Cornwall, Conn., and d. about 1784, in that State.†

Issue: I. John <sup>5</sup>, b. Oct. 25, 1722, in Duxbury.

II. Simeon <sup>5</sup>, b. Jan. 24, 1724-25, in Duxbury; and probably others.

6. John <sup>4</sup>, b. in Duxbury. He was appointed executor of his mother's estate, and probably was the "Grandson John Chandler" mentioned by his grandfather, Joseph <sup>2</sup> Chandler, in his will.

7. Benjamin <sup>4</sup>, b. in Duxbury.

II. Joseph <sup>3</sup>. (Vide infra.)

III. John <sup>3</sup>, b. Sept., 1676, in Duxbury; mar. March 4, 1707-08, in Duxbury, Sarah Weston.‡

John Chandler was not remembered in the will of his father, Joseph <sup>2</sup> Chandler. This may be accounted for by his having been married a number of years and having no children; but that John <sup>8</sup> was son to Joseph <sup>2</sup> is evident from the following town record: § —

"At A Town Meeting held in Duxburrough, 2 June 1687. The Town did give unto Joseph Chandlers son John who by Gods Providence has lost his hand 50 Acres of Land Lying on the Easterly side of the South River & Northerly side of the Place Called the Rockes Provided that his Father shall have liberty to sell or other wise improve sd Lands for the benefit of the afore sd child."

The child John at that time was eleven years of age, and there is no record of any other Joseph, or John, Chandler previous to 1687, nor for many years afterward. John Chandler received his share of the common lands in the divisions of 1710, 1712, 1713, and 1714; he also was mentioned among those voters who had rights in the commons in 1748.* John Chandler d. April 7, 1759, in Duxbury, aged eighty-two years and seven months.† His will, dated Sept. 14, 1747, proved July 9, 1759,‡ bequeathed to "my kinsman John Chandler of Duxborough abovesaid, who is the Son of my Brother Joseph Chandler all that farme of Land in Duxborough abovesaid whereon I now Dwell both upland & meadow the whole Containing about an hundred acres together also with all my other lands Contiguous thereunto lying in the town of Marshfield . . . with all y<sup>e</sup> houseing fencing and orchards . . . "John Chandler" [seal]

His wife Sarah was appointed executrix. She was b. Oct., 1688, and d. April 13, 1764, in Duxbury, aged seventy-five and a half years.§ No issue.

- IV. Esther<sup>a</sup>, b. in Duxbury; mar. Feb. 14, 1705, to John<sup>2</sup> Glass, of Duxbury. She was his second wife; the name of his first wife is not known.

VI. Sarah<sup>8</sup>, ‡ b. in Duxbury, probably was the youngest daughter. She was remembered in the will of her father with the gift of "my Dwelling House & y<sup>e</sup> Land it Stands upon after my Wifes Decease & a Bed." She also shared, with her two sisters, in another tract of land in Duxbury.

JOSEPH<sup>8</sup> CHANDLER

Joseph<sup>8</sup> Chandler, son to Joseph<sup>2</sup> and Mercy (—) Chandler, was born in Duxbury, but the date of his birth, through the loss of the town records of that period, is unknown; it was probably about 1678 or 1679. His wife was Martha, daughter to Samuel and Mary (—) Hunt, of Dux-‡ Winsor, in his History of Duxbury (page 305), adds to this family, Benjamin, b. 1684, in Duxbury, who d. there, March 26, 1771, aged eighty-seven years. Proof that this Benjamin was not son to Joseph<sup>2</sup> Chandler is fully shown in the records of the Probate Court. Joseph<sup>8</sup> Chandler, son to Joseph<sup>2</sup>, removed to North Yarmouth, Maine, in 1727, and d. there in 1744. But the Joseph Chandler who petitioned for a guardian for "his brother Benjamin Chandler," who had "become non Compus Mentis and intirely unable of taking Care of himself Family or Estate," is stated to have been "of Duxbury." The petition was brought Feb. 3, 1745; he was appointed guardian, and served until 1750. The guardianship continued until the death of Benjamin, in 1771.

When the town of Duxbury "sold lands to defray the charges of building the New Meeting House," September 16, 1706, Joseph Chandler purchased, for £15, "a parcel of vpland, and a parcel of meadow . . . containing about twenty-four acres, and began at a white oak stump at the westerly corner of the said Chandler's shop, and thence it runneth upward along by the countrey road to his home lot . . . excepting out of this land the Tar-Kiln Pond,"‡ a marshy spot of some three acres. In the division of the commons, 1710, salt meadows, 1712, and common meadows, 1748, Joseph Chandler, Jr., was allotted the same quantities of land as his father. In 1748, however, it was granted to his heirs,§ for he died in North Yarmouth, Maine, before February 19, 1745, at which time his son, Zachariah, appeared as administrator of his estate. The homestead of Joseph Chandler in Duxbury is fully described in the following record of a division of land between him and his cousin, Samuel Chandler : || —

In 1727, when a number of the citizens of the coast towns of Massachusetts, between Hingham and Plymouth, united with several men of Boston in an effort to permanently settle the town of North Yarmouth, on the shore of Casco Bay,* Joseph Chandler and Jacob Mitchell, two prosperous blacksmiths, left their shops and began anew in North Yarmouth. It is probable that Joseph Chandler did not take his family there until some two years later, for his son Judah, b. Aug. 13, 1720, stated, in 1796, that "when he was about nine years old" he moved there with his father; but the homestead, in Duxbury, was not sold until 1735. The deed describes the same land that was mentioned in the division of 1724-25:—

"Joseph Chandler . . . Blacksmith," of North Yarmouth,† County of York, for £400, conveyed to his son, "Philip chandler of Duxborough . . . Blacksmith," all "my Farm or Tract of chosen one of the three selectmen and assessors, filling the former office again in 1735 and 1741. He was assessor in 1733, 1734, 1735, and 1738.* In the spring of 1734, he was appointed on a "committee to treat with persons claiming undivided lands." When the second town-meeting of the year was held, October 3, 1734, "Joseph Chandler, Benjamin Prince and Cornelius Sole [were chosen] to receive proposals to build a mill."

Joseph Chandler was number four in the list of nine founders of the First Church in North Yarmouth, in 1729; he was received into that church, November 18, 1730, from the church in Duxbury. His wife, Martha Chandler, was received August 21, 1737; she died, his widow, January 31, 1759, in North Yarmouth.† The death of Joseph Chandler probably occurred late in the year 1744, during the prevalence of the "slow fever" that was fatal to so many.‡ He left no will, but his son Zachariah appeared as administrator of his estate, February 19, 1745 [1744-45]. The inventory of his personal estate was as follows:—

Jonas Mason was born in Lexington, Mass., Oct. 21, 1708. He was of Charlestown, Mass., in 1727; but, before 1731, he had removed to North Yarmouth, Maine. He was received into the First Church of North Yarmouth, Feb. 27, 1732, from the church in Charlestown. In 1737, he was chosen Deacon (with Jacob<sup>8</sup> Mitchell, Sr.), continuing in that office until his death, March 13, 1801, at the age of ninety-three years. His wife, Mrs. Mary (Chandler) Mason, became a member of the First Church, July 9, 1732, and d. Nov. 27, 1787, in North Yarmouth, "aged eighty-five years." ‡

Joshua Chandler was a shoemaker; he lived all his life in Duxbury, and d. there, May 1, 1782, nearly seventy-six years of age. His will, in which he called himself a "Cordwainer . . . sick and weak," was dated May 25, 1761.† He named wife Mary, "only surviving son Ezekiel," who was to be executor, daughter Sarah Chandler, grandson Joseph Chandler, and granddaughters Esther Chandler and Susanna Chandler. In this will he asked his brother, Philip Chandler, to buy his salt marsh in Duxbury, and mentioned real estate in North Yarmouth. This will, made twenty-one years before his death, was proved June 3, 1782.

- IV. Zachariah <sup>4</sup>, b. July 26, 1708, in Duxbury, was mar. Oct. 21, 1736, in Kingston, Mass., by "J Stacey," to Zerviah Holmes, of Kingston.* She was b. in 1715.

Zachariah Chandler was in North Yarmouth with his father before his marriage, and returned there with his bride. As a resident of that town he purchased, Oct. 9, 1731, for £32, of Perez Bradford and his wife Abigail, of Milton, in the County of Suffolk, ten acres of land in North Yarmouth, "part of Lot 82 . . . Together with y<sup>e</sup> One Halfe of y<sup>e</sup> Whole of all y<sup>e</sup> after Divisions and Allotments of Uplands Islands & Meadows within s<sup>d</sup> Township."† This land adjoined that of his father, in "Lot 81." Zachariah Chandler, "coaster," also purchased, for £55, May 8, 1744, of Jeremiah Powell, thirty-five acres in the same township.‡

On Nov. 20, 1746, "Zachariah Chandler of North Yarmouth . . . coaster," purchased, for £400, a tract of land consisting of six hundred and fifty acres, "lying on the Westernmost Side of Great Chebeague Island in Said North-yarmouth . . . in his actual possession Now being." The grantors were "Thomas Waite, Shopkeeper, & Jonathan Williams, wine-Seller," both of Boston, "Deacons of y<sup>e</sup> first Church in Boston." They conveyed their title to this land by right of a conveyance from Ephraim Savage, gentleman, sole administrator of the estate of Richard Wharton, "Late of Said Boston Esq<sup>r</sup> Dec<sup>d</sup> on the Fifteenth Day of May anno Domi 1713," who sold "unto John Marion Isaiah Tay and John Hubbard then Deacons of the said first Church in Boston their Successors in the Said office and assigns In truth to and for y<sup>e</sup> use of the poor of s<sup>d</sup> Church . . . Six hundred & Fifty acres Lying Situate in y<sup>e</sup> Westernmost Side of a Certain Island Called Great Chebeague alias Recom-pence Island in Casco bay."§ This tract of six hundred and fifty acres had been confirmed, by the government of Massachusetts, to Richard Wharton, in 1682. This conveyance of Nov. 20, 1746, was "Made to y<sup>e</sup> s<sup>d</sup> Zachariah alone as by s<sup>d</sup> Deed doth fully appear;" but, eleven days later (Dec. 1), he sold one half to his brothers, and brother-in-law, Jonas Mason, for the sum of £200. Division was then made by which Zachariah's half was "to begin on the westerly Side of the Island at the Boundary or dividing Point, in the Division formerly made between Coll<sup>o</sup> Thomas Westbrook & the first Church in Boston or their Representatives." The deed of partition gave to Jonas Mason, Esq., one sixth of the entire tract; to Jonathan Chandler yeoman, one sixth; and to Edmund Chandler and Judah Chandler, yeomen, one sixth, in common between them.† The first deeds being "Loss'd," and "the said Parties being all Living . . . (having the Original Minits by them)," a new deed was executed Aug. 28, 1775.‡

The two islands in Casco Bay, Great and Little Chebeague, situated about six miles from the mainland, are "famous in their history and ancient proprietors."§ Great Chebeague, the largest island in the Bay, contains over two thousand acres; Little Chebeague, about one hundred and eighty. The latter was granted, in 1681, to Silvanus Davis, who erected a fort upon it.|| The larger island suffered, for many years, from conflicting titles on the eastern side. In 1743, Colonel Thomas Westbrook's interest there was "set off on execution to Samuel and Cornelius Waldo, as was Little Chebeague, also belonging to Westbrook and Waldo, and derived by them from the legatees of Silvanus Davis." * Little Chebeague belonged to the town of Falmouth. The fertile island of Great Chebeague, four miles long by three quarters of a mile in breadth, stands high above the water, with a rolling, hilly surface. It was allotted to the plantation at "Swegustagoe" (North Yarmouth), in 1680.† It has two good harbors, that on the southwest being known, to this day, as Chandler's Cove.‡ At the time of its purchase by the Chandlers, in 1746, the island was heavily wooded with choice timber that was zealously guarded by the early Proprietors.§ Trees of six to eight feet in diameter were not uncommon, — so large that "a yoke of oxen could be turned around on the butt." To-day, the southerly part of the island is quite destitute of foliage, and is devoted to grazing; but there are a few strips of forest toward the north.

Previous to 1800, the inhabitants attended church in North Yarmouth; but, soon after that date, they built a small church, with a square tower or belfry on the front, which is very quaint. The high pulpit, sounding-board, and ancient pews remain untouched except by the hand of time. The church stands, destitute of paint, in a picturesque spot on the hillside at the northerly end of the island, near the landing of the steamers of the Casco Bay Company. It is surrounded by trees, and attracts many visitors.

How many of the Chandler brothers lived on Chebeague has not been determined; some of their children settled there. About 1800, Judah, David, and Rufus were living on Great Chebeague; in 1821, John, Asa, and Judah paid a poll tax, as "belonging to the west part" of that island.||

In 1759, Zachariah Chandler paid the third largest tax of North Yarmouth, Judah Chandler was nine years of age when he went to North Yarmouth, with his father : —

"Judah Chandler, Oct. 21st, 1796, aged 76 last August, deposes that when he was about nine years old he moved with his father from Duxbury to North Yarmouth. About thirty years ago he (Judah) moved eastward and lived about nine years, then returned to North Yarmouth." *

Early in life he followed the sea ; in 1746 and 1753, he was mentioned as a "coaster." About 1766, he removed to Royalsborough (Durham), where he lived in the "south-westerly part of the town near a small pond from which flowed a small stream called Chandler's River," † — a tributary of Royal River. The first saw-mill was doubtless built by Judah on Chandler's River soon after he removed to the town in 1766. Here he carried on lumbering, sending "ton-timber" to Harrisicket (now Freeport) by the "Old Mast Road." If he "returned to North Yarmouth" after living there "about nine years" (that is, in 1775), he soon went back to Royalsborough ; since, in 1777, he purchased, with others, a tract of land upon which was built another mill. The deed states that "Jonathan Bagley of Almsbury [Amesbury], Essex County, Mass., Esq.," for £30, conveyed to "Judah Chandler, O Israel Bagley, ‡ Daniel Bagley, John Randall, Stephen Randall, and John Cushing, all of Royalsborough, Cumberland County, yeomen," three fourths of fifty acres of land in Royalsborough, it "being the south-westerly End or part of Lot number One hundred & Forty Six as laid down in the Plan of said Royalboro'," bordering on the highway, "with the Mill Priviledges and all Appurtenances and Priviledges to the same belonging . . . to hold by severalty & not by survivourship, as followeth, the said Judah Chandler one Eighth part, O Israel Bagley one quarter part, Daniel Bagley one Eighth part, John Randall One Twelfth part, Stephen Randall one Twelfth part, &

John Cushing one Twelfth part." This deed was signed Feb. 24, 1777, by Jonathan Bagley, and recorded May 30, 1788. The witnesses were Mary Bagley and Dorcas Bagley.* It has been conjectured by those most familiar with the locality that the remainder of the fifty acre lot had been occupied previously by Chandler as a homestead. The first mill was located at the head of the falls, near the present bridge. Its successor is now called the "Old Stone Mill." The old road crossed the stream below the present mill, and traces of Chandler's house near by still are visible.

In 1746, Judah Chandler received one sixth of the tract of land on Chebeague, in common with his brother Edmund. With the other heirs, he also conveyed portions of his father's estate.† As a resident of North Yarmouth, he served as private, in 1757, in Captain Solomon Mitchell's Train Band.‡ In 1759, he was taxed £0 : 12 : 1.§ He does not appear to have held any town office in North Yarmouth. In Durham, he was chosen surveyor of lumber. From 1777, he resided in Durham until his death; he probably died in 1802, at the age of eighty-two years. The date of death of his wife, Rebecca, is unknown.

BENONI<sup>3</sup> FOGG

Benoni<sup>3</sup> Fogg, b. about 1688, in Hampton; bap. May 2, 1797; mar., first, in Hampton, Abigail Cass. His second wife was Mary Parker; she was received, June 3, 1733, into the First Church of North Yarmouth, from the Second Church in Hampton, N. H.

North Yarmouth; he married, second, December 25, 1769, Mrs. Sarah Merrill, of North Yarmouth. Their intention of marriage was dated December 9, 1769.

Benoni Fogg was a weaver, also a farmer. He removed, before 1733, from Hampton to North Yarmouth, where he filled several public offices. He was received into the First Church, Dec. 5, 1742, by public profession of faith. His death is recorded in that church, July 5, 1770.

His autograph appears as one of the selectmen of that town:—

And Moreover also I do reserve for my Two Daughters Sarah Chandler & Martha Chandler each of them & both of them a Priviledge for to Live in the House upon the Lot above s<sup>d</sup> so long as they remain UnMarried." This deed was dated November 4, 1734, and acknowledged February 14, 1734-35. In January, 1743-44, Edmund and his younger brother, Judah, "Blacksmiths of North Yarmouth," for £53, purchased a tract of fifty acres, in the town, from Jonas Rice, of Worcester, Massachusetts.† April 26, 1755, Edmund bought, for £40, of Thomas Davee, of Plymouth, Massachusetts, "Seven Acres of the Easterly part of Home Lot N<sup>o</sup> Ten."‡

At that period every man, no matter what his trade or profession, strove to own a farm, part of which he cultivated for the support of his family. The meadows and salt marshes were cut to make hay for his cattle, and the woodlots furnished his only fuel. Generous fires of wood in the huge, open fireplaces, often with a back-log "fifteen to four and twenty inches in diameter," and six feet in length, were the sole means of heating, and of cooking as well. The brick ovens of later days were then unknown. Edmund Chandler was a thrifty farmer, as well as a blacksmith. In 1759, his tax was £2 : 01 : 01, — a larger tax than that of any of his brothers.*

Edmund Chandler filled a number of town offices. In 1741, 1742, 1745, 1758, and 1764, he was Constable.† He served many years as assessor, and was one of the early selectmen.‡

"Northyarmouth June 30 day 1740

then paid to Edmund Chandler the som of two pounds eight shillings and five pence for miking the whipping posts and stones paid by me

02 - 08 - 05." §

In 1665, the town of North Yarmouth, then Wescustogo, had been presented to the Court and fined forty shillings, "for not attending to the Court's order for making a pair of stocks, cage and a ducking stool." It is presumed that the post and stocks erected in the churchyard beside the Ledge, in 1740, by Edmund Chandler, in compliance with the order of the town, were placed there to avoid a similar fine. Winsor says : "Stocks were ordinary appendages to a meeting-house until of late years. They were in Duxbury in 1753." ||

In response to an order that the assessors make a return of the colored people in the town, the following was entered upon the books, January 17, 1755 :—

Deacon Jonas Mason thought it of sufficient importance to record in his diary, under date of February 23, 1751, that "Edmund Chandler [was] scalded very bad." † Chandler probably was then living in the same house where his daughter Rebecca was born two years later. Her deposition, in 1833, when she was eighty years of age, stated that she was "born where Reuben Chandler now lives." ‡ In 1763, after the enlargement of the meeting-house, at the sale of the twenty-eight new pews to defray the costs, Edmund Chandler purchased pew "Nº 25," for "£9:9:4." § In October, 1767, he served in the County Court of Common Pleas, as referee in a plea of ejectment. ||

The name of Edmund Chandler appeared, May 2, 1757, in a list of Captain Solomon Mitchell's company, "comprising the Train Band and Alarm List," in North Yarmouth. It was composed of all males in the town between sixteen years and sixty, and was organized as the First Company of Militia in the town. His brothers, Zachariah, Jonathan, Judah, and his eldest son, Joseph, belonged to the same company. ¶

In the division of land at Chebeague in 1746, Edmund Chandler, "blacksmith" or "yeoman," received with his brother Judah, "one third of one half" between them. ** It is Edmund Chandler died March 30, 1793, in North Yarmouth.‡ He may have left a will; but as all the Probate Records of Portland previous to 1866 were destroyed by the fire of that year, there is nothing that shows the distribution of his estate after his decease.

The exact date of Joseph Chandler's return is not known; it is said to have been in November, or December, 1751. The marriage intention of Joseph Chandler to Susanna Brown was published Nov. 23, 1754; they were married Jan. 20, 1755.* He was but sixteen years of age. In 1757, he belonged to the "Train Band" of North Yarmouth, commanded by Captain Solomon Mitchell; because he was under age his father signed for him.† He probably led a seafaring life, as his sister Rebecca stated that he "died in Hispaniola, in 1763."‡

THE ROBERTS FAMILY

THE family of Roberts is of ancient origin. Tradition on this side of the water says it "came from Wales." One encounters this assertion in many distinct lines, where the Planter ancestors may never have heard of one another. It is generally conceded that the family sprang from the original Britons, who were driven, during the many invasions of England by the Normans and other Continental forces, into the mountain fastnesses of Wales. Later, some spread over into County Cornwall, and there remained. While the people of these two sections retained many general characteristics, in the lapse of time they came to speak a different language, and, with local pride, one division came to consider themselves Cornishmen, the other Welshmen. Yet there were not a few intermarriages — for love knows no nationality.

Ancient records in the Archives of the College of Arms,* in London, show that the Roberts family derives its origin from Justin ap Gurgan, Lord of Glanmorganshire, who was forced out of the castle of Cardiff, in Wales, by Sir Robert Fitz Hammond, in the year 1090, during the reign of William I. Justin ap Gurgan, by his second wife, Ankarad, daughter to Elliston Gloderydd, had a son, Craddock ap Justin, who married "Gladys, granddaughter on the paternal side of Rees a Tudor, Prince of South Wales, and maternally of Griffith ap Conan, Prince of North Wales, was by the father of Morgan Argelloyd, father to Morgan ICHAN, Lord of Avon." Several generations later, William Jenkin ap Richard, a descendant of Morgan ICHAN, became father to Christopher Roberts, of St. Tathan, the first to use the surname of Roberts. Christopher Roberts, Esq., fifth generation from the first Christopher, was gentleman of the Privy Chamber to King George II. The Coat-of-Arms of this branch of the family bears this motto: "Truth will stand." *

In Cornwall, there was a titled Roberts family living in or near Truro. The first to bear a title was "Richard Robartes," who married, about 1605, Frances, daughter to John Hender, of Botreux Castle. In 1616, Richard Roberts was knighted; in 1621, he was created Baronet, and in 1625, was raised to the peerage as "Baron Robartes of Truro." "His wealth made him a mark for extortion." John Roberts, b. 1606, eldest son to Baron Richard, succeeded to the title and estates of his father. On December 10, 1643, as "J. Roberts," he signed the charter of Roger Williams to Narragansett Bay, in New England; he was known at that time as Lord John Roberts, Earl of Radnor. He was a strong Presbyterian and made himself offensive to the government, with the result that his house at Lanhydrock, in Cornwall, was occupied in September, 1644, by the royalists, and his estates were assigned to Sir Roger Grenville by the king. His children were detained as prisoners, but he himself fled "in a cock-boat to Plymouth." Lord John Roberts married twice; his eldest son, "Robert Robartes, styled Viscount Bodmin," b. about 1633, died March, 1681-82, in England.†

Among those who came early to New England was Simon<sup>1</sup> Roberts. He was married, "18th 5th month, 1654," in Boston, by Richard Bellingham, to Christian Baker. She was born 1634, in England, and came over at the age of one year with her parents, Alexander and Elizabeth Baker.

Alexander<sup>1</sup> Baker was at Gloucester, Massachusetts, about 1641, with Rev. Richard Blynman, Obadiah Bruen, Thomas Bray, Hugh Caulkins, and others.* Baker did not remain long in Gloucester, but moved to Boston, where the marriage of his daughter, Christian, and the births of his ten children are recorded.† Simon<sup>1</sup> and Christian Roberts had eight children born in Boston: John<sup>2</sup>, Simon<sup>2</sup>, Samuel<sup>2</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup> who died young, Elizabeth<sup>2</sup>, Ann<sup>2</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, and Joseph<sup>2</sup> ‡ b. Jan. 24, 1673. The obituary notice of Mr. Joseph<sup>3</sup> Roberts, who departed this life February 26, 1774, in Boston, at the age of eighty (son to Joseph<sup>2</sup> and Esther (—) Roberts, and grandson to Simon<sup>1</sup> Roberts, of Boston), states that the father of Simon Roberts was brother to Sir Richard Roberts, of Truro, created Baron of Truro by King James I. It also states that Simon "came over into New England about the year 1649," and that he was cousin to Lady Jane Roberts, and to "Lord John Roberts of Truro . . . created Viscount of Bodwin and Earl of Radnor by King Charles II."§ The will of Martin Roberts, of Truro, England, dated 1594, proved 1598, shows that the name Simon was common in the family at that early date. He mentions his wife Joan Roberts, brother John Roberts, brother Richard Roberts (not the later Baron Richard), "sister Philips," and cousins, William, John, and "Simons" Roberts. The will of John Roberts, of Truro, England, dated 1603, proved 1605, mentions wife Mary Roberts, brothers William and "Symon," sister-in-law Jane Roberts, sister Mary, and nephew John.||

"Hugh Robertes," husbandman, was married by Mr. Samuel Symonds, of Ipswich, to "Mary, daughter of Hugh Calkin," of Gloucester, on "the 8th of the 9th month 1649." * In 1650, Hugh Roberts, his father-in-law Hugh Caulkins, Obadiah Bruen, and Rev. Richard Blynman, with a number of others from Ipswich and Gloucester, were in New London, Connecticut.† John Winthrop, Jr., who had opened the settlement at Ipswich, about 1640 turned his energies and his fortune towards New London, of which town he "eminently deserves the title of Founder;" he was afterwards Governor of Connecticut. Hugh Roberts, tanner, left New London and went to Newark, New Jersey. The date does not appear; but a map of the home lots of the first settlers of "Pesayak Towne (Newark)," from 1666 to 1680, shows that Hugh Roberts was allotted the land marked X, in the southeast section.‡ At New London, the following children were recorded: Mary, b. Dec. 9, 1652, Samuel, b. April 25, 1656, and Mehitable, b. April 15, 1658.§ The last will and testament of Hugh Roberts, of Newark, dated February 26, 1670-71, mentions wife Mary, eldest son Samuel, youngest son Hugh, and eldest daughter Priscilla (probably b. 1650), wife of Joseph Osborn. Robert Treat was witness to the will, also one of three executors. Before 1675, Mary Roberts, widow of Hugh, was the wife of Robert Bond, of Newark.||

Robert<sup>1</sup> Roberts, of Ipswich, whose descendants for several generations will be followed, may have been nearly related to Simon<sup>1</sup> and Hugh<sup>1</sup>. Circumstantial evidence strongly points that way, but there is no absolute proof. Though the descendants of Robert<sup>1</sup> Roberts were numer-

* In September, 1745, "Robert Roberts," who called himself a mariner of Newbury, with his wife, "Sarah Roberts," sold land in Newbury to "Edm<sup>d</sup> March." In 1756, Robert Roberts, of Newbury, mariner, and Sarah, his wife, with Thomas Barnard, of Salem, clerk (minister), and Mary, his wife, quit-claimed land in Amesbury, "formerly in possession of John Foot Jun<sup>r</sup>," for £54, to Benjamin Woodbridge, of Newbury.

The will of "Robert Roberts of Newburyport . . . merchant," dated June 9, 1771, proved Aug. 5, 1771, mentions wife Elizabeth Roberts, Elizabeth Starkey widow of William Starkey, "my Wife's Daughter," eldest son Robert, who was to have a double portion, son Thomas, and daughters, Alice Roberts, Ann Roberts, and Sarah Roberts. The inventory of "Cap<sup>t</sup> Robert Roberts," dated Sept., 1771, refers to "Bristol Goods that arrived after Cap<sup>t</sup> Roberts' Decease." The value of merchandise of all sorts was £3605: 12: 2½, to which "Household furniture" was added, making a total of £4628: 15: 4. The settlement of the estate shows that the widow received a substantial legacy. On Jan. 12, 1780, the other heirs, whose names appear below, acknowledged the receipt of "our full part" of their father's estate, "also of that part of his estate bequeathed to our Brother Robert Roberts, deceased."

The spelling of the name Roberts—Robards, Roberds, Robords, etc.—is probably due to the thick pronunciation of the Welsh and Cornishmen. Those familiar with the Marblehead of fifty to a hundred years ago will recall many such peculiarities. A sample is found in the well-known poem "Skipper Ireson's Ride."

Robert<sup>1</sup> Roberts, of Ipswich, Massachusetts, must have been the emigrant of that name who embarked, May 2, 1635, at London, for the Barbadoes in the ship Alexander, Captain Burche and Gilbert Grimes, masters. All the passengers were required to give a "Certificate from the Minister where they late dwelt," and take the "oaths of Allegiance and Supremacie." At that time his age was given as eighteen years.† In a deposition, dated September 7, 1659, at Ipswich, he testified that he was then "aged about 40 years," and had "knowne the farm in question above 24 years."‡ From these statements it is evident that he was born about 1617, in England, and became a settler at Ipswich immediately after his arrival, in 1635, in the Massachusetts-Bay Colony.§

§ Savage says that Robert Roberts was of Boston, 1640, and of Ipswich, 1648; he also names the first wife of Robert Roberts as Eunice, and his second wife as Susanna. Robert Roberts died in 1663, at Ipswich, and his widow Susanna afterwards was married to Thomas Perrin. To complete the chain, Savage mentions Timothy, b. Aug. 7, 1646, in Boston, as son to Robert and Eunice.

To refute several of these statements, there is no record of Robert Roberts

The first settlement at "Aggawam," incorporated August 5, 1634, as Ipswich, was made in March, 1632-33, at Jeffrey's Neck by John Winthrop, Jr., and twelve associates.* The title to the land at the Neck was obtained by William Jeffrey from the Indians; when Winthrop came there, he called Jeffrey "an old planter." It is supposed that the latter was with the Plymouth company, who went there in 1623-24, and that he remained after the Plymouth men withdrew from the enterprise.† The limits of the town included what are now the towns of Topsfield, Hamilton, and Essex, and parts of Rowley and Boxford. In 1793, "the Hamlet" of Ipswich was set off as Hamilton; "Chebacco" became Essex, in 1819. Ipswich was named for Ipswich, England, "in acknowledgement of the honor and kindness done to our people who took shipping there." The Colonial records state that Masconnomet sold his fee in Ipswich, for £20, on June 28, 1638, to John Winthrop, Jr.; the deed was witnessed by "John Jolyliffe, James Downing, Thomas Coytimore, and Robert Harding."‡ in Boston, either in the First Church, in conveyancing, or as a witness to others. The only Timothy Roberts in Boston was recorded erroneously as son to "Robert and Eunice," in the town books, b. "7th 6 month," 1646; the same Timothy was baptized in the First Church of Boston, "9th 6 mo", 1646, "aged about 1 day," son to "Thomas Robert member of Church in Rocksbury." Eunice, wife of Thomas, in 1647, was a member of the First Church in Boston; after her husband's death, she was mar. "22<sup>d</sup> 8th mo, 1656," to Moses Maverick. Her son, Timothy, of Marblehead, was the only Timothy Roberts in Essex County.

and remarkable character. They were careful of their own example, and thereby gave force to their precepts."* Probably no other town outside of Boston could boast of so many representatives in the early affairs of the government of the Massachusetts Bay Colony as Ipswich. A few of the settlers, before 1650, were :—

John Winthrop, Jr., son to the Governor, and himself Governor's Assistant and Deputy Governor.

Thomas Dudley, Governor, Deputy Governor, Assistant, Commissioner of the Colonies, Justice of the Inferior Quarter Court, and influential to the end of his long life.

Simon Bradstreet,† Governor, Deputy Governor, Colonial Secretary, Assistant, Commissioner of the Colonies, and Justice of the Inferior Quarter Court.

Daniel Dennison,‡ Colonial Secretary, Speaker of the House, Commissioner of the Colonies, Assistant, Justice of the Inferior Quarter Court, Deputy to the General Court ten years, with military rank of Major General in eleven years' service.

Samuel Symonds, Town Clerk 1639–1645, Deputy Governor, Assistant, Justice of the Inferior Quarter Court, Registrar of the Court, Deputy six years to the General Court, and Feoffee of the Grammar School.

Samuel Appleton, of the Governor's Council ten years between 1681 and 1692, Assistant, Justice of the Inferior Quarter Court, Deputy to the General Court nine years, and Captain many years, including 1675–76, of the military company of Ipswich and the surrounding towns.

Richard Saltonstall, Assistant, and Justice of the Inferior Quarter Court.

Robert Lord, Clerk of the Court, and Deputy one year to the General Court.

To these may be added others whose descendants have contributed largely to the growth of the Commonwealth: William Paine, Christopher Osgood, George Carr of Salisbury in 1640, William Bartholomew, Richard Scofield, Reginald Foster, Robert Roberts, William Whitredge, Thomas Whitredge, Thomas Boreman, Jonathan Wade, William Fellows, Edward Harriden, Robert Dutch, Samuel Dudley son to the Governor, Humphrey Bradstreet, and Dudley Bradstreet, the latter son to Governor Simon Bradstreet,* etc.

Johnson, in his Wonder-working Providence, published 1654 in London, says of Ipswich: † "The peopling of this Towne is by men of good ranke and quality, many of them having the yearly Revenue of large Lands in England before they came to this Wildernesse. It is a very good Haven Towne, yet a little barr'd up at the Mouth of the River, some merchants are here, (but Boston, being the chiefest place of resort of Shipping, carries away all the Trade) they have very good Land for Husbandry, where Rocks hinder not the course of the Plow: . . . their Houses are many of them very faire built with pleasant Gardens and Orchards, consisting of about one hundred and forty families. Their meeting-house is a very good prospect to a great part of the Towne, and beautifully built." Their church, which was the ninth in the Massachusetts-Bay Colony, consisted of about one hundred and sixty souls. Rev. Nathaniel Ward was their second pastor. Johnson describes his people as "being exact in their conversation, and free from the Epidemicall Disease of all Reforming Churches."

Such were the surroundings of Robert Roberts, who, when he took up his abode on New England soil, was not yet of age. In various histories he is credited with having become a citizen of Ipswich in 1643 or 1644. From his deposition in 1659, and another record which will be mentioned later, he was there as early as 1635. The earliest town book is much worn, though it has been preserved from further dilapidation by the "Emery process." The greater part of the writing is faded and almost illegible; many leaves are torn or wholly gone. The copyist states that—"These Records following weare taken out of an old booke, that the most of what was written there is either torne out or much defaced . . . what could be transcribed, is as followeth."* There are few records of births, deaths, or marriages, prior to 1664.

Though John Winthrop, Jr., had obtained title from the Indians of the land upon which Ipswich was built, the general unrest among the neighboring tribes caused organized preparations to be made by the town against a surprise. In the spring of 1642, the General Court, fearing that Passaconaway, a Sagamore of the Merrimac, was involved in a general plot to cut off the English, ordered that upon a public alarm the women and children, the old and infirm, should be hurried to the fort, where the ammunition was guarded. Several times the alarm was given. Early in September, 1642, on a Saturday, a messenger arrived with orders that the militia of Ipswich, Rowley, and Newbury were to march at once against Passaconaway, to disarm him. "On the morning of the Sabbath, in a heavy rain, the twenty Ipswich soldiers started out on their expedition. No blood was shed, and in due time he delivered up his guns."† The town settled with the soldiers, December 4, 1643, paying

"12<sup>d</sup> a day allowing for the Lord's day in respect of the extremity of the wether) and the officers dubble: . . . to Robert Roberts 3<sup>s</sup>."* On the 25th of the same month, the widow Lumpkin, who kept an ordinary, or tavern, was reimbursed for the provisions she had furnished the soldiers.

That Robert Roberts continued in the military company, for some years at least, is shown by his subscription, at a "generall Towne Meeting held the 19 of December, 1648," when the inhabitants of Ipswich engaged Major Daniel Dennison to "be their Leader." They voted, at the same time, to pay yearly the several sums subscribed against their names, "while he continued to be our Leader." The list, containing the names of one hundred and sixty-three citizens, was headed by "Mr Saltingstall . . . [£]0: 4: 0;" the same amount was to be paid yearly by "Robert Roberds." "Thos. Harris and Robert Roberds" also paid a town rate of £0: 6: 0, that year.†

The traffic in "strong water" early engaged the attention of the town. The first license to sell was granted Robert Roberts, in 1635, by the Court of Assistants.‡ In 1637, the law forbade "sack or strong water" to be sold at any ordinary because the privilege had been abused. March 12, 1638, Mr. Samuel Symonds was appointed to sell "strong water." The price, in 1646, of a license to retail "strong water, wine & beer," at Ipswich, was £2. Men of the highest reputation soon sought like liberty: Mr. Robert Paine, Mr. William Bartholomew, and Jeremy Belcher received licenses in 1652. Deacon Moses Pengry also kept an ordinary, and dispensed spirit.§

moners or voters of Ipswich was made out; the first two names were "Mr Richard Saltonstall" and "Mr Symon Bradstreet." * As the lower end of the page upon which these names appear in two columns is torn off, and the name of Robert Roberts is not among the large number preserved, one is left in doubt as to whether or not he ever signed it. His name is not in the published lists of freemen in the Court Records. In view of the fact that he refused to pay the rate assessed each citizen, in 1647, toward the expense of building a new meeting-house at Ipswich, it seems probable that he was not in sympathy with existing conditions in the Church. At that time Church and State were one; no man could be a freeman, or vote, or hold office, who did not belong to the Church. "Offences against the sanctity of the Church and Sabbath were dealt with summarily." William Bartholomew, in behalf of the town, brought suit against "Thomas Rolinson" and "Robert Robards" for refusing to pay the rate; † "Rolingson" was fined "40s, and 7s 6d more for costs." "The Town was advised to compound with Roberts for 16s."

The name Robert Roberts appears a number of times in the Court Papers of Essex County, and always favorably: — On the "1<sup>mo</sup>, 1651," he was a witness at Ipswich in the case of Mark Symonds; "4<sup>mo</sup> 1651," he made a deposition at Ipswich. In 1653, he testified that "the six-acre lot by Seargent Fowle's had very good corn on it." In 1658, Richard Shatswell was requested to appear before the Court at Ipswich, "on complaint of Robert Robarts" for "taking from him about halfe a load of wood out of his cart." Judgment was given against Shatswell for "3s-6d damage & 5s-5d cost." In March, 1659, Robert Roberts was a witness in the case of John Baker vs. John Andrews, as to the ownership of two heifers which were said to be "very nearly

September 7, 1659, "The Testimony of Robart Roberts aged about 40 year — Saith that he hath knowne the farme, granted to the Major Gen<sup>l</sup> [Denison] & M<sup>r</sup> Dudley from the first & for divers yeares was employed there to make hay, & looke to cattle in winter, when M<sup>r</sup> Winthrop made use of his farme, in all which time nor sines for more than 25 years he never heard of any crotched or forked tree to be any bounds, nor of any other, than a line from a walnut-tree neere Goodm: fellows house through the glade or hollow on the Eagles nest." There are several copies of this deposition, which vary in some degree. In one it is stated that Robert Roberts had known the bounds of Major General Denison's and Mr. Dudley's land "by the Eagles Nest in the hollow," also the bounds of land at "Labour in Vain Creek." * In March, 1659-60, "Robert Roberts aged 40 yeares" testified about the farm of William Fellows, in Ipswich, which formerly belonged to Mr. Dudley, adding that he had been "employed vpon the same for divers yeares . . . about fieve yeares," for Mr. Fellows.†

The wife of Robert Roberts was Susan, or Susanna; the date and place of their marriage is unknown. Their eldest son recorded in 1669 was John; his birth appears from his depositions to have been about 1646. Susanna Roberts may have been daughter to Emmanuel Downing.‡ He is said

‡ Emmanuel Downing went to Salem, Massachusetts, about 1638, from London, where he was a lawyer of the Inner Temple, and inhabitant of the Parish of St. Michael. He appears to have married twice; his second wife, whom he married April 10, 1622, was Lucy, daughter to Adam Winthrop, Esq., of Groton, County Suffolk, England, and sister to John Winthrop, Sr., first Governor of the Massachusetts-Bay Colony. On March 14, 1638-39, soon after his arrival in New England, "M<sup>r</sup> Emanuell Downeing" took the oath of freedom before "M<sup>r</sup> Endicot and M<sup>r</sup> John Winthrope, Ju," and was Deputy to the General Court, 1639, 1640, 1641, 1643, 1644, 1648. In 1640, he was to have had a daughter Susan, but all efforts to obtain proof of her marriage have been unavailing unless the suggestion is accepted that she became the wife of Robert Roberts.

On the "2<sup>d</sup> 5<sup>mo</sup> 1643," which may be considered near the time of his marriage, Robert Roberts bought of Richard Scofield, of Ipswich, for £11: 17, a house and lot of two acres, with appurtenances, which is described as "having y<sup>e</sup> house lott of Robert Andrews towards the east, a highway leading to y<sup>e</sup> meeting house towards y<sup>e</sup> south, a house lott of M<sup>r</sup>. Bartlemew [Bartholomew] towards the west, and chosen Register for Salem; in 1641, he was proposed for Magistrate; in 1644 and 1649, he was "associate for Salem Court." In 1639, he "was granted 600 acres of land," which was laid out in 1651, "betwene Hampton and the rivers mouth of Pascataq," in New Hampshire. He also bought large tracts of land "three miles west of Salem;" five hundred acres of which he sold John Porter. This tract is now in Danvers. In 1648, the General Court ordered that "as M<sup>r</sup> Downings farm, in the way between Linn & Ipswich, is a convenient place for the reliefe of travellers . . . M<sup>r</sup> Downings tenant shall have liberty to keepe an ordinary;" said tenant "shall live" on the farm. At the same time, Emmanuel Downing was licensed as innkeeper. He went to England a number of times, and was dead before 1656; his widow remained in Salem.

Issue by first wife: I. James<sup>2</sup> Downing. He was of Ipswich, Mass., and must have been of age when he signed the deed of "Masconnomet, saggamore of Aggawam," to John Winthrop, Jr., June 28, 1638.

II. Susan<sup>2</sup> Downing.

Issue by second wife: III. George<sup>2</sup> Downing, b. 1623 or 1624. Sir George Downing, "of East Hatley, in the County of Cambridge," was knighted by Charles the Second. He married, and had children.

IV. Ann<sup>2</sup> Downing. She was mar., first, to Captain Joseph Gardner; second, to Governor Simon<sup>1</sup> Bradstreet, after the death of his first wife.

V. Mary<sup>2</sup> Downing. She was mar. to Anthony Stoddard, of Boston.

VI. Lucy<sup>2</sup> Downing; she became the wife of William Norton.

VII. John<sup>2</sup> Downing, bap. March 1, 1640, in Salem; he probably died 1694, at Boston, Mass.

IX. Joshua Downing, Sr., of Kittery, is thought to belong to this family.

a hous lott of John Perkins the younger, and a piece of land of Thomas Boreman towards the north." * This lot sold to Roberts by Scofield had originally been granted "10th 4th mo, 1639," to Robert Lord, at which time it was described as a "house lott on the High street, butting upon the same street at the South end, having a house lott of Humphrey Vincent on the East, and a house lott granted to William Bartholomew on the West." † Vincent's land was owned later by Robert Andrews and by Thomas Clark.

In the History of Ipswich, published recently by Rev. Thomas Franklin Waters, President of the Ipswich Historical Society, there is a diagram ‡ which shows the location of this house and land of Robert Roberts — originally the grant to Robert Lord — on "The High Street," a continuation of "West End Street." The diagram also shows the nine acres granted, in 1635, to "Thomas Dudley Esqr," lying between Goodman Cross on the west and "a lott intended to Mr. Bradstreet on the east," upon which the grant says "Mr Dudley hath built an house." §

"The High Street," now called High Street, and many other streets of this picturesque old town are to-day much as they were when the town was first laid out. Central Square, to which five streets converge, is very near the geographical centre. The grassy plot in this Square, which like many New England "Squares" is in reality a triangle, has been given to the Woman's Relief Corps, which has erected there a memorial to THE UNKNOWN DEAD of our Civil War. They have also a flagstaff, a little back of the stone. Following North Main Street up the hill, past the First Church, whose present edifice is on the site of the original building which Captain Johnson thought so "beautifully built," with such "a very good prospect," the visitor turns at the end of the street, to the left, into High Street. This street gradually winds around Town Hill, some distance from the top, which in the early days was densely wooded ; the view to the south and west is extensive. From the top of the hill one can see many miles in every direction. It was this feature probably that caused the first settlement to be made on that spot—it could not easily be surprised by the Indians.

The house of Robert Roberts disappeared long ago, but the ancient dwelling now (1906) numbered 17, on High Street, is said to be very nearly on the site of his original house. It is identical with the Philip Lord place, and still earlier homestead of Robert Lord. Beyond a doubt it is of the eighteenth century.* The lots on the street are narrower than when first laid out, but they all run up the hillside, as in the olden days. In front of the seventh house to the west, on the same side of the street, a tablet has been placed by the Ipswich Historical Society. It is of bronze, about two feet square, set into a granite boulder. The inscription is as follows :—

NEAR THIS SPOT WAS THE HOUSE OF

There is also another tablet a short distance beyond, still on the same side of the street, in memory of Governor Dudley. The bronze, about two feet square, is set into a block of hewn granite, and reads :—

The character of the early structures was much the same; they were small, rough houses; many were built of logs and roofed with thatch. The single chimney was constructed chiefly of wood, daubed with clay, or plastered with a sort of lime made of burnt and powdered clam-shells. Repeated accidents from fire caused the town to pass a vote, in 1647, "requiring chimnies to be kept clean . . . also to look to any defect in daubing." The houses were devoid of paint, and most of the windows were provided with oiled paper instead of glass. The use of glass did not become general until more than a hundred years after Robert Roberts bought his house of Scofield. After living there fifteen years, Robert Roberts sold his house and the two acres upon which it stood to Thomas Lord, a shoemaker of Ipswich, for "two bills of fifteen pounds a peece." It was described as on "the north syde of the river," and bounded by land of Thomas Clark on the southeast, "the streete towards ye southwest," and land of William Bartholomew on the northwest. The deed, dated February 22, 1658, was signed:—

The only reference to the occupation of Robert Roberts is found in the Notarial Records of William Aspinwall, of Boston; he is called a merchant. On July 1, 1650, the

"Notarie" certified that the Swallow, of London, William Greene, master, hath here delivered for the account of "Robt Roberts mer.," two bales containing "18 Devon Kersies." * As no other in New England at that time bore the name, this must have meant Robert, of Ipswich. This supposition is strengthened by the fact that William Greene, master of the "shipp Swallow of London," who made voyage after voyage between London and the ports of New England, on February 20, 1648-49, made a contract to deliver, for "W<sup>m</sup> Bartholomew of Ipswich in New England merch<sup>t</sup> & Nathaniel Eldred of London Merch<sup>t</sup>," sixteen hundred quintals of merchantable dry cod-fish, which he should take on "at the port of Cape Anne in New England." The fish was to be delivered to Elias Roberts, of London, Richard Westcome, of London, Richard Ryals and Robert Hamond (no residence given).†

As fishing was the common industry of the town of Ipswich, it is probable that Robert Roberts was more or less engaged in it; but he early became identified with the raising of cattle, an important source of revenue. Johnson wrote, in 1646: "the Lord hath been pleased to increase them in Corne and cattell of late; Insomuch that they have many hundred quarters to spare yearly, and feed, at the latter end of the Summer, the Towne of Boston with good Beefe." ‡

The lowlands northeast of Town Hill, rich in herbage then as to-day, were retained by the town as a commonage, or pasture, in which citizens had certain defined rights but no equity. These commons comprised the whole of Jeffrey's Neck and a considerable stretch of land to the westward. At first the children were "sett to keep cattle," but as the herds increased, men were given the task. In 1652, the General Court ordered every man to fence his land with palings, five-rail fences, or stone walls, conformable to law; yet the herdsmen were retained to keep cattle and sheep from straying, or being assailed by wolves. Bears, too, were not uncommon.

The connection of Robert Roberts with Little Neck, the southeasterly corner of Jeffrey's Neck, and commonly included in it, began in 1651. On February 12, of that year, the town granted to "Robert Roberts, liberty to mowe 2 loades of Hay vpon any part of Jeffreys neck, which he shall solely enjoy during the pleasure of the town, and for w<sup>ch</sup> he shal be ready to serve the towne in taking care that no trespass shall be done vpon s<sup>d</sup> neck." Two weeks later it was "Voted and ordered, by the consent of the Towne, that noe Hoggs shall goe at Jeferyes neck vpon the penalty of five shillings for every offence. Robert Roberts when he pounds them, or brings y<sup>m</sup> to the owner shall have halfe the forfitt."* Swine gave the town more trouble than cattle, and the order that they should be allowed to run at large, "yoked and ringed," was repeated year after year in town-meetings; later they were herded the same as sheep and cattle. In 1643, the cows were gathered "over against M<sup>r</sup> Robert Paynes house," that is, at the corner of High and North Main Streets. In 1647, all the herdsmen were ordered "to winde a horn before their going out."†

Following the sale, February 22, 1658, of his house on High Street, on June 18, Robert Roberts presented a petition to the town, upon which it was "Voted, to leave the consideration of Robert Roberds, his motion about a little pcell of ground at the great neck [Jeffrey's Neck] to the 7 men, and to report it to the Towne." December 24, "Liberty [was] granted to Robert Roberds to fence in half an acre of Land by the Spring near little Neck, and to build a House on it while he hold the Little Neck. The property still to remain the Townes."* It was probably about this time that he hired Little Neck from William Paine, of Boston, since according to the following deposition, Roberts had his rent reduced from £7 to £6 a year, in 1660:—

"The deposition of Robert Day.†

"This deponent saith that about 2 years Since, being at Mr. William Paines at Boston, Robert Roberts being alsoe there at the same time, the sayd Roberts desired Mr. Paine to hire the little neck lying heere in Ipswich of him. Mr. Paine consented he should have it of him for one hundred years, upon these conditions: for ten years the said Roberts was to paye the sum of six pound a yeare, and then to returne to the former rent, which was seaven pound a year: and further this deponent saith, that Mr. William Paine did give the full rent of this neck unto the scoole here in Ipswich from that time forward: alsoe to the latter part of this testimony, concerning Mr. William Paine's giving the full rent of this necke to the scoole, Robert Roberts above testi-fieth. dat: April 17: 1662.

"Sworne in Court held at Ipswich, the 17th of April: 1662.
P me

Robert Lord Cleric."

Robert Roberts remained at Little Neck until his death. To fully understand the conditions of his and his successors' tenure of the land, it is necessary to explain how the rent of Little Neck came to be given for the support of the "schoole."

In 1636, the town records state: "A Grammar School is set up but does not succeed;" ‡ in 1642: "It is granted that there shal be a free Schoole." The next year £11 was raised, and it was voted "that there shal be seven free Schollars, or so as the Feffees (to be chosen) from tyme to tyme shall order, soe as the numb. exceed not seven." §

Little Neck is now a picturesque and favorite summer resort, yet the land is still held by the town of Ipswich. Each cottager is assessed ten dollars a year for the rent of the land, besides taxes. The report of the "Feoffees of the Grammar School," in 1907, states the value of the land at Little Neck to be $5,000. The land rents and taxes form a substantial part of the income for the support of that school.* The town has also some claim on the common lands; just how much is not known. This question has formed the basis of numerous lawsuits in generations past, and others are still pending. Many such curious ancient customs crept into the early settlements of Massachusetts Bay—perhaps a little more noticeably in Ipswich than elsewhere. Professor Edward A. Freeman alludes to these features in his Introduction to American Institutional History:—

“The most notable thing of all, yet surely the most natural thing of all, is that the New England settlers of the seventeenth century largely reproduced English institutions in an older shape than they bore in the England of the seventeenth century. They gave a new life to many things, which in their older home had well-nigh died out. The necessary smallness of scale in the original settlements was the root of the whole matter. It, so to speak, drove them back several centuries. It caused them to reproduce in not a few points, not the England of their own day, but the England of a far earlier time. It led them to reproduce in many points the state of things in old Greece and in medieval Switzerland.”†

The early settlers of Ipswich were largely men who intended to engage in mercantile pursuits, and to make it a port of entry. The condition of the river, which Johnson describes as “a little barr’d up at the mouth,” prevented the realization of their plans. Some removed to Boston and other localities; those who remained turned their attention successfully to the raising of cattle and to husbandry. Prior to 1700, the town had a brilliant history; it was the county seat, and ranked foremost in military affairs. It was distinctively English, and as Freeman says, English of an early type. The setting apart of the commons was a marked example. On February 25, 1645, the "plot of the cow-common on the north side of the river, containing by estimation" 3244 acres, was "presented unto the freemen of the town;" the freemen granted the inhabitants, "their heirs & successors for ever, all the aforesaid common to be improved, & the commons were to be managed by 7 men [later called selectmen] & no house should be hereafter built without express leave of the town."* Afterwards land was set apart for "horse-commons," also for the herding of swine and sheep. The ancient terms, cowherd, swineherd, and "shepherd," are found repeatedly in the records of the town.

The setting apart of a portion of the town's land, at Little Neck, to be managed by Feoffees for the support of the Grammar School, was another custom distinctly English in its origin, though varied, it may be, by conditions peculiar to its new environment. The Puritan founders of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, so ably represented at Ipswich, also brought over with them a modified English form of government, laid out for them in England, which they proceeded to follow; their wills and deeds (particularly the latter) were written in the elaborate forms then prevailing in the mother country. In this respect they were quite different from the first settlers of Plymouth. The Pilgrims, as they loved to call themselves, had spent many years in Holland. The bitter persecutions which drove them from their native land left few memories of English customs to be perpetuated. Their form of government was expressed in the famous COMPACT, to which the nation to-day is so greatly indebted, though it was not carried out to its fullest intent. Many of their early failures were due to want of concerted action and established government. In 1690, the two colonies were united in the Province of the Massachusetts Bay.

In April, 1655, Robert Roberts was employed by the town to "look out for" the cattle on Jeffrey's Neck. Three years later it was voted "to haue noe cattle goe on the Neck, but such as [illegible] of the Inhabitants haue liberty to putt on." April 5, 1661, the town engaged Robert Roberts to keep the sheep on Jeffrey's Neck, from "the 8th of this month to the end of October to haue one following them constantly . . . and to haue for his wages thirteen pounds to be payd halfe in merchantable Indian corne, and halfe in English corne at the current price." * Two days later, April 7, Roberts signed an agreement in the Town Records to keep the sheep:—

"Robert  Roberds." †

At the same town-meeting it was agreed that Robert Whitman should keep another flock on the north side of the river, at ten shillings a week. The next year there were three shepherds, and the commons on the south side were so burdened that one hundred sheep were transferred to the north side; ‡ but Robert Roberts was retained as one of the three shepherds. On March 19, 1662-63, he made a similar agreement to that of the year before, the town stipulating also that he should "be always following them by himselfe or to [illegible] a man constantly." This he also signed:—

"Robert  Roberds." §

the second time that he made his mark (March 19, 1662-63) his hand was more unsteady than the first, the year before. This indicates that he was in failing health; he may have followed the occupation of a shepherd on that account. He died early in July, 1663,* leaving a widow Susanna and several children. The ten acres of land at Chebacco, mentioned in his inventory, were the "6 acres of vpland and 4 acres of Marsh" granted him by the town, February 27, 1644.† It is notable that while his dwelling-house and barn were valued at £20, there is no mention of the land upon which they stood, for the reason that they were built at Little Neck upon the half acre of land by the spring, leased him by the town in 1658.‡ Of the settlement of the estate of Robert Roberts by the Court, to which allusion is made in connection with the portions of some of his children, the original inventory only remains. This worn and discolored document, which has been reinforced by crossed strips of paper on the back, reads : § —

Susanna Roberts, who was left with a young child at the time of her husband's death, appears to have been a thrifty widow. On April 9, 1666, the town "Agreed with Goodwife Roberds to keepe the sheepe at the Neck for the year ensueing and to have for hir wages 6<sup>s</sup> p weeke." She was to begin on the 16th of that month, and to be paid by the owners of the sheep "at the end of the time," which would be the middle of November.* In August, of that year, she bought of John Whipple, of Ipswich, for £12, four and a half acres of marsh at Plum Island. On the "last day of february 1666 [1666-67]," as "Susanna Roberts . . . widow," she bought of Richard Jacob, for £4:10, six acres more of marsh land at Plum Island, adjoining her first purchase; the deed was recorded the same day.*

Later, on that day, she was married to Thomas Perrin, of Ipswich, for it is written that "Thomas Perrin & Sussan Roberds, maryed the 28 of February 1666 [1666-67]." † Thomas Perrin was a worthy citizen of the town. He had a son Thomas, Jr. (a saddler by trade), whose wife was Margaret; they had several children in Ipswich, including Thomas<sup>3</sup> Perrin. It does not appear whether this Thomas, Jr., was son to Thomas<sup>1</sup> Perrin by a former wife or by Susanna. In 1714, Ephraim Roberts, son to Susanna, called Thomas, Jr., "my Bro."

On June 6, 1667, Thomas Perrin was allowed to keep the sheep, on much the same terms as his predecessors. He signed the agreement — "Thomas Perrin." ‡ It is probable that he lived at the Neck and cared for the sheep, several years. At a town-meeting, held February 11, 1672, complaints having been made "against Thomas Perin, about the Neck," it was "left to the Selectmen to consider of the complaints . . . and report to the Towne how they find it." On February 27, following, "The Towne declared that the halfe acre of Land, that Rob<sup>t</sup> Roberds had liberty to fence in, and build upon (while he held the little Neck, the Neck being out of their hands, the lease being out) I say the Towne declared the s<sup>d</sup> halfe acre to be in the Townes hands." In February, 1673, Robert Starkweather desired liberty to "hould the house of Tho: Perrin and little Neck, for seaven years." His request "was granted he agreeing with Thomas Perrin about his interest."*

Thomas Perrin moved up into the town; in 1692, his lot was the second "by y<sup>e</sup> River side between Samuel Ordway's shop, & y<sup>e</sup> Towne Bridg . . . 24 foot front." In 1697, he had horses on the common; in 1700, a seat was assigned him in the meeting-house; in 1703, he was chosen Constable.†

Not long after his marriage to the widow Susanna Roberts, Thomas Perrin made over to John Roberts, his stepson, that portion of the estate of his father that was coming to him. That he was the eldest son is proved by his receiving the double portion of £20, while his brother Samuel received but £10. The paper is copied nearly in full: ‡—

The date of death of Thomas Perrin does not appear, nor that of his wife Susanna; but, on September 18, 1713, Ephraim Roberts, of Haverhill, as administrator "att Large" upon the estate of "Susanna Roberds of Ipswich," was required to give bond, and was ordered to bring in an inventory "before y<sup>e</sup> first Monday In June Next Ensueing."* No inventory was recorded. caled ox comon land which y<sup>e</sup> Said Ephraim had in his possession Seuen yeares agoe." At the same time, Daniel Hendrick, for £20, confirmed "unto my Son in Law Ephraim Roberts," land in the third division which he had purchased of John Ayer, beside "y<sup>e</sup> Town Brooke of Hauerhill by Old Spicutt path So caled together with a piece of . . . meadow by Estimation Twelue acres." Both deeds were signed by "Daniel Hendrick," and witnessed by "Samuel Dalton and Deborah Hendrick." *

In 1694, Ephraim Roberts bought of Henry Dow several parcels of land in Haverhill that belonged to the estate of his late grandfather, Thomas Dow, also the home lot of Edward Clarke — "seuen acres with housing," etc. — "On y<sup>e</sup> South West End by y<sup>e</sup> High Way vpon y<sup>e</sup> Riuer Merrimack," adjoining land "now in y<sup>e</sup> hands of s<sup>d</sup> Ephraim Roberts," which formerly was John Heath's and after that Samuel Shepard's.† In these deeds Ephraim Roberts was called a cooper. In going to Haverhill he simply joined a movement among the young men from Ipswich to open another new settlement. Moses Pengry, Jr., Aaron Pengry, John Pengry, and Moses Burnam asked the town of Haverhill, in 1693-94, to have land laid out to them in the "4th division;" and other familiar names of Ipswich appear in the early records.

At Haverhill, Ephraim Roberts bore a modest part in town affairs. In the town-meeting of March 22, 1692-93, he was chosen a fence-viewer with his brother-in-law, Israel Hendrick, to view the town "between the Mill brook and Great Plain;" March 1, 1694-95, he was chosen to the same office, "For the Great Plain & Eastwards." In December, 1698, "Eph: Roberds" was one of thirty-four subscribers for "setting up the new meeting house, as soon as the glass windows are finished and set up." March 7, 1698-99, he was chosen surveyor of highways. At the same town-meeting, in answer to a petition from "Eph: Roberds . . . for a grant of liberty of building a Saw mill upon the place where the old sawmill was set . . . and to have full liberty of that stream," the town refused, as that privilege had been "long since granted to others." In answer to a petition of Ephraim Roberts and several other men, at town-meeting held April 9, 1700, the town refused to allow them to "build a sawmill at Spickett River stream." March 4, 1700-01, he was chosen selectman, and again on March 7, 1709-10.* With rank of Sergeant, Ephraim Roberts "led seven sentinels from the Haverhill garrison," in March, 1706-07.†

As the only surviving heir, and executor of the estates of his father and mother, he sold in 1714, to "my Bro<sup>r</sup> Thomas Perrin, of Ipswich," all right of the heirs or their children to the real or personal property of Robert and Susanna Roberts, of Ipswich.‡

Ephraim Roberts, of Haverhill, died after October, 1732. His will, dated Oct. 27, 1732, when he was about eighty-two years of age, was as follows: § —

This will is one of the few originals in the Essex County Probate, and is fairly legible, though much worn at one side. There is nothing in the Probate Records that shows when it was proved, or how the estate was settled.

Hannah Roberts was the widow of John How, of Ipswich, when she became the wife of Ephraim Roberts, of Haverhill, about 1702. On Feb. 8, 1712, Ephraim Roberts was appointed guardian to her son, James How, "a minor upwards of 14 years." * Hannah Roberts died in Methuen; her will, dated March 22, 1744-45, was proved May 13, 1745. She appointed her "well beloved son James How, to be sole executor;" he was to have one cow, a yearling and calf, one sheep, and all other real and personal estate. She gave to her "beloved Daughter Martha How, who has been very helpful to Me in my Old age & sickness," a sheep, bedding, and household stuff. To granddaughter, "Susannah Herri- man Daughter of my Daught<sup>r</sup> Herriman Dec<sup>d</sup>," she bequeathed "one of my wearing caps;" to "Daughter Mary, wife of Moses Stevens . . . two bed blankets and one cap." Her will was signed with a mark, and witnessed by Samuel Parker, Samuel Pingry, and Moses Pingry.†

Issue* by first wife: 1. Hannah<sup>8</sup>, b. Sept. 20, 1685, in Haverhill. There is no record of her marriage or death in Haverhill, but she was living in 1732, when her father made his will, wife of Nathaniel Putnam.

2. Samuel<sup>8</sup>, son to Ephraim<sup>2</sup>, b. Aug. 7, 1687, in Haverhill. He married Abigail Ladd, no date given.

In 1714, with his wife Abigail, Nathaniel Ladd and Jonathan Ladd, both of Norwich, Conn., Samuel Roberts, of Haverhill, conveyed all right in the property of "our Brother Ezekiel Lad Late of Boxford Decd," to John Chadwick, of Boxford. Samuel Roberts lived near the Town Common, in Haverhill, on land adjoining that of his father, which he bought, in March, 1710-11, of Joseph Heath.†

Samuel Roberts d. March 29, 1720, in Haverhill; his widow, Abigail, was married, Jan. 31, 1721-22, to William Johnson, of that town. She d. Aug. 2, 1736, in Haverhill.‡

Issue by first husband: I. Mary<sup>4</sup>, b. June 20, 1718, in Haverhill.

II. Samuel<sup>4</sup>, b. Dec. 6, 1720, in Haverhill. Both these children were mentioned in the will of their grandfather, Ephraim Roberts.

Issue by second husband: III. William Johnson, b. July 21, 1723, in Haverhill.

IV. Abigail Johnson, b. Sept. 25, 1726, in Haverhill.

 4. "Mehetabel"<sup>3</sup>, daughter to Ephraim<sup>2</sup>, b. April 10, 1692, in Haverhill. Mehitable Roberts was mar., about 1710, to Ebenezer<sup>3</sup> Felton, of Salem, Mass. He was b. about 1685, son to Nathaniel<sup>2</sup> and Ann (Horn) Felton, of Salem.

This Felton family enjoyed a position of prominence in Salem, and married with other families equally prominent, as the Endicott, Goodale, Pitman, Foot, Waters, and Tompkins. Nathaniel<sup>1</sup> Felton, "the Planter," was b. about 1615, in England. In 1633, he married at Salem, Mary<sup>2</sup> Skelton, daughter to Rev. Samuel<sup>1</sup> Skelton, the first minister of the First Church. Ann<sup>2</sup> Horn, the wife of their son Nathaniel<sup>2</sup>, was daughter to Deacon John<sup>1</sup> Horn, of the First Church. Ebenezer<sup>3</sup> Felton was a housewright by trade; his wife Mehitable was baptized Feb. 21, 1713, with her infant son David, and died not long after. Her husband mar., second, Oct., 1716, Jehoadan Ward, b. March, 1690-91, daughter to John and Jehoadan (—) Ward, of Salem, by whom he had nine children. About 1740, Ebenezer Felton went to New Salem, Franklin County, Mass., with his five sons, David<sup>4</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>4</sup>, Amos<sup>4</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, and Nathaniel<sup>4</sup>. The father died there, in 1776, aged ninety years. His will, dated Nov. 24, 1762, was proved Sept., 1776. His children were all born in Essex County.*

Issue by first wife: I. David<sup>4</sup> Felton, b. about 1711, in Salem; mar. 1736, Sarah Houlton, of Salem. He was mentioned in the will of his grandfather, Ephraim Roberts, with a bequest of £15.† In 1740, he went with his father to New Salem.

On Nov. 26, 1722, Ephraim Roberts, for "Love & Natural affection . . . towards my son Daniel Roberts," gave him four acres, "it being a part of my Homestead," adjoining land of Joseph Heath and the highway. In 1738, "Daniel Roberdes of Haverhill" conveyed land which he bought of "my Said Father in Law Joseph Heath;" in 1739, Daniel sold land in Haverhill to his son Daniel Roberts, Jr.; ‡ in 1750, father and son were mentioned in Province deeds as of Hampstead, N. H.

The town of Hampstead, N. H., was set off Jan. 19, 1749, from Haverhill. The History of Hampstead states that Daniel and Jonathan Roberts "settled on tracts purchased in 1742, part of Stephen Kent's 5th division of lands." "Crown Point Expedition" of 1756. He entered service as private, on April 22, and served until Nov. 7, of that year, a period of twenty-eight weeks, four days; he was in Captain Edmund Mooers' company, Colonel Ichabod Plaisted's regiment. In a roll of that company, dated July 26, 1756, his age was given as fifty-six years, "occupation labourer," birthplace Haverhill, residence Hampstead; in a roll of Oct. 11, he was reported sick in camp at Fort William Henry.*

About a year later, Daniel Roberts was dead; his will, dated April 30, 1756, was allowed Oct. 11, 1757. It mentioned his wife Martha, daughters Hannah, Sarah, and Mary Foster, and three children of his deceased son Daniel; daughter Hannah to be executrix. Five children of Daniel and Martha Roberts were recorded in Haverhill, three of whom died of "throat distemper" in the fall of 1737.†

Issue: 1. Daniel<sup>4</sup>, b. March 6, 1721-22, in Haverhill.

His wife was Meribah —; they lived in Hampstead near his father. Daniel Roberts enlisted as private April 24, 1755, for the Crown Point expedition. He appears to have served in "Captain Joseph Eastman's co., Col. Joseph Blanchard's regt. . . . time of discharge Oct. 24, 1755."‡ In an account rendered May 25, 1757, by Meribah Roberts, widow and administratrix of Daniel Roberts, Jr., the date of his death is given Oct. 16, 1755. On Dec. 28, 1768, an additional account was brought in by the widow Meribah.

William<sup>2</sup> Whittredge, b. March 31, 1658, in Ipswich, was son to William<sup>1</sup> Whittredge ‡ by his second wife, Frances, who d. April 26, 1658, in Ipswich.§ The father was from Benindon, County Kent, England. He came to New England in the Elizabeth, in 1635; his age was thirty-six years, his wife Elizabeth was thirty, and their son Thomas was ten years of age. His wife Frances having died, William<sup>1</sup> Whittredge mar., third, about 1663, Susanna, widow of Anthony Colby. In April, 1637, "William Whitred" was a Pequod soldier; in 1638, he first was mentioned in the Ipswich records, though he probably was there soon after his arrival in 1635. Under date of 1639, it was mentioned that he had sold to Thomas Smith his house and lot in the street called West End Street.|| About 1651, he was possessed of ten acres of "Marsh bounded by a creek next to Robert Roberds toward the West."¶ William<sup>1</sup> Whittredge was a carpenter; his death occurred Dec. 9, 1668, in Ipswich, "his inventory showing estate one third less than his debts." William<sup>2</sup> Whittredge and his wife Hannah probably went to Gloucester soon after their marriage, as all their children were registered there. He was a mariner. In March, 1705-06, he sold to Henry Haskell, of Gloucester, for £5, "One Commonage . . . within y<sup>e</sup> township of Gloucester," with a right in all the woods, timbers, waters, etc. "July y<sup>e</sup> 16th 1706," he sold to Isaac Eveleth, for £5, land in Gloucester, "on y<sup>e</sup> South Side of Squamme river or Ferry contayning One acre . . . with y<sup>e</sup> dwelling house & housing vpon it together with all other privileges to y<sup>e</sup> same belonging." His signature in both deeds was the same:—

"William Whitteredge" † [seal]

He does not appear to have left the town, since his death was recorded there: "W<sup>m</sup> Whitridge (aged about 70 years) Dyed Aug. 8, 1726." ‡ The date of death of his wife Hannah is not given.

with his sister Patience, when she was killed.

In 1697, his name was in a list of those citizens of Ipswich who were entitled to "horse commonage," he having registered, on May 15, "1 black mare, 2 years old, wth 1 white foot and a starr in her forehead."* In 1700, he had seat number twelve in the meeting-house.†

On May 1, 1712, the name "Richard Roberds" appeared on a petition for a minister in "The Hamlet." The request was granted May 22, following, to take effect as soon as the petitioners should "build a meeting house and call an orthodox minister to preach y<sup>e</sup> Gospel to them."‡ Richard Roberts died before 1715, at which time his brother Ephraim, as sole survivor of the children, administered upon the estate of their parents.§

The wife of Richard evidently was the "Elizabeth Roberts wife to Old Father Roberts" mentioned in a catalogue of women who belonged to the Third Church of Ipswich, "in its first formation."|| The number of children born to them is unknown; only three can be identified.

The price paid Robert Holmes, Jr., was £67; the deed was dated Dec. 5, 1729.* To this home, it is supposed, David took his bride, less than three months later. He acquired other land, and prospered.

The death of David Roberts occurred on Dec. 25, 1792, at the age of eighty-eight years. His will, dated Oct. 22, 1782, mentions his wife Elizabeth, to whom he left one third of all his real estate "during her Life," and one third of his personal property. It mentions their sons, Joseph Roberts, Francis Roberts, and Thomas Roberts, who, upon the death of their mother, were to have the land and buildings divided amongst them. David Roberts also left small bequests to his three daughters, Elizabeth Brown, Martha Brown, and Lucy Stone, and to his grandchildren, David Roberts, Jr., and "Hannah Woodberry." This will, proved Feb. 4, 1793, was signed:—

"David Roberts."

In the inventory of his estate, the homestead, consisting of about seventy-eight acres, was valued at £273 : 0 : 0. Four other lots increased the value of his real estate to £404 : 12 : 0; to which was added personal estate — £23 : 19 : 5. The sons Joseph and Francis were executors.†

Thomas Roberts died Oct. 11, 1833, in Hamilton, aged ninety-seven years. His will, dated May 13, 1833, bequeathed to "my beloved brother Francis Roberts all my farming utensils in common with him, and my wearing apparel." Having no children of his own, he bequeathed to each of the four daughters of his brother Francis as follows: * —

To "Sally wife of Ezekiel Allen and her children," "one fifth of all my real estate in common with my brother Francis Roberts," one fourth of the household furniture and one fourth of a pew in the meeting-house, in common.

To "widow Mary Hoyt" one fifth of all real estate, one fourth of the household furniture, and one fourth of the pew, in common.

To Abigail Roberts, one fifth of the real estate, one fourth of the furniture, one fourth of the pew, and "one fourth of my dwelling house in common with my brother Francis Roberts."

To Elizabeth Roberts, two fifths of all real estate, "in consequence of her blindness," one fourth of the dwelling house, one fourth of the furniture, and one fourth of the pew, in common.

To Abigail and Elizabeth Roberts, "a horse for their use in the family, in common with my brother."

To the "heirs of Benjamin Edwards' wife, Francis, Anna, Parker, Elizabeth and Harriet Edwards," one dollar each.

To "Jacob B. Woodberry's wife Hannah," two dollars.

To "Samuel, Elizabeth and Daniel Roberts," two dollars each.

To "my deceased sister Elizabeth Brown's children," to the children of deceased sisters Martha Brown and Lucy Stone, one dollar each.

To "deceased wife Sarah her heirs, viz. Joseph Brown five dollars, to be divided equally among his children."

To Joseph Brown, Jr., James and Isaac Brown, "one gold necklace, one large silver spoon, and three small ones, to be divided equal among them."

To "my brother James Perkins deceased and family," five dollars; also the same to John Perkins, Robert Perkins, "Jeremiah Western and family," and "Benj. Perkins deceased, to his family."

"If there are any more lawful heirs to my estate, not mentioned herein, I give to each one fifty cents."

Mary Hoyt, of Beverly, widow, was to be sole executrix.

This will, witnessed by O. S. Cressy, Zebulon Burnham, and Samuel Means, was signed:—

"Thomas Roberts." [seal]

On Nov. 5, 1833, Mary Hoyt, of Beverly, widow, was appointed executrix of the estate of "Thomas Roberts, of Hamilton, yeoman, who died Oct. 11, 1833," with Francis Roberts, yeoman, and Oliver S. Cressy, physician, sureties.*

V. Elizabeth<sup>4</sup>, daughter to David<sup>3</sup> Roberts, bap. Dec. 11, 1737, in the Third Church. She was mar. Dec. 15, 1758, to Elisha Brown, of Hamilton, known as "Elisha Brown the elder," to distinguish him from "Elisha Brown the younger." The will of "Elisha Brown the elder," dated April 1, 1799, was proved July 1, following. It mentions his wife Elizabeth, sons, Ephraim Brown, Daniel Brown, and daughters, Lydia Brown, Lucy Tibbetts, and Betsey Raymond. Division of his estate was made April 28, 1809.†

VI. Francis<sup>4</sup>, son to David<sup>3</sup> Roberts, bap. Nov. 28, 1740, in the Third Church. His first wife was Susanna —; she did not long survive the birth of triplets. His second wife, whom he mar. Nov. 16, 1783, was Sarah Smith, b. March 5, 1755.

Francis Roberts was a Revolutionary soldier. He served in defence of the seacoast of Essex County, in Captain Daniel Giddings' company, Colonel Joseph Foster's regiment, from Jan. 29 to Nov. 18, 1776 — the last eight months with rank of Corporal. "Francis Robards, of Ipswich," also served as private in Captain Richard Dodge's company of volunteers, 3d Essex County regiment; he enlisted Sept. 30, 1777, marched Oct. 2, 1777, and was discharged Nov. 7, 1777. His service consisted of forty days in a "regiment commanded by Major Charles Smith under General Gates, in the Northern department, and in guarding Lt. Gen. Burgoyne's troops to Prospect Hill," after Burgoyne's surrender. Captain Richard Dodge's company was discharged at Cambridge.*

Francis Roberts, aged ninety-three years, died Dec. 25, 1833, less than three months after the death of his brother Thomas. His widow, Sarah Roberts, on April 1, 1834, recorded in the Essex County Probate that "said Francis, a revolutionary pensioner, died on the twenty-fifth day of December last; that she is his widow."† On June 30, 1834, the heirs of Francis Roberts, yeoman, of Hamilton, made division of the estate "held in common with the heirs of his brother Thomas." The widow Sarah was to have her third of the real estate, and the "southwestern lower room in the dwelling house, a privilege in the kitchen to wash, bake," etc.‡ She died, his widow, March 14, 1842, aged eighty-seven years.

VIII. Lucy<sup>4</sup>, daughter to David<sup>3</sup> Roberts, b. Nov. 11, 1745, in Hamilton. Benjamin Stone, Jr., and Lucy Roberts were mar. Jan. 25, 1766. On Nov. 6, 1781, administration upon the estate of Benjamin Stone, late of Ipswich, deceased, was granted to Lucy Stone, who gave bond with Joseph Roberts and Francis Roberts. His inventory, amounting to £568:13, was dated May 28, 1782.* There probably were several children; the only one traced is Martha Stone, b. 1774, who was mar. Nov. 30, 1797, to Samuel<sup>5</sup> Roberts.

4. Richard<sup>3</sup>. It is possible that Richard Roberts, of Kittery, Maine, may have been son to Richard<sup>2</sup> and Elizabeth (—) Roberts, of Ipswich. The marriage intention of "Richard Roberts and Lucie Burdeen, both of Kittery," was recorded July 30, 1737, in Kittery.† No children are recorded there.

VIII. William<sup>2</sup>. There is no absolute proof that William Roberts, of Kittery, was son (possibly the eldest) to Robert<sup>1</sup> Roberts, of Ipswich, yet the circumstantial evidence is so strong that he is mentioned here, with a few of his descendants. According to his deposition, William Roberts was born "about 1640," which may be considered only as approximating the date of his birth. Robert<sup>1</sup> Roberts was then twenty-three years of age; the date of his marriage to Susanna (Downing?) is unknown. William Roberts died between 1708 and 1710; in 1715, Ephraim Roberts was appointed administrator of his parents' estate, as the only surviving heir.‡

Kittery, with her extensive maritime interests — fishing and shipbuilding — offered large inducements to the young men * of that period ; many removed there from other coast towns, married, and remained. William Roberts married "Anna (alias Nan)" Crockett, daughter to Thomas<sup>1</sup> and Ann (—) Crockett, who lived at Spruce Creek. In 1634, Thomas Crockett was employed by Captain John Mason, probably at Portsmouth. In 1641, he received a grant of nearly two hundred acres from Thomas Gorges, situated on the east side of Spruce Creek, in Kittery; this was known later as Crockett's Neck. In 1657, Thomas Crockett was Constable of Kittery. He died about 1679; his widow, Ann, was appointed administratrix of his estate. Before 1683, she was married to "Diggory Jeffreys," of Kittery Point; she was living in 1712.† On June 26, 1695, "Anne Jeffry Relict & Admr<sup>x</sup> of Thomas Crockett, Late of the town of Kittery dec'd, with ffree Consent of my husband, Digory Jeffry & y<sup>e</sup> more in order to fullfill y<sup>e</sup> mind of my Late Husband Thomas Crockett afres<sup>d</sup> . . . granted & confirmed to my Son in Law William Roberts and Anne his Now wife . . . all that Tract of Land Lying & being on that Neck of Land Called Crocketts Neck Near unto y<sup>e</sup> Homestead of y<sup>e</sup> s<sup>d</sup> Crockett & is bounded Southward with a Little Creek . . . it being y<sup>e</sup> homestead of y<sup>e</sup> s<sup>d</sup> Roberts with an addition of Land Six acres." ‡

In 1699, the town of Kittery granted to William Roberts forty acres of land; this land he assigned to "William Pepperrell Esq<sup>r</sup>," June 18, 1702, for a "valluable su<sup>m</sup> of money to me in hand." The conveyance was witnessed by Joshua Downing and Joseph Hammond, Jr., of Kittery; it was signed: —

On July 17, 1708 (recorded July 17, 1710), George Roberts, of Ipswich, for £16:17, paid by "W<sup>m</sup> Pepperrell Esq<sup>r</sup> of Kittery . . . Set over unto y<sup>e</sup> s<sup>d</sup> W<sup>m</sup> Pepperrell y<sup>e</sup> within mentioned deed of Sale or Mortgage," with the condition that if he or his father paid the above mentioned £16:17, to Pepperrell, on or before July 17, 1711, "then y<sup>e</sup> Above to be voyd." The date of the death of William Roberts is not known; but on Aug. 30, 1715, William Pepperrell levied an execution upon the "Estate of W<sup>m</sup> Roberts Late of s<sup>d</sup> Kittery dec<sup>d</sup>," for the sum of £14:13:5, and £1:08:4 for cost of suit. At the same time his "widow Anne Roberts" relinquished her right in "fourteen acres of Land and a Dwelling house . . . Lying in Kittery," and the same was delivered up to "W<sup>m</sup> Pepperrell Esq<sup>r</sup> . . . p<sup>r</sup> me Abraham Preble Sheriff."†

Issue: 1. William<sup>3</sup>, son to William<sup>2</sup> and Anne (Crockett) Roberts. The wife of William Roberts was "Sarah Crecy"; they are supposed to have been married about 1700. There is no doubt that she was daughter or granddaughter to "Mighill Cresie," of Ipswich, whose inventory was taken May 2, 1670, by Robert Lord, and presented the next day at Court by his widow, "Mary Cresie." * This name has passed through innumerable changes to the modern Cressey. The children of Mighill Cressey lived in that part of Ipswich set off, in 1639, as Rowley.

William and Sarah Roberts remained for a time in Kittery, where two sons, William and George, were born. There is no record of them in Kittery after 1704; they appear to be the William and Sarah who had a son Tobias born in Ipswich, in 1711, and a daughter Sarah in 1715. Later, he is credited with being the William Roberds, or Robards, who went to Falmouth, Maine, where the ill luck of his father seemed to follow him.

On July 7, 1730, "William Roberds of sd Falmouth," for "full satisfaction," acquired of William Graves, of Falmouth, one half of his title to a thirty acre lot in "Falmouth on the Western Side of Presumpscot River," adjoining land of John Clark, Moses Pearson, and the common land. In 1736, Roberts sold this land to Thomas Westbrook (Colonel Thomas Westbrook), for £40, signing his name: —

In 1738, "Thomas Westbrook, Esq.," of Falmouth, for £100, sold to James Doughty and John Clark, husbandmen, William Roberts and George Doughty, laborers, all of Falmouth, his "Part or Proportion of a Certain Island lying in Casco Bay . . . called Sebasco-deggin." This island was within the limits of North Yarmouth, and Roberts removed his family there; afterwards, on Feb. 16, 1740, as a resident of that town, his "one moiety Sixth part of . . . Great Sebascodegon" was attached by Phineas and Stephen Jones for a debt of £15 : 13 : 6. Roberts appears to have compromised with his creditors, and to have raised the money by selling, on Oct. 8, forty acres on the island of Sebascodegan, for £50. Two years later, he sold the "Dwelling-House which I now live in with all my Improvements" on Great Sebascodegan, with all his possessions on the island.‡

It is not known when or where William and Sarah Roberts died. Besides the four children who are mentioned, others probably went to North Yarmouth with their parents. There is reason to believe that most of those bearing the name of Roberts, in that town, prior to 1800, were descendants of William<sup>8</sup>.

Issue: I. William<sup>4</sup>, son to William<sup>8</sup> and Sarah (Crecy) Roberts, was b. June 30, 1701, in Kittery. He appears to be the "William Roberts," of Ipswich, who was published Dec. 18, 1725, in Ipswich, to Esther Hodgkins, of the same town.* Mr. Waters states that, in 1726, William Roberts and Nathaniel Newman occupied a house on the original Robert Coles's estate.† On Feb. 7, 1728, "William Robbins Junr" bought for £79, of Robert Cross and his wife Elizabeth, a "Dwelling House and half an Acre of Land . . . in Ipswich . . . on the South Side of the Town River," which said Cross bought of Edward Webber.‡ It is curious that at about this period in Ipswich the name of Roberts appears in the records interchangeable with Robbins and Robbens.

William Roberts, or Robins, died before 1760. On March 6, of that year, his widow, Esther Robins, of Ipswich, William Robins, joiner, and Thomas Robins, cordwainer, both of Gloucester, Esther Robins, Abigail Robins, and Sarah Robins, single women, of Ipswich, sold a small piece of land near the river, in Ipswich, for £3 : 06 : 08, to David Andrews.§ "William Roberts junr and Esther" his wife had but one child recorded in Ipswich.

- II. George<sup>4</sup>, son to William<sup>3</sup> and Sarah (Crecy) Roberts, was b. March 30, 1704, in Kittery. His wife was Catherine<sup>4</sup>, b. Feb. 19, 1708, in Kittery, daughter to Samuel<sup>3</sup> and Rhoda (Haley) Skillings, of Kittery.

In 1723, Samuel<sup>3</sup> Skillings lived on Spruce Creek; he was a shipwright.* His grandfather, Thomas<sup>1</sup> Skillings, was settled as early as 1651 in Falmouth, Maine, where he had a farm at Back Cove. He died in 1666. John<sup>2</sup>, son to Thomas<sup>1</sup> Skillings, had a grant of land upon the Neck, in 1680; he also possessed a farm near Long Creek, where he lived in 1688. Tradition says that he died before he was forty years old; his widow Elizabeth with her children fled, during the Indian War of 1690, to Kittery. Before 1730, Samuel returned and established himself on his father's land at Long Creek.†

George Roberts went to Falmouth with his father-in-law. On July 1, 1731, he and his wife "Katherine" acknowledged the covenant, in the First Church of Falmouth; she was admitted to full communion Aug. 20, 1732.‡

In 1734, George Roberts bought of "Phinehas Jones," for £42, thirty-two acres of land in Falmouth, "about twenty Rods Southerly from the now dwelling House of the said Roberts." Two years later, Samuel Skillings, for £20, "paid by my Son in Law George Roberts of Falm<sup>o</sup> Labourer," sold him fifty-four acres, "the same being so much of the Right in Common Lands in Falm<sup>o</sup> allowed to the Heirs or assigns of my Father John Skillings late of Falm<sup>o</sup> . . . George Roberts later acquired from the other heirs fifty-eight acres, "which was part of the Estate of said Samuel Skellen our Honour<sup>d</sup> Father," situated "on the Banks by the South West Side of Long Creek, & down to land of W<sup>m</sup> Westcoat." Before 1781, George Roberts and his wife had passed away. On Sept. 12, of that year, their sons, George Copson Roberts and Joseph Roberts, both of Cape Elizabeth, sold to Richard Crockett, Jr., for £20, "Our whole Right & Title to the real estate that belonged to our late Honoured Father & Mother, George Roberts yeoman Deceased & Katharine Roberts late of Cape Elizabeth either in s<sup>d</sup> Cape Elizabeth or other where Excepting their Dwelling House & Right in a Corn Mill & mill Privilege & s<sup>d</sup> Georges share in a Thatch Bed & a certain Tract of Land commonly called the Corn Field." Their signatures were "George Copson Roberts . . . Joseph Roberts." †

Eight children of George<sup>4</sup> and Catherine Roberts have been traced; there may have been others.

On Oct. 20, 1759, George Roberts published his intention of marriage with Deborah York, daughter to Samuel and Joanna<sup>4</sup> (Skillings) York, of Cape Elizabeth. Susanna, sister to Deborah York, became the wife of Vincent<sup>5</sup> Roberts, of Cape Elizabeth, later of Durham, Maine.§ George Roberts lived all his life at Long Creek, in Cape Elizabeth; the following inscription is on his headstone in an old cemetery there: "Mr. George Roberts died August 28, 1824 . . . Ae. 86." But three of his children have been identified.

This was the same command under which Lieutenant John Small, afterwards Captain, went through that memorable campaign.* Joseph Roberts enlisted April 8, in the town of Falmouth; because he was under age, his "Father . . . George Roberts" signed for him. The service of Joseph Roberts expired Oct. 11, 1758, though he was "reported discharged Sept. 20," probably through disability. The irregularity of his leaving the service may be responsible for his being "charged £3, for arms not returned."† The company of Captain Libby delivered up their "Province arms" at Albany, before starting homeward.‡

On Feb. 8, 1776, Joseph Roberts, of Cape Elizabeth, married Anna<sup>5</sup> Fogg, of Scarborough. She was b. Nov. 29, 1755, daughter to Samuel<sup>4</sup> and Rachel<sup>3</sup> (Mariner) Fogg.§ At the time of his marriage, Joseph Roberts was thirty-eight years old. Perhaps some of his descendants now living in Portland may be able to trace his late marriage to shattered health, or to wounds received in 1758.

As early as 1769, Joseph Roberts bought land, in Gorham, of Thomas Pote; it was described as twenty-five acres of the "Easterly End of the 100 acre Lot numbered 9 in the

He enlisted May 15, 1775, at Cape Elizabeth, in "Capt. Samuel Dunn's co., Col. He appears in a list of men who moved from Cape Elizabeth about 1776, list dated Jan. 17, 1782, at Cape Elizabeth.

In 1816, Rachel Roberts, of Gorham, single woman, quitclaimed to Joseph Roberts, of Gardiner, and Samuel Roberts, of Gorham, her share in the estate of her father, "Joseph Roberts, Jr., late of Gorham, deceased." ‡ "Joseph Roberts, Jr.," was so called because there was another and older Joseph Roberts (said to have "come from Cape Cod," wife Hannah Freeman) in the town. Rachel never married.

Benjamin Roberts, in 1759, though but eighteen years of age, served as "centinel" in Captain James Cargill's company, at the Penobscot. Benjamin enlisted at the same time as his brother, George Copson, on March 31; he was mustered out July 15, one week earlier than George. Benjamin, too, was signed for by his "father, George Roberts."* On Feb. 25, 1760, Benjamin Roberts was enlisted by Nathaniel Ingersoll, "for the total reduction of Canada." His age was then given as nineteen years, and his birthplace, as well as present residence, Falmouth. "Reported Son to George Roberts." Benjamin's service was in Colonel Waldo's regiment, probably under Captain Benjamin Waite.†

Before 1776, Benjamin Roberts took his family to Gorham, where they lived on the "south part of the 100 acre Lot No. 9;" this was the same lot to which his brother Joseph removed later. Benjamin Roberts died before Oct. 26, 1805, on which date his widow, Mary Roberts, and her son Benjamin, with his wife Rebecca, conveyed land in Gorham, adjoining that purchased, in 1769, by Joseph Roberts from Thomas Pote.‡

John<sup>2</sup> Roberts, of Ipswich, son to Robert<sup>1</sup> and Susanna (—) Roberts, was born about 1646, in Ipswich. Also, in 1681, "John Roberts : aged 34 yeares" deposed that "at the house of John Wainwright, he heard Robert Haines : demand of Joseph Lee : possession of a house . . . situated upō the Iles of Shoales," and further, he "heard Joseph Lee say that he Gaue Robert Haines: order to pay Jn<sup>o</sup> Wainwright Ten pounds for the house now sued for By Robt Haines." *

In September, 1666, "John Robards & Susan Robards, his mother," of Ipswich, were presented at Court by John Leigh, Sr., of the same town, "for trespass in mowing, disposing, & carrying away his grass, or hay from his marsh at Hogg island." † His mother probably was haled into Court because her son John was still under age; but that did not prevent his adding his signature to the Loyalists' petition, which was presented to the General Court, September 11, 1666. ‡ Similar petitions were presented at the same time by other towns : Boston, with twenty-six names; Salem, with thirty-five names; Newbury, with thirty-nine names; and Ipswich, with seventy-three, far exceeding her neighbors.

In a list of Commoners of Ipswich who had the privilege of the ballot at the meetings of the Commoners, in 1677 and 1678, appear the names of John Roberts and Thomas Bray. This list seems to include "all the youth and men from the Topsfield line to Gloucester, who lived in scattered hamlets, and were members of large families." §

On June 12, 1699, soon after David became of age, his father, "John Downing Sen<sup>r</sup>," and Mehitabel, wife of John, both of Ipswich, for "love & natural affection," conveyed to "David Downing our Sonne . . . the full halfe part of that halfe of ye farm Wee now liue vpon . . . in Chebacco in Ipswich . . . formerly called Richard Braybrooks farme from whom we derived our right." In 1701, "Thomas Luskin [Lufkin?] Jun<sup>r</sup>" and David Downing, both of Ipswich, husbandmen, took measures to establish the bounds between their lands "w<sup>ch</sup> they had By gift and purchase from their father John Downing Sen<sup>r</sup> of Ipswich." Jan. 19, 1704-05, David Downing and "Susanna my now wife," of Ipswich, sold to Thomas Butler, of that town, for £118, sixty acres of the westerly end of "Braybrooks farme . . . Chebacco," adjoining land of "John Burnam, Mr Adams Coggs well," and the "widow Varney's two acres." That same month, he also sold "half of that comonage" belonging to Braybrook's farm.†

David Downing went to Gloucester, soon after the sale of his holdings in Ipswich. On Jan. 25, 1708-09, the Commoners of Gloucester granted to William Coggs well and David Downing, ten acres on "Chebacco Side . . . & the lot they drew . . . fell out to be the 65th;" at the same time they "drew the lot on the Cape No. 112." Later in the year, a lot that "butts on Jonesses riuer att the north end" was granted to the heirs of "Mr William Coggs well deceased of Chebacco in Ipswich & David Downing." Jan.

"John Roberts, aged 79 years," made oath Sept. 26, 1760, that he signed the deed as "John Roberds jun<sup>r</sup> altho y<sup>e</sup> seal now appears to be torn of." The deed was recorded Feb. 26, 1761, nearly fifty-two years after it was made.†

On Feb. 14, 1710-11, David and Susanna Downing, of Gloucester, sold to Daniel Riggs, of the same town, for £127, their "now dwelling house & about fourteen Acres of vpland Lying most parte of it on y<sup>e</sup> Northwardly Side of y<sup>e</sup> high way or road leading along towards y<sup>e</sup> ferry." This farm he bought of Colonel John Wainwright, of Ipswich, in 1704. When he sold it to Riggs, he also added five acres of marsh, half an island, and half of ten acres of salt marsh, — the latter presumably what was remaining "on Brewin's Island."‡

The sale of his farm looks as though he contemplated removal elsewhere, yet there is no record of it. "Susanna, wife of David Downing (aged about 39 years) dyed Dec<sup>r</sup> 22, 1719," in Gloucester; "David Downing (aged about 46 years) Dyed Sept. 20, 1723."§ It is probable that there were other children; the following appear in the Town and Church records: —

In the winter of 1719-20, "William Robards" was granted sixty acres of land in Falmouth, on condition that he settle there within a year, $ — a condition which he fulfilled. He served in Captain Francis Baker's company, from Feb. 28 to Nov. 6, 1722, in Colonel Thomas Westbrook's expedition against the Indians.||

Ebenezer<sup>3</sup> Roberts, son to John<sup>2</sup> and Hannah<sup>2</sup> (Bray) Roberts, was born January 22, 1690, in Gloucester. He was married January 13, 1715, by Rev. John White, to Sarah<sup>4</sup> Elwell, of Gloucester.* Ebenezer Roberts probably never made a wiser move than his marriage. His wife Sarah, b. February 8, 1692, was daughter to Jacob<sup>3</sup> and Abigail<sup>2</sup> (Vincent) Elwell, of Gloucester, descendants of two of the earliest and most prominent families of the town. Jacob<sup>3</sup> Elwell was son to Samuel<sup>2</sup>, and grandson to Robert<sup>1</sup> Elwell. The latter was not only a pioneer, but was prominent in no small measure in building up the town. To understand the value of his services, it is necessary to note conditions at that period.

The attention of the colonists was first attracted to Cape Ann by its natural advantages as a fishing station. On January 24, 1623-24, Robert Cushman, acting for the Pilgrims at Plymouth who already had erected fishing-stages on Stage Neck (now Stage Fort Park), wrote to Governor Bradford from England: "We have tooke a patente for Cap Anne."† At about the same time, the Rev. John White, of Dorchester, England, sent over a company equipped for fishing, who took possession of all the improvements there. For a time it was disputed territory, but in less than three years it was abandoned by both parties.‡ A permanent settlement was begun in 1631; in 1639, special privileges were granted by the General Court to such as shall "inhabit there."§ In February, 1642, the Rev. Richard Blynman, who had been accompanied to New England by several Welsh gentlemen of note, went to Gloucester from Plymouth, Massachusetts. This "Welch party," as it was termed, included among others Hugh Caulkin, Obadiah Bruen, Hugh Pritchard, Walter Tybbot (now Tibbets or Tebbets), John Sadler, and Mr. Fryer. All these men except the last had been propounded for freemen, March 2, 1640-41, at Plymouth.* Others joined them at Gloucester, including Hugh Roberts, who married a daughter to Hugh Caulkin.

The first church was organized at once by Mr. Blynman, who became their pastor. William Stevens, Mr. Sadler, Obadiah Bruen, George Norton, William Addes, Thomas Milward, Mr. Fryer, and Walter Tybbot were appointed by the Massachusetts Commissioners "to manage the affairs of the plantation," which was incorporated in May of that year (1642) as the town of Gloucester. On May 14, 1645, "Hugh Caulkin, Thomas Smyth & Obedia Brewen" were "chosen to end small controversies at Gloucester."†

Robert Elwell‡ was first at Dorchester, Massachusetts,

Vincent, born about 1610, in England, was son to Francis Vincent, who married Sarah, daughter to Sir Francis Paulet; Sarah Paulet was maid of honor to Queen Anne, wife of James I.* About 1635, William Vincent, a potter by trade, appeared in Salem, Massachusetts; in 1636, he had a grant of land. On the "12th 5<sup>mo</sup>, 1637," he sent in "his request for acomodation;" the "7th 6th mo 1637," he "desireth 5 acres and it is granted him." On the "30th 1<sup>mo</sup>, 1640," there was granted by the town of Salem to William Vincent, two acres, to "Vincents mother," two acres, and to "Vincents Cozen Antho: Buckstone," two acres.†

William Vincent did not long remain at Salem. In 1643, he was made freeman;‡ in 1646, and several years afterwards, he was selectman of Gloucester. He built three houses near Vincent's Spring; and, though the name became extinct in the town after the second generation, it is perpetuated in Vincent's Spring and Vincent's Cove, and in the baptismal name of many of his descendants, to the present day. From a deposition of 1663, we learn that he was then about fifty-three years of age, and from another deposition that his wife Sarah, in 1660, was about forty.§ They both were devout members of the First Church of Gloucester. In June, 1652, "William Vincent, goodwife Vincent, Sarah Vincent & Grace Dutch," testified in Court at Salem that Mrs. Holgreave, of Gloucester, had said that "the Teacher [minister] was more fitted to be a Ladies chamberman than to be in the pulpit." In September, 1653, William Vincent was witness that "reproachful speeches" had been made "against their teacher in town meeting." At the same session of Court, Vincent brought suit against Edmond Marshall, of Ipswich, "for defaming his wife saying She was a witch." In "The free offer for the present maintenance of Brother Millet being faithfull to gitt an Elder" for the church, March, 1658, William Vincent subscribed £2, Samuel Dolliver, £1, Thomas Bray £0:7, and Robert Elwell £0:0.*

In 1646, William Vincent, who was "chosen by the town to keep an ordinary and to sell wine, petitioned for confirmation" from the Court. March, 1657, "Sylvester Everleth" and William Vincent were appointed Commissioners to end small causes in Gloucester; in 1658, William Vincent was Constable.† His numerous depositions, scattered through the Court Papers, show that his judgment was sought in many different directions. He does not appear to have been related to Humphrey Vincent, of Ipswich, who died about 1664, childless and alone.‡ William Vincent died September 17, 1690, in Gloucester, aged about eighty years.§ His will, dated March 19, 1684, was proved November 25, 1690. It left to his "loving wife Rachel Vinson" all his houses and lands "during her natural life." Upon her death, the property was to revert to "John Vinson," his son, "in case he be living and return home again." Said son was to "have my house and barn and all the upland upon the western side of the Cartway," also all the saltmarsh at Little Good Harbor; but "if my sone John comes no more then my daughter abigail shall have all the Estate given to him, to her own propper use and behoofe." The will was signed with his mark. The dwelling-house and lands mentioned in the inventory were valued at £125:00:03; total amount, £180:03:08. The widow Sarah takes oath to the truth of the inventory, November 25, 1690; || she must have been a third wife.

During the period 1729-1735, Ebenezer Roberts was a fence-viewer, hogreeve, fish-culler, constable, and tithing-man, of the town of Falmouth. In a list of tax-payers of the Second Parish of Falmouth, in 1735, Ebenezer Roberts was taxed £0 : 11 : 8 for polls, £0 : 2 : 0 real estate, and £0 : 0 : 10 personal. No one paid more, many paid less.

He was all his life a farmer. On October 30, 1764, when he was seventy-four years of age, "Ebenezer Roberts of Falmouth . . . yeoman . . . in Consideration of Love Goodwill and Affection which I have and do bear towards my loving Grandson Ephraim Roberts Son of my Son Vincent Roberts Deceased," conveyed to Ephraim by deed, "after my Decease and the Decease of my now Wife . . . all my House where I now dwell with all the Lands whereon the House stands & all the Upland that belongs to me near the said House it being eighteen Acres and three quarters & eleven square Rods," with the barn, orchard, cattle, and "Implements for the carrying on my Husbandry," with all the timber and wood standing on the said land. He gave to Ephraim his sheep, horses, and all his cattle, all the "Goods and Chattels now being in my present Dwelling House," and four acres of fresh marsh joining the homestead; also twenty-one acres, it being part of two thirty acre lots, the other part of which had already been given "to my son Ebenezer Roberts." This deed, in lieu of a will, disposed of his estate. There is no record of his death; he was living in 1767, and died before 1773, when his son Ebenezer had dropped the "Jr." The date of death of his wife Sarah is not known. Family tradition says that Vincent Roberts was killed at Pemaquid by the Indians, but it appears more probable that his death occurred at Annapolis, Nova Scotia. The Rev. Thomas Smith, in his diary, wrote under date of Feb. 25, 1747: "We hear father Hall and Roberts of this place lately died at Annapolis."† Little is known of Vincent Roberts; he was seventeen years of age at the time of his marriage, and but twenty when he died—not yet of age. His widow, Isabella Roberts, was mar. (intention, Dec. 13, 1749) to John Fickett, of Cape Elizabeth.‡ John and Isabella (Roberts) Fickett were the parents of a number of children, but their births are not recorded in Falmouth nor Cape Elizabeth. Vincent Roberts settled on the Jordan farm, situated on what is now Sawyer Street, between Cottage Street and South Portland Heights. He and his sons built boats and carried them to Portland to sell. #### EBENEZER <sup>4</sup> ROBERTS

Ebenezer <sup>4</sup> Roberts, son to Ebenezer <sup>8</sup> and Sarah (Elwell) Roberts, was born September 13, 1717, in Gloucester.‡ His brother Samuel died several months before the birth of Ebenezer, consequently the latter occupied through life the position of the eldest son. He was ten years old when his father went to Falmouth. In his youth he probably followed the sea, more or less; for many years he was a fisherman, and lived at Purpooduck in Cape Elizabeth. Purpooduck was a local term borrowed from the Indians. In the first settlement, the Purpooduck side of Fore River, from Simon-ton's Cove to Stroudwater, "was fringed with farms and settlers;" there was a fort as early as 1689 at Purpooduck Point, where Fort Preble now stands.

Spring Point received its name from a spring of water just above high-water mark; it was enclosed by the outworks of Fort Preble, when that fort was constructed. In an attempt to improve the ancient boiling spring by blasting, seams were opened in the ledge which let in the sea and greatly damaged its pure waters. There is no trace of the spring to-day. The Point formerly belonged to John<sup>3</sup> and William<sup>3</sup> White, sons to Rev. John<sup>2</sup> White, of Gloucester, Massachusetts. Jerusha, widow of John<sup>3</sup> White, was married before 1741 to Benjamin Thrasher,* who occupied the property. In 1808, the Thrasher family sold the site to the government for a fort. It was on this lot that the first log meeting-house stood. The burying-ground connected with it adjoined the shore; the encroachment of the sea has washed much of it away, but a few headstones remain. Occasionally the Rev. John White sailed along the coast from Gloucester, to hold services. Parson Smith, of Falmouth, wrote in his Journal, under date of Sunday, July 24, 1725: "Mr White preached over to Purpooduck A. M. . . . Sept. 21, 1741: Rev. Mr White, of Gloucester, and his son dined here [at Rev. Thomas Smith's]. . . . Sept. 24: Mr White preached an evening lecture at my house: it was very full. . . . Sept. 27: Mr White preached; a very full meeting; people were pleased with the meeting. . . . Sept. 29: Mr White went away." †

On April 13, 1737, Ebenezer Roberts, Jr., of Falmouth, was published to "Mary Kinnecum, of Gloucester;" ‡ they were married June 7, following, by Rev. John White, of Gloucester.§ The groom was not quite twenty, and the bride lacked a month of being seventeen. She was born July 6, 1720, in Gloucester, daughter to Benjamin and Margaret (Josline) Kinnecum, of Gloucester.* The name Kinnecum is a corruption of Cunningham; through various transitions of "Kinningham," in Cape Elizabeth, "Chinecum" and "Kennecum," in Durham, etc., it has resolved itself correctly as Cunningham, in the Roberts family. There is little doubt that those who early bore the name of Cunningham, in Massachusetts, were of Scotch descent. The first mentioned was one Andrew Cunningham, of Boston; neither the "date of his arrival nor from whence he came" has been learned.† On October 25, 1684, he signed the records of the Scots Charitable Society, of Boston, commencing: "Wee are this day convined being Scottsmen and the sons of Scottsmen Inhabitants of Boston."‡ It is possible that Benjamin "Kinnecum" was related to Andrew Cunningham, of Boston, but the records do not show it.

On February 1, 1738-39, about a year after his marriage, Ebenezer Roberts, Jr., yeoman, bought of Joseph Cobb, of Falmouth, three acres and twenty-four rods of land adjoining land of his father.§ Later, he acquired land from his father and from William Elwell, eighty acres in all, on "Purpooduck side," as it was commonly called.* Though for a time Ebenezer Roberts, Jr., called himself a yeoman, or farmer, he soon returned to the fishing — probably because most of his neighbors were engaged in it, and it brought better financial returns. As a fisherman of Falmouth, he sold for £13 : 06, in 1754, to Jonathan Fairbanks, fisherman, the three acres he bought in March, 1738-39, of Joseph Cobb. It was "agreed between the Parties that the said Fairbanks is to allow M<sup>r</sup>. Ebenezer Robards a Road from the s<sup>d</sup> M<sup>r</sup>. Robards House across the head of the said Land to the Main Road said Road is to be one Rod Wide." This deed he signed :—

By some means he became possessed with the idea that there were coals and minerals on his land. This was not strange, as the peculiar geological formation of many sections of Maine has given rise to a similar belief. Roberts first appears to have interested one Archelaus Stone, a shoemaker of Cape Elizabeth, to whom he sold, March 8, 1748-49, for £4, an acre and a quarter of this land, "with all Whatsoever is thereon Growing Standing Lying & being." ‡ On June 7, 1756, he proceeded to organize a company among his near neighbors to develop the mines, each binding himself to "the termes of partnership . . . in the sum of £200," as expressed in the following document : §—

"Ebenezer Roberts Jun<sup>r</sup>. It is evident that in starting so momentous an undertaking these parties had sought advice from two leading men of Falmouth Neck, "Squires" Freeman and Longfellow, who appeared as witnesses. There is no further record of the development of these mines, which to-day would be known as worthless ; there is no local tradition about them ; no one living ever heard of them.

Upon the death, in 1754, of the Rev. Benjamin Allen, for twenty years pastor of the Second Parish, it was discovered that the church had become divided on the subject of Presbyterianism, through the teachings of Rev. William McClanathan, who had made himself and his religious tenets popular. On Oct. 4, 1754, certain of the inhabitants and freeholders petitioned the legislature of Massachusetts, for permission to divide the parish into "two Distinct Parishes or Districts." The petition, headed by William Wentworth, was signed by sixty-six citizens, including Christopher Mitchell, Robert Mitchell, and fourteen by the name of Jordan.* The attempted division was unsuccessful, but local feeling was intense, and "the parish was in a sad situation, dismally divided and quarreling." In the "midst of the confusion Rev. Ephraim Clark came among them to preach, and so great was the interest taken in the neighboring parish that many persons went from Portland to hear him." There was, however, a distinct opposition from the disaffected parties. They objected so strongly to his settlement that the "council first called" did not think proper to recommend him for installation; but the installation was finally held "in Mr. Simon-ton's orchard, at Purpooduck, May 21, 1756." Twenty-four members of the parish, refusing to pay their rates, were committed to jail. The religious warfare finally subsided, and Mr. Clark remained strongly intrenched in his parish until his death, in 1797.†

Ebenezer Roberts did not sign the petition; further evidence of his attitude in the matter is shown by the baptism of his son William, in the First Congregational Church of the neighboring town of Scarborough, on December 15, 1754, when the dissension was at its height.

As "Ebenezr Robards," private, his name appears in the Train Band and Alarm List of the town of Falmouth, under command of Captain Loring Cushing. The roll was "sworn to at Falmouth, Second Parish, April 29, 1757." ‡ He also appeared as private, September 18, 1758, in Captain John Robinson's Falmouth company, which was "provided with Bayonets."* Although the "Jr." was not used by Ebenezer Roberts in either of these rolls, it is obvious that the son, not the elderly father, was "training."

In the town affairs of Cape Elizabeth, Ebenezer Roberts bore an inconspicuous part. This section of the town of Falmouth, early called the Second Parish, was set off as Cape Elizabeth in 1765; the first town-meeting was held December 2, of that year. Captain John Robinson, Jr., was moderator, Mr. Thomas Simonton, clerk, Mr. Peter Woodbury, constable.† On March 10, 1767, Jonathan Sawyer, William Mitchell, Levi Strout, William Webster, Jeremiah Jordan Jun<sup>r</sup>, James Leach, and Ebenezer Roberts Jun<sup>r</sup> were chosen field-drivers and fence-viewers. March 13, 1773, it was voted that Patrick Maxwell, "Ebenezer Robards," Benjamin Jordan, Dominicus Jordan, Daniel Strout, Peter Woodbury, Samuel Skillings, Noah Jordan, Zebulon Trickey, and William Ray be surveyors of highways.‡ It is notable that Ebenezer Roberts had this year, 1773, dropped the "Jr." from his name, because of the death of his father.

There is no mention of the death of Ebenezer<sup>4</sup> Roberts in Cape Elizabeth. The oldest cemetery, near the site of the first log meeting-house at Purpooduck, is nearly obliterated; here naturally would be his last resting-place. His name does not appear in deeds nor in the records of Cape Elizabeth, after the town-meeting of March 13, 1773, when he was but fifty-six years of age; yet it is not probable that he went to Royalsborough (now Durham), with his sons, as suggested.§ Had he gone, his son Ebenezer would have been designated as Ebenezer, Jr., and he as Ebenezer, Sr., but the records there have only "Ebenezer Roberds," "Robbarts," etc.

- I. William <sup>5</sup>, b. March 15, 1737-38, in Falmouth; * d. before 1754.
- II. Ebenezer <sup>5</sup>, b. about 1740, in Falmouth. He appears to be the "Ebenezer Roberts and — — —," whose marriage was recorded March 15, 1764, in the Second Parish of Falmouth. They were married by Rev. Ephraim Clark.† The name of his wife was torn out when the three following records were mutilated. About 1774, he removed to Royalsborough, with others of the family. The hundred acres upon which he settled consisted of the northeasterly half parts of lots thirty and thirty-two.

The first recorded religious service in Royalsborough was held on Feb. 23, 1774, by "Mr. Prince." On July 30, 1776, it was voted at town-meeting that "Major Charles Gerrish & M<sup>r</sup> Ebenezer Robards be a commity and to hire a preacher, voted that the minister preach at the House of M<sup>r</sup> Elliot Frost." Sept. 15, 1777, it was "Voted Mess<sup>s</sup> Josiah Dunn, Benjamin vining, Ebenezer Robbarts and Charles Hill Esq<sup>r</sup> [be] a Commity of Correspondance, Inspection & Safety," and they were "sworn;" at the same time, it was voted "to Purch[ase] some Corn to Suply the women whose Husbands are gon in the army."‡ In the History of Androscoggin County the name of "Ebenezer Robbins" is erroneously given on this committee.§

Previous to 1795, the church had been furnished with various supplies. In the summer of that year, it was voted to settle Rev. Jacob Herrick as their minister; Ebenezer Roberts, Nathaniel Osgood, and William True were chosen a committee to send for the new minister. Ordination services were held Feb. 22, 1796, — parsons Eaton, Lancaster, Gilman, Johnson, Coffin, and Keylock, assisting. Among the thirty-five pew-owners, prior to 1804, were Ebenezer Roberts, Nathaniel Osgood, Simeon Sanborn, Benjamin Vining, Jacob Sawyer, David Dyer, and Micah Dyer. In 1796, Ebenezer Roberts was chosen surveyor of highways; in 1796 and 1797, he and Jabez Dyer formed the school committee. In 1802, "Ebenezer Roberds" served on "petty jury," and as tithing-man.*

There was a Train Band in Royalsborough, in 1778. In 1787, O Israel Bagley was captain of a military company, of which John Randall and Joshua Snow were sergeants. The company consisted of eleven officers, fifty-seven privates, and sixteen men on the Alarm List. Among the privates were Stephen Randall; Benjamin, Vincent, and William Roberts; Nathan[iel] Osgood; James, John, and Joseph Parker; on the Alarm List were John Cushing, Esq., Ebenezer Roberts, and Benjamin Vining.†

The house of Ebenezer Roberts, on "lot 32," was burned in 1805; he lost his life in the fire. An elderly lady, a descendant now living in Durham, remembers hearing it talked about. It was said that her great-grandfather (whose name she did not recollect, but which she felt sure was not Benjamin), at the time of the fire, went back into the house in an effort to save something; he fell through into the cellar, and could not get out. She also said that the children she knew, "of the Roberts burned in his house," were Susanna, wife of Joseph B. Allen, Benjamin her grandfather, Deborah who married a Cross, and Stillman, whose wife's name she did not know.

Benjamin<sup>6</sup>, son to Ebenezer<sup>5</sup>, afterwards built a house upon the same lot, and nearly on the same site, which is still standing. It is on the right side of the road leading from Freeport to South West Bend, about a mile beyond the old burying-ground where Rev. Jacob Herrick is buried. In the settlement of the estate of Ebenezer Roberts by his son Joseph, the following deed, dated May 17, 1806, was made

Joseph Roberts, "administrator upon the estate of Ebenezer Roberts late of Durham," by an order of Court holden at Portland, on the third Tuesday of November, 1807, sold to Elijah Macumber, of Durham, for $323, seventy-five acres of the "northeasterly end of lot N<sup>o</sup> thirty two and the northeasterly end of the lot next adjoining . . . the remainder being set off to the widow for her dower in said farm and contains 26 acres, with one third of the barn and one third of the shed thereon standing." This deed was dated March 22, 1810; on the same date, Elijah Macumber re-conveyed the same land to Joseph Roberts, for $1,000. In both deeds Joseph Roberts is called "of Pejepscot . . . blacksmith;" the witnesses were John Cushing and Dorothy Cushing.* He was called "Rev<sup>d</sup> Joseph Roberts, of Pejepscot," in December, 1810, when Benning Wentworth, of Freeport, sold him land "in the town of Pejepscot . . . part of the Great lot N<sup>o</sup> 5, on the Bank of the Great river Androscoggin," near Maxwell's claim.†

It is singular that the name of the wife of Ebenezer Roberts did not appear in the notice of their marriage, in Cape Elizabeth, or the name of his widow in the settlement of his estate or elsewhere. His widow probably was a second wife — Deborah Sawyer, of Freeport, whom he mar. Sept. 8, 1798, in Durham.‡ The records of Durham do not mention the date of the first wife's death, so she must remain nameless until some descendant, at present unknown, shall furnish it.

mar. July 12, 1791, Sarah Paul, b. June 28, 1769, in Berwick, Maine.

Benjamin Roberts was a farmer of Durham. His house was on the right side of the road leading from Freeport to South West Bend, on "lot 32," which was originally sold by the Pejepscot Proprietors to his father. He and his wife were buried on his farm in the family lot; seven of their eight children were buried there. A stranger would have difficulty in finding the lot, it is so covered with low shrubbery; yet within the high stone wall surrounding the enclosure, on the opposite side of the road and a little nearer South West Bend than the house, there were once many gravestones, now crumbled away. "Grandma Sarah," shortly before her death, placed two memorial stones of granite in the lot, one for herself and husband, the other for their children; the stones are now well hidden among the bushes. Benjamin Roberts died in 1849, aged eighty years; his widow, Sarah, died in 1852, at the age of eighty-three.

July 26, 1757, was daughter to Samuel <sup>4</sup> Stanwood and Jean (Lithgow) McFarland, his first wife, whom he married "soon after 1742." Lieutenant Ebenezer <sup>8</sup> Stanwood (father to Samuel <sup>4</sup>), b. July 20, 1695, in Gloucester, Mass., went to Brunswick, Maine, about 1719; he is recognized as the "founder of the Brunswick branch" of this family. He settled on the shores of Maquoit Bay on land adjoining that of James Dunning.‡ of Brunswick, Nathan Bucklin, Jr., and his wife Mary, of Warren, Lincoln County, with Joseph Roberts and his wife Susanna, of Durham, sold to Joseph Dustin, of Brunswick, for $1,073, land on the "east side of a twelve rod road that leads from Brunswick falls to Maquoit shore," also marsh "at the end of pump Log point . . . a reduction out of the above land of one third for the Widows dower." In 1808, "Joseph Roberts of Durham . . . blacksmith," for $675, paid by Samuel Patten, of Brunswick, sold him land in Brunswick near Maquoit Landing, on the county road. The deed was signed : —

"Joseph Roberts"* [seal]

Joseph Roberts lived in Brunswick for a short time after his marriage. After the death of his father, whose estate he settled,† he went to Durham, where he remained until he moved, in 1808, to "Pejepscot Gore," a new settlement on an irregular tract of land adjoining Durham on the northwest; it was incorporated March 6, 1802, under the Indian name of Pejepscot. In 1817, the name of the town was changed to Danville; it is now annexed to the city of Auburn. Probably no man of that region was wider or more favorably known than Elder Joseph Roberts. Early in life a blacksmith, as shown by the records, he commenced preaching, as many others did, with little preparation; it was the fashion of the time. As a Baptist licentiate he preached with marked success in the town; "extensive revivals followed, a church of fifty-six members was formed, and he was ordained its pastor in December, 1808. This position he held nearly a score of years, and was an honored and influential citizen."‡

He was the only Representative sent from Pejepscot to the General Court of Massachusetts before the State of Maine was set off in 1820. He was present at sessions beginning June 12, 1812, Feb. 10, 1813, and through those years;§ in other years no one was sent to represent that district. At a legal town-meeting "convened at the barn of William Stinchfield of said town [of Danville], on Monday the twentieth day of September A. D. 1819 . . . Elder Joseph Roberts" was elected "Delegate to the Convention to be holden at the Courthouse in Portland, on the Second Monday of October next." At this meeting, "Elder Joseph Roberts" received forty-three votes, "Mr Nathaniel Sturgis" received forty votes, and the former was declared elected. The object of the convention was to frame a constitution for the new State of Maine. On Monday, April 10, 1820, the town-meeting was held "at the school house near Elder Joseph Roberts." The "Roberts place so called" was in the fifth School District.*

In 1820, it was written: "Mr. Joseph Roberts, the present minister of the Predestinarian Baptists, was the first and only ordained minister in the town. He has no stated salary. He supports himself as others do by the cultivation of the land—assisted now and then by small contributions of a voluntary nature from his brethren."† The "Rev<sup>d</sup> Elder Joseph Roberts" officiated in a large proportion of the marriages in the town, between 1815 and 1827. The church, after his retirement in the latter year, remained for several years without a pastor.

Elder Roberts and his wife probably did not finish their days in Danville, since there are no records of their deaths in the town. It is remembered by some of the descendants of his brother Benjamin, now living in Durham, that Rev. Joseph Roberts, a cousin, was living many years ago near Bangor, Maine; he may have been the son, Joseph Parker Roberts. The names of Elder Roberts's sons—Parker and Joseph Parker—appear as conclusive evidence that the Elder had visited Joseph Roberts, of Ipswich and Newburyport, who also had a son Parker,‡ and that the Elder knew much of the early beginnings of the family. It is probable

7. Susanna<sup>6</sup>. She was unmarried in October, 1807, when she signed the deed conveying her interest in the estate of her father to her brother Joseph. On Sept. 12, 1807, the marriage intention of Joseph B. Allen, of Monmouth, to Susanna Roberts, of Durham, was recorded; they were mar. Nov. 14, 1807,† and lived in Monmouth.

8. Samuel<sup>6</sup>. There was a Samuel Roberts in Monmouth, who appears to belong to this family. In the Pejepscot records is the following: Anna Roberts, daughter to "Sam<sup>1</sup> Roberts, b. Nov. 1, 1801, at Monmouth, d. Oct. 29, 1815." This was written below the record of Elder Joseph's children.‡

Vincent Roberts moved to Royalsborough, about 1774 or 1775, with his brother Ebenezer and brothers-in-law, Samuel and Joseph York. Dec. 10, 1776, as a resident of Royalsborough, he bought of Belcher Noyes, Esq., of Boston, representative of the Pejepscot Proprietors, half of lot thirty-two in the "intended Township of Royalsborough." His lot contained fifty acres, and cost him £26 : 13 : 04; in 1782, he sold it to Matthew Duran, of Cape Elizabeth, for £91 : 06. It was described in the deed of sale as the southwest half of lot thirty-two, adjoining to Charles Gerrish's land and the road, "it being the lot whereon Ebenezer Robards now lives on vizt the northeast fifty acres of said hundred acre lot."† Three years later, he bought of Moses Little and Josiah Little, of Newbury, Mass., Pejepscot Proprietors, for £105, the whole of "Lot N<sup>o</sup> 128." He removed to this hundred acre lot near Chandler's mill; in 1803, he sold forty acres of it to his eldest son, Samuel York Roberts.‡

On Sept. 15, 1777, "M<sup>r</sup> Vinson Robbarts" was chosen the first constable of Royalsborough; in 1779, he was chosen surveyor of highways.§ In 1793, he was surveyor of highways and surveyor of lumber for the town of Durham; in 1801, surveyor of highways.||

There is no record of the birth or death of Vincent Roberts; he is supposed to have died before 1805. The births of the first three children only are recorded.

  7. Daniel<sup>6</sup>, b. July 16, 1790, in Durham. In 1812, he married Abigail, daughter to George Goodwin, of Durham. Five years after his marriage, he went to Ohio. At Cincinnati, he united with the Christian Church, and was ordained to preach the Gospel. He settled in Dearborn County, Indiana, where he spent the remainder of his life. He preached over sixty years "without compensation in money, relying upon the products of his small farm for a living." In the course of his ministry he organized upwards of two hundred churches. He died June 24, 1882, in Sparta, Indiana, aged ninety-two years; his wife died fifteen years before. They had twelve children, only two of whom survived their father. Judge Omar F. In 1774, John and Stephen Randall went with Ebenezer and Vincent Roberts to Royalsborough; in 1777, the Randalls became interested in Judah Chandler's mill, with O Israel Bagley, Daniel Bagley, and John Cushing.‡ In 1813, Joseph Spaulding sold the southwesterly half of "lot 126" to John Randall.§ "His house stood near where James Hascall lived in 1898; he and his wife were buried on that lot." The road from South West Bend came over the hill near his house; close by were the schoolhouse and church. This was the original "Methodist Corner," which was shifted eastward by a change in the road. Besides running a farm of fifty acres, John Randall kept a store.||

John Randall's name appears first in the records of Royalsborough, June 20, 1776, in connection with his "creatures [cattle] mark." In 1791 and 1794, he was fence-viewer, field-driver, and hogreeve; in 1796, he was surveyor of highways; in 1805, on the school committee. He was living in 1815; there is no record of his death.

Thomas Roberts and Hannah Wormwell were married April 21, 1777, by Rev. Ebenezer Williams, "Minister of the Gospel in Falmouth." ‡ In 1784, Thomas Roberts, of Falmouth, yeoman, bought for £12, of George Knight, of Falmouth, twenty acres of the common and undivided lands in that town. In April, 1797, "Thomas Roberts, of Falmouth," and his wife, "Hannah Roberts," sold for $500, a tract of thirty-four acres, and another of twenty-five acres, near their "homestead." In 1802, they bought of Othniel and William Merrill, a small lot of land adjoining that of Dr. Stephen Cummings, which is described as on Main Street, near Vaughn Street. A part of this lot they exchanged, the next year, for a strip of land belonging to Dr. Cummings. In Sept., 1805, they sold, for $900, the land and buildings on Main Street.§ There is no further record of Thomas Roberts, in Portland, except his death, Sept. 20, 1831, at the age of seventy-seven years. That would make him b. in 1754, the year William<sup>6</sup> Roberts was baptized in Scarborough. The Portland records are compilations; discrepancies of several years often have been proved. No children were recorded there; a strong probability exists, however, that Nathaniel, born 1796, was their son, and they may have had other children.

JOSEPH<sup>5</sup> ROBERTS

Joseph<sup>5</sup> Roberts, son to Ebenezer<sup>4</sup> and Mary (Kinnecum) Roberts, appears to have been their second or third child. There is no record of the date of his birth; probably it was about 1741 or 1742. His marriage is in the Commissioners' Records of Portland, in a "List of Persons Joined in Marriage by the Rev<sup>d</sup> Mr Thomas Smith Minister of the Gospel in Falmouth as p Return of Certificates on File . . . Joseph Roberts and Ruth White . . . April 12, 1767. Recorded by Stephen Longfellow Town Clerk." ‡ Ruth White probably was daughter to William<sup>3</sup> and Christina<sup>2</sup> (Simonton) White, of Cape Elizabeth, and granddaughter to Rev. John<sup>2</sup> White, of Gloucester, Massachusetts.

John<sup>3</sup> and William<sup>3</sup> White went to Falmouth, where, on April 22, 1728, they were admitted inhabitants upon payment of £10, each; two years later, they were mentioned among those who had fulfilled the conditions of settlement.§ That they were sons to the Rev. John White, of

There appears to be no occasion to doubt (though it has been questioned) that the Rev. John White, of Gloucester, was son to Josiah White, one of the grantees of Falmouth in its first settlement. Josiah and his brother Nathaniel went there early, had grants at Maiden Cove, and remained until they were obliged to flee from the Indians. Nathaniel was killed later by the Indians; he left two daughters, Mary and Dorcas, who were married respectively to Nathaniel and John Danford, of Newbury. Josiah White, before 1703, had returned to Purpooduck with Michael Webber, Joseph Morgan, Thomas Loveitt, Joel Madford, and Benjamin, Joseph, James, and Josiah Wallis, sons to John Wallis. They built houses, brought their families there, and "engaged heartily in establishing of the Settlement;" but they were again driven away by the savages. Josiah White had two sons, John and Samuel;† his daughter Miriam was married to Richard Suntay or Sontag.* The Rev. John White, in the desire that his sons should profit by the land that had cost his father so dear, purchased, as he says, of the other heirs their interests at Maiden Cove. On February 16, 1724-25, he bought of "Hannah White, Relict of Samuel White in the Town of Boston," for £10, one half of the grant of fifty acres formerly "laid out to and possessed by Josiah White of Falmouth . . . in Casco Bay . . . Situate on Papooduck;" it is evident that the other half already belonged to Rev. John White, as an heir.

On April 18, 1727, "ye Rever<sup>d</sup> John White of ye Town of Gloucester in ye County of Essex Pastour," bought of Nathaniel Danford, of Newbury, for £25, fifty acres "joining to little Brook near Maiden Cove . . . in Falmouth . . . Casco Bay."† This was the land formerly granted to Nathaniel White, as deposed by one John Lane, in August, 1727. The said John Lane, aged seventy-three years, testified that about forty-two years ago, "while I lived there the Town of Falmouth did grant unto Josiah White & Nathanael White one hundred Acres of Land lying between Little Brook so called & a Brook called Maiden Cove Brook," which they divided equally and lived, "each on his Part," several years. "Josiah died possessed of his Part of s<sup>d</sup> Land, and Nathanael White possessed his . . . until he was driven away from the same by the Indian War & he was afterward slain by the Indians."‡ Besides these hundred acres, Rev. John White bought, for £40, on January 26, 1724-25, of James Wallis, of Gloucester, his tract of land "in papooduck, which he drew by lot near his brother Benjamin."§

Rev. John White assisted substantially the new settlement at Cape Elizabeth; he also organized the town of New

Peter Woodbury was one of the most prominent citizens, and occupied the position of legal adviser in many affairs of the town, as well as of private individuals. The latter, with sons William, Andrew, and Walter Simonton, were of a party from Scotland that landed at Cape Elizabeth in 1718; ten years later, they had grants of land at Simonton's Cove, now called Willard's Beach.

William White died in 1758; his widow, "Christian White," was appointed administratrix of her husband's estate, on Oct. 2, 1758; his inventory was brought in the same day. The names of her children were not mentioned in the settlement. "Mr Jacob Sawyer & Mrs Christian White," both of Cape Elizabeth, were published Nov. 21, 1772, in that town. The births of her seven children by her first husband are not recorded, but there is good evidence to prove that the following list is correct.

The inventory of his estate, dated March 8, 1760, was presented three days later in Court. The first item is "Books . . . £21 : 58." His "House Barn & Land adjoining" were valued at £240, "Orchard & Land adjoining . . . £52," and "A piece of Salt Marsh in Jones's River . . . £13 : 6 : 8;" total valuation of real estate, £305 : 6 : 8. To this was added £271 : 14 : 3, in personal estate, "dues," etc. On August 13, 1760, a petition* was presented to the Governor, Council, and House of Representatives, by Thomas Allen, Nathaniel Haskell, David Allen, Samuel Plummer, and Christian White, stating that the real estate of the "Rev<sup>d</sup> John White of Gloucester deceased" was valued at £305 : 6 : 8, and that "one Third Part" has been set off to the "Widow of the said Testator as her Dower." As the remaining two-thirds will be "very much predudiced . . . by Division," they pray as guardians of the minor heirs, for permission to sell it as it stands. The petition cites the heirs who were living in 1758, when his will was made, and those who were then (1760) living. "The Names of those of Testators Children that were deceased when his will was made are William White who left seven Children to whom your said Petitionor Christian White is appointed Guardian; and Lucy who married m<sup>r</sup> Joseph Moodey by whom she had four Children," etc. This is the only reference to the number of William White's children; their names are nowhere given.

It is claimed by many, though no attempt is made here to prove it, that the Rev. John White, of Gloucester, Massachusetts, was a descendant of Rev. John White, of Dorchester, England, whose autograph appears in this volume on a bill of Isaac Allerton's, in 1640.* This branch of the White family certainly was superior, and had more money than was common in that day.

Besides the lands at Maiden Cove and other locations given by their father to John and William White, they received several grants of land from the Proprietors of Falmouth.† They also bought and sold land on the south side of Fore River. John built a house of white oak logs, "squared," which is still standing close by Fort Preble; it is the ell of a more modern house. William lived at Deep Brook, towards the present Casino, on the Purpooduck side of Mountain View Park, near the dividing line (1906) between South Portland and Cape Elizabeth.

The Rev. Thomas Smith was pastor of the First Church of Falmouth from January 23, 1727, until his death, "aged and feeble," on May 25, 1795. There is no mention of Joseph or Ruth Roberts in the records of this First Congregational Church (now Unitarian); but in 1768, the year following his marriage, Joseph Roberts was taxed for the first time in St. Paul's (Episcopal) Church, his tax being seven shillings a year. He was the only person bearing the name of Roberts mentioned in the records of St. Paul's during the first fifty years of its existence, yet it is difficult to determine whether he belonged to that church through his employment by Jedidiah Preble, or because his early education tended toward that faith.

The history of this First Episcopal Church in Portland is unique. It was founded by a few of the prominent and wealthy men of that town;‡ but within a few years of its the coast, for it was the only church of that denomination, at that period, in the territory now comprising the State of Maine. The first house of worship was a wooden building on Middle Street, near what is now Pearl Street; when Captain Mowatt burned the greater part of the town, October 18, 1775, this "Church," as well as the "Meeting House" of Parson Smith, was destroyed.* In 1839, the name of the Society was changed from St. Paul's to St. Stephen's. Fire again visited Portland in 1866, and again the church was burned. The present home of St. Stephen's Church is the fine stone edifice on Congress Street, near the public library.

It is evident that Jedidiah Preble, Sr., was one of the most active founders of this church. He was the first moderator; and, together with his sons, Jedidiah, Jr., and John, he contributed more than any other toward the building of the first meeting-house. He was "confirmed one of the Vestry, March 31, 1766," and again was chosen to that office, April 20, 1767.† In 1772, he was the wealthiest man in Falmouth, his property being valued at £311:08. Enoch Ilsley's estate was valued at £300, and but two others exceeded £150 each. In the church, Jedidiah Preble paid his tax rate of two or three pounds annually, with liberal contributions toward extra expenses, up to and including the year 1773. It is said that he abandoned the Episcopal form of worship about this time, "because the Episcopal clergyman had offended him by continuing to pray for the King and royal family." It is a curious coincidence that the eldest son of Joseph Roberts was baptized in that church in 1769, that Joseph paid his tax rate of seven shillings a year from 1768 to 1773, inclusive,* and that he dropped out of the church at precisely the same time as Jedidiah Preble and his sons. The Preble family returned to the First Congregational Church, and "took seats under the droppings of Pastor Smith's eloquence." It also is significant that George Roberts, b. March 1, 1773, in Falmouth, second son to Joseph and Ruth Roberts, was not baptized in St. Paul's; at least, there is no record there of his baptism. But the church records became fragmentary during the following year, 1774; they were discontinued altogether while the Revolutionary War was in progress, and for some years afterward.

In 1780, several families of Falmouth united in an effort to secure the services of an Episcopal clergyman. The Rev. Stephen Lewis, pastor of Christ Church in Boston, responded by going to Falmouth, where he baptized fifteen children, between October 18 and 31; among them, "Polly daughter to Joseph and Ruth Roberts," who was "baptised Oct. 31, 1780."† In August, 1783, Bishop Bass, of Massachusetts, held services in a new three-story building which stood where the passenger station of the Grand Trunk Railway is now. At that time he baptized thirteen children, and, on September 29, "Cato, adult negroe of Brigadier Preble."‡

The records of Christ Church state, under date of April 11, 1775: "The Church shut from this Time till August 1778."* It is remarkable that, with the prevailing public sentiment during the Revolutionary period, it should have opened its doors so soon. Christ Church was the second Episcopal Church in Boston.† From its situation at the North End, it is perhaps more widely known as the Old North Church. The corner-stone was laid in April, 1723. Rev. Timothy Cutler, the first rector, was settled December 29, 1739, and remained until his death, August 17, 1765. On April 22, 1768, Rev. Mather Byles, Jr., became the second incumbent. He was a Royalist, and left in April, 1775; he died March 12, 1814, in St. John, New Brunswick. The church was reopened in August, 1778, by Rev. Stephen Lewis, who remained until September, 1784.‡ Christ Church, though somewhat changed by various repairs, has been greatly admired for its architecture. The old steeple, blown down in 1804 during a violent gale, was rebuilt as far as possible on the original lines. The "Peal of eight Bells," set up in 1744, is still in the tower. As one of the few Episcopal churches of New England that always has remained in that faith, Christ Church stands preëminent.

At the time of his marriage, Joseph Roberts must have been living at Cape Elizabeth, for on March 10, of that year (1767), he was chosen "Hog Reve," with Jeremiah Sawyer, Daniel Sawyer, Barzillai Delano, Ebenezer Sawyer, Richard Jordan, Joshua Jordan, and Christopher Dyer. In 1766, and a number of years afterward, it was annually "voted that the Hoggs Go at Large well Yoked and Ringed under y<sup>e</sup> Care of y<sup>e</sup> hogg Reves." This ancient custom was brought to the Cape by the settlers from Ipswich and Gloucester. Captain Nathaniel Jordan and Captain Samuel

Skillings frequently served the town as "Dere Reeves [deer reeves]." *

In 1768, Joseph Roberts was at Falmouth. The lack of any record to show that he owned land in Falmouth indicates that he may have followed the sea or been engaged in the construction of ships. At that period, ship-builders and men who worked for them drifted from one town to another on the coast, wherever work could be obtained. Sometimes they took their families with them, and were gone a year or two. Since Joseph Roberts had children born at Falmouth in 1769, 1773, and 1784, and a daughter baptized there in 1780, it is probable that Falmouth was his permanent home. It is probable, too, that his family was there at the time of the burning by Captain Mowatt, October 18, 1775; yet the name of Joseph Roberts does not appear among the sufferers by that fire,† nor in a list, dated February 26, 1777, of taxpayers who resided at Falmouth the preceding year — 1776.‡ March 9, 1791, on petition of Enoch Ilsley and two others, "in behalf of themselves and the other sufferers by the destruction of the town of Falmouth (now Portland) by the British forces, in the year 1775," there was granted "two townships of land, of six miles square, each . . . in the counties of Cumberland or Lincoln . . . to be apportioned among the sufferers according to their present respective circumstances and wants." § The towns finally set off were New Portland and Freeman, in Lincoln County. Further divisions of counties have brought New Portland into Somerset County, and Freeman into Franklin County. Neither town nor county records show that Joseph Roberts lived at any time in Freeman or New Portland.

It is probable that Joseph Roberts, like his brother Ebenezer, was a blacksmith. In those days, all iron-work (even nails) was hand-wrought; such iron as entered into the construction and rigging of ships was laboriously forged by the local blacksmith. There is a tradition among the descendants of George Roberts, son to Joseph, that the father of George (whose name they did not know) was a man of marvellous strength and tact. They tell this story: The "father of George" was working in the fields when two Indians came along; they told him they meant to kill him. He replied—"Wait a minute," which so astonished the natives that they hesitated. He grabbed them and knocked their heads together—killing them instantly.

In his Manuscript Records of Portland, Willis writes of the deaths there: "Roberts wife, of childbed," died May 12, 1784, aged forty years.* There is no doubt that this was Ruth, wife of Joseph Roberts. The birth of their last child, Priscilla, is everywhere given as in the month of May, though no one can give the day; Priscilla died May 26, 1806, in Portland, aged twenty-two years. This appears to be conclusive evidence that the death record of 1784 was of the wife of Joseph. The date and place of death of Joseph Roberts cannot be found, nor where he lies buried. Four children have been identified as belonging to Joseph and Ruth; there may have been others.

Snow, by Rev. Samuel Deane, pastor of the First Congregational Church, now Unitarian.

About a year later, John Roberts and his brother George bought a small lot of land on the northerly side of Fore Street, near Hancock Street, with the evident intention of building upon it. They sold it, Sept. 28, 1805, to Samuel Stephenson, later known as General, and on the same day bought of William Moulton, Jr., land situated "one hundred feet from Hancock Street by the Southerly side of Waite Street." Later, they divided this equally; in 1808, George Roberts and his wife Hannah conveyed their half of the lot to their "brother John," and bought other land in the neighborhood, upon which they built a double house.* On Dec. 16, 1813, "John Roberts of Portland . . . Caulker" and his wife Mary sold to Dudley Cammett, of Portland, for $600, all right, title, and interest in a lot of land in Portland, it "being the same lot I together with George Roberts purchased of William Moulton Jun<sup>r</sup> Sept. 28, A. of Benjamin Rolfe [Book 76 : Page 71] . . . Reserving however liberty for the Proprietors of the Acqueduct the use of the fountain therein and of the Acqueduct running from the same." This deed was recorded May 20, 1824.*

On this land John and Mary Roberts built a medium-sized, single house, on Mountfort Street, which stands to-day in good condition. It was number 10 Mountfort Street in the Portland Directory of 1847, and still retains that number. The gable end faces the street. There are four rooms on the first floor and probably as many on the second. The adjoining corner lot, on Mountfort and Fore Streets, has no building on it, and looks as though it never had been built upon.

There is no record of John Roberts's death ; it is remembered by residents in the vicinity that Mary Roberts was many years a widow, and that a grandson, George Carr, made his home with her. She also had a grandson in California who frequently sent her long letters. She is described as a "little woman," whom her many friends called "Polly Roberts ;" she was fond of children, especially little girls. Mary Roberts died at her home on Mountfort Street, July 12, 1849, aged seventy-seven years.†

Two years before her death, probably to perfect the title, Edwin Fernald, Henry B. Fernald, and Mary C. Mr. John Cammett sold the house and land, some years ago, to a Mr. O'Flaherty, who built an addition to the house in the rear, larger than the original building. Wild, of Somerville, aged twenty, born in Boston, daughter to Charles D. and Rebecca Wild.‡ The young people probably lived in Somerville during the few years of their married life. John and Avis Carr lived several years at Hampden, Maine, then moved to Warren. One or both of them probably ended their days in Portland, since the births of their eight children were recorded, in 1844, at Portland. Moses N. The date of Priscilla's birth appears as "May, 1783," in the old Family Bible of Captain James<sup>1</sup> Slater, her husband; neither church nor city records show it. There is good reason, however, to believe that she was born early in May, 1784.† Priscilla Roberts was married Sept. 23, 1804, in Falmouth, to James Slater, by Rev. Samuel Deane,‡ pastor of the First Congregational Church of Falmouth (now Unitarian). She died May 26, 1806, in Portland,§ leaving an infant daughter; her age then was given correctly as twenty-two years. She was buried in the Eastern Cemetery, in "section F., no. 174." James Slater, b. Jan. 18, 1776, in the Shetland Isles, off the coast of Scotland, came to New England at the age of twelve years. The name of his father is not known; his mother, whose maiden name was Catharine Fullington, was then a widow. She either came with him, or was brought over soon afterward. James had sisters Catharine and Isabella. From his boyhood he followed the sea; until past middle life he sailed as shipmaster to foreign ports, — principally to the West Indies. During the War of 1812, when merchantmen did not dare to leave port for fear of seizure, he made a number of short voyages on the Privateer Dash. The second wife of Captain Slater, Betsey Davis, was sister to Hannah, wife of Captain George Roberts, his brother-in-law. A few months before his second marriage, Captain Slater bought of George and Hannah Roberts "one undivided moiety," or the westerly half, of the double house in which they lived, with the land about it. The deed was dated Feb. 13, 1812, and recorded five days later.† The house, which was built originally for two families, in 1847 was number 12 Mountfort Street. On March 13, 1837, "James Slater, of Portland . . . marriner," for $160, paid by Hannah Roberts, widow of George, conveyed to her a strip of land consisting of "about 14 sq. rods, which I bought of James Alden by deed dated April 29, 1816."

The old Family Bible of Captain Slater, to which reference has been made, was printed in 1825; the early records transferred to its pages are invaluable. The Captain gave it to his daughter, Mary Caroline Dyer, who died Jan. 26, 1907, in Portland; she, in turn, has left it to her daughter, Elizabeth Wallace Smith. Captain Slater died April 10, 1853, in Portland, aged seventy-seven years, three months. He was buried in the Eastern Cemetery, "section A, Range 13, no.

GEORGE<sup>6</sup> ROBERTS

George<sup>6</sup> Roberts, second son to Joseph<sup>5</sup> and Ruth (White) Roberts, was "born March 1, 1773, in Falmouth," Maine. The date of his birth appears in the Bible of his son Benjamin, and in the "Family Bible" of Captain James Slater, his brother-in-law. No church or city records show it; yet it is probable that he was baptized in St. Paul's Church, since his father paid his tax in the church that year. "George Roberts entered his name & intention of marriage with Hannah Davis, both of Portland, May 13, 1794;" they were married October 25, 1797, in Portland, by "Rev. Samuel Dean, Minister of the Gospel,"* and pastor of the First Congregational Church (now Unitarian). The lapse of three and a half years between the publishment of their intention of marriage and their marriage was very unusual; the law required three weeks, the period seldom exceeded three months. As George Roberts was a mariner, from his youth, it is probable that he spent much of the intervening time at sea.

* Records of Portland, Marriages, vol. 3: 40, 51.

Hannah Davis, b. November 10, 1774, in Falmouth, was daughter to Samuel and Hannah<sup>5</sup> (Dyer) Davis, of Falmouth. It has been impossible to trace the parentage of Samuel Davis, yet without doubt he was a descendant of Isaac Davis, one of the earliest settlers of Falmouth. The marriage intention of "Samuel Davis of Falmouth & Hannah Dyer of Cape Elizabeth" was dated November 24, 1773;* they were married December 13, 1773, in Falmouth, by Rev. Ephraim Clark. Before 1809, Hannah<sup>5</sup> (Dyer) Davis was a widow.† She died August 18, 1844, in Portland, aged eighty-nine years.‡

Soon after their marriage, George and Hannah Roberts had silhouettes§ made; these pictures, time-worn and yellowed by age, are now in the possession of their only surviving granddaughter, Mrs. Mary Caroline Small.|| George, with the fashionable cue and forelock of the period, is evidently gotten up with great care; while Hannah, "with comely carriage of her countenance trim" and matronly cap, is the personification of daintiness.¶ At this time they were living on what locally has been known in Cape Elizabeth (now South Portland) as the "Chris Dyer estate," at the foot of Meeting-House Hill, on the right. Originally there were two houses on the place, besides the barn; none of the buildings appear to have been painted. One of the houses was taken down some years ago; the house now remaining is thought to be the one in which they lived. Here their eldest son, Reuben Davis Roberts, was born — for he himself so told his son. Not far from the house a small creek flows into Fore River, and by it stands an ancient tide-mill once belonging to the estate. Its crumbling and windowless frame, standing on piles, looms up in the perspective like a shadowy ghost of the past. Between the tide-mill and the rear of the house is the main road over Meeting-House Hill, upon which passes the trolley-line to the Casino. Facing the house and the main road, the view, as seen in the illustration, is most attractive. It embraces the large, old house and barn, overtopped by trees of more than a century's growth, while beyond, Fore River, a salt water indent, ebbs and flows with the waters of Casco Bay; in the distance lies the city of Portland. Portland then (1797), with its green and wooded hills, was a somewhat rural town rising out of the ashes of Revolutionary fires. There is no record that accurately fixes the date of George Roberts's removal to Portland. In 1800, he was mentioned in a deed as of Cape Elizabeth, and his son Benjamin was born there, August 2, 1803; but in 1805, he was a citizen of Portland.

The earliest conveyance to George Roberts was of a tract of land in Portland, as follows: "Joseph Plumer of Portland . . . Trader," for $450, paid by "John Roberts of said Portland . . . Mariner and George Roberts of Cape Elizabeth . . . Mariner," sold to them a "certain parcel of Land in Said Portland . . . beginning at a stake standing by the northerly side of Fore Street three rods & a half northeasterly from the corner where said side is intersected by the easterly side of Hancock Street, thence from said stake northwesterly on a course parallel with said Hancock Street to John Dole's land, thence by said Dole's land northeasterly to Land belonging to Stephen Longfellow Esq. thence southeasterly by said Longfellow's Land to Fore Street." This deed was dated May 29, 1800, and signed and acknowledged on the same day by Joseph Plummer and his wife, Mary Plummer; it was recorded June 14, following. At the same time, the above land was mortgaged back to Plummer, for $450, by John and George Roberts, "Mary wife of John & Hannah wife of George" relinquishing their right of dower; May 24, 1804, the mortgage was discharged.* This lot of land, "situated on Fore & Hancock Streets," in Portland, was sold, September 28, 1805, by "John Roberts of Portland . . . caulker" and "George Roberts of Portland . . . yeoman," for $450, to Samuel Stephenson, a merchant of Portland. The deed was signed:—

"John Roberts
George Roberts
Hannah Roberts
Mary Roberts" †

Recorded: Oct. 8, 1805.

On September 28, 1805, John and George Roberts bought of William Moulton, Jr., shipwright, of Portland, for $500, a lot of land "100 feet from Hancock Street by the Southerly side of Waite street." This land they divided, July 10, 1807, George taking the southwesterly half. The next year, April 25, 1808, "George Roberts of Portland . . . yeoman," and his wife Hannah, conveyed, for $230, to John Roberts, of Portland, "all my right title interest that I have to a certain lot of land that I and my brother John bought of William Moulton," on Wait and Hancock Streets.

(Signed)

"George Roberts [seal]
Hannah Roberts" † [seal]

Recorded: April 26, 1808.

The latter deed contains the only positive reference to the relationship of the brothers, John and George Roberts, that has been found after a search extended through several years. It is singular that from this year, 1808, their ways gradually diverged, until their grandchildren had no knowledge of each other.

In the fall of that year (October 3, 1808), George Rob-

The mortgage was signed, acknowledged, and recorded February 8, 1809, by "George Roberts"; it was discharged February 13, 1812, by mark

On the day of discharge, George and Hannah Roberts sold "to James Slater of s<sup>d</sup> Portland Marriner . . . One undivided moiety" of the estate on Mountfort Street, with the "westerly half of the house thereon." ‡ The first wife of Captain James Slater was sister to George Roberts; his second wife was sister to Hannah, wife of George Roberts. These ties, strengthened by marriages of Captain Slater's children to Dyers (relatives to both), kept the descendants of James Slater and George Roberts near together. When the house was first built, there was but one house on Munjoy Hill beyond Mountfort Street; for a long time afterward, there was an uninterrupted view of the harbor, with the water not more than four hundred feet away. Later, on the opposite side of the street, lived the Chases, the Potes, and the Mountforts. The latter lived on the corner of Fore and Mountfort Streets in the house built about 1800-1804 by Daniel Mountfort, who went there from Boston. Mrs. Chase and Mrs. Pote were daughters to James Mountfort, son to Daniel. The Mountfort house is now (1906) occupied by Mrs. Sarah T. (Moulton) Carleton, a widow, daughter to Edward and Mary Ann (Mountfort) Moulton. Mary Ann Mountfort was daughter to Daniel Mountfort, who built the house. In 1847, the Roberts house was number 12 Mountfort Street.* Within a few years, the old house has been torn down, and a brick house arranged for two families has been erected on the same site; it is numbered 12 and 12½ Mountfort Street.

During his earlier years, and until the War of 1812 made it unsafe for merchantmen to venture out, Captain George Roberts sailed in command of ships to foreign ports. On one of these voyages he brought home a complete set of china that had been made for him in Liverpool. The design represents a full-rigged ship, in black, upon a sea of green. Eleven of the original dozen dinner plates are in the possession of descendants. The accompanying illustration shows a mahogany "light stand," with leaves outspread, that belonged to George and Hannah Roberts; it has the original brass rings.† On the table at the left is one of the dinner plates, scalloped edged, the ship in the centre; its diameter is nine and a half inches. The bowl near this plate was owned by Hannah, also the Staffordshire plate, an early English ware something like the ancient "flowing-blue." The plate, cup, and saucer, at the right, belonged to Clarissa Roberts, daughter-in-law to George and Hannah. The decoration on these consists of bands of "pink lustre" with gilt edges.

The pitcher,‡ eleven inches in height, was a part of the original set with the ship design. On one side is the ship; on the opposite side is The Shipwright's Arms. Under the lip, surrounded by a wreath, George and Hannah Roberts, and below, Success to America. The design under the handle, which shows very little in the illustration, is a copy of the first "Great Seal of the United States of America," adopted June 20, 1782.* It greatly enhances the value of the pitcher. Though made in Liverpool, it is almost an exact copy; the chief variation being in the number and arrangement of the stars.† On the pitcher is an eagle with wings outspread, a shield covering his body. The right talon holds an olive branch, the left a bundle of arrows. On a streamer, held in the beak, is E Pluribus Unum. There is a star above the head of the eagle and one on each side of the neck, while a curved row of stars overarches the whole from the tip of one wing to the tip of the other. This pitcher is in the possession of a great-granddaughter to Hannah Roberts; the "light stand" and china belong to her sister, while a third sister has the brass andirons, shovel, and tongs which were used by Hannah Roberts in her room on Mountfort Street.

George Roberts was lost at sea, in the Dash, January 23, 1815; the city records of Portland add, "son of Joseph."‡ The circumstances surrounding his tragic death have long been a matter of history. The brig Dash had been one of the most efficient and successful of the armed privateers

† "The Great Seal" is thus described by the chairman (1907) of the committee of Heraldry of the New-England Historic Genealogical Society, Boston: "ARMS: Argent six pallets gules, a chief azure, the shield borne on the breast of an American eagle displayed, holding in his dexter talon an olive branch, and in his sinister talon a bunch of thirteen arrows, all proper. In his beak a scroll bearing the motto E Pluribus Unum. Above the eagle appears a semi-circular band of clouds bounded by the scroll held in the eagle's beak, irradiated on the outer side, the field enclosed being semi of thirteen stars."

There are thirteen leaves on the olive branch, thirteen arrows in the bunch, thirteen tail-feathers, and thirteen edge-feathers on each wing of the eagle.

during the War of 1812. She was not designed originally for a privateer, but when war was declared, she was fitted out to operate much like our blockade-runners in the Civil War. The Dash was of 222 tons, was pierced for sixteen guns, and carried forty men. She was launched early in 1813 at Porter's Landing, in Freeport, where she was built for her owners, William Porter, Seward Porter, and Samuel Porter, merchants of Portland. She was clipper built, and rigged at first as a top-sail schooner, a style now obsolete, but she outsailed everything she came across. Her first voyage as a blockade-runner was under the command of Captain Edward Kellerman, to Santo Domingo; Henry Cobb was Lieutenant.* She skipped south unobserved, and disposed of her cargo at good prices; on her return voyage, laden with coffee, etc., she was chased by a British man-of-war, and came near being captured. An accident to her foremast, which occurred during the exciting pursuit, made it necessary to refit her on her return, so her whole rig was changed to that of a "hermaphrodite brig." She made three successful voyages under Captain Kellerman.

Captain Cammett next commanded the Dash. Hitherto she had not been aggressive, but had sailed in the regular Santo Domingo trade and "wasted no ammunition except in self defence." Under her new commander, she made several sorties on British shipping, capturing between August, 1814, and January 4, 1815, several valuable prizes. Captain James Slater, of Portland, was one of the prize-masters.† Soon after her arrival, it was known that the Dash was making ready for another cruise as a privateer, under the command of Captain John Porter, a younger brother of her owners. They were totally unaware that a treaty of peace had been signed, December 24, between Great Britain and the United States. The Porter brothers chose their own ship's company "from the best families* of Portland and the sea-board towns;" many of the men previously had commanded their own ships. "No vessel ever sailed from the port which had the prayers of such a multitude for her safety." The privateer schooner Champlain had been built and fitted out in Portsmouth, and by arrangement was ready to sail with the Dash, to test her speed. Copper sheathing was then unknown, but, just before she sailed, the Dash was given a coating of soap and tallow, which was good while it lasted.

On January 21, the two ships passed the lighthouse in company, and not till then did the crowd leave the hill overlooking the harbor. "For what more is known of the Dash we are indebted to the Champlain." The Dash led the way for more than twenty-four hours; at dark, on the second day, she was a long distance ahead, steering nearly south; but the Champlain kept her light in sight. A gale sprang up, the captain sounded and found the water shoaling; fearing the Georges Banks, he changed his course. When last seen, "the light of the Dash bore the same by the compass." It was the opinion of nautical men that Captain Porter underrated his speed and foundered on Georges Banks. The records of the Dash are among the ancient files of the Custom-House at Portland. That they are records to be proud of is shown by references to her prowess in nearly every history of the city of Portland and the State of Maine, as well as the Cumberland County History.†

It was years before the bereaved families of those who sailed in the Dash would believe that their loved ones were lost. Cruel reports that some of the ship's company had been heard of on desolate islands came to them ; then again it was feared that they had been captured and held as slaves in some of the Barbary States.* But at last all hope died out, and many wives were compelled to feel that they indeed were widows. Hannah Roberts was inconsolable ; from the time of the return of the Champlain without her consort, the Dash, she dressed in black. Later, she added a white stomacher and a white cap, but she dressed as a widow to the end of her days. She was a dainty little woman, with black eyes and black hair, whom everybody respected and loved. She was "aunt Hannah" to her relatives, and was called "aunt Hannah" by her many friends. That her husband might return was her daily thought, and her many suitors were made to feel that her kindly refusals to marry again were final.

Hannah Roberts was a "very religious woman," and regularly attended the Chestnut Street Methodist Church, in Portland. Each day, at twelve o'clock, she went into her closet to pray ; a well-worn copy of Baxter's "Saint's Rest," bound in calfskin, was her constant companion. There are those living who remember the beauty of her daily life ; how cheerful she was, how her ever ready sympathy helped others. She had a store of old-fashioned "maxims" that were brought forth to fit every emergency. Many of these

* For many years the United States, as well as nearly every European government, had been annoyed by the outrages of the Algerine corsairs against commerce. Officers and crews of vessels were captured and held prisoners for the purpose of extorting ransoms from their respective governments. These prisoners were not only kept in slavery, but were subjected to every indignity ; in addition, they were decimated by the plague. Stories of their sufferings had reached the shores of Maine, and when the American government, on March 3, 1815 (six weeks after the loss of the Dash), declared war against Algiers, it must have appeared to the bereaved ones that their worst fears would be realized. The war was of but a few months' duration, and the United States was the first nation to free herself from Algerine piracy.

have been forgotten, but there are a few that have been passed on to her great-granddaughters:—

For time’s no time when time’s past.”

“Never seem to mind it, nor count your fate a curse,
For however bad you find it, there’s somebody’s worse.”

She was able to keep the homestead on Mountfort Street; but in 1818, with two minor children to maintain, she felt obliged to apply for a pension. The eldest son, Reuben, was self-supporting. A copy of her pension-paper states that the application for a pension was dated “June 11, 1818,” and “her claim was allowed.” The “statement of the military history of George Roberts, a sailor of the War of 1812,” shows that he had the rank of “Carpenter,” that is, ship’s-carpenter, under “Captain John Porter, on the Private armed Brig ‘The Dash,’” which “sailed from Portland, Jan. 21, 1815, and was lost in a gale about Jan. 23, 1815.” His “residence . . . at enlistment, Portland.” “Sailor married Hannah —, Oct. —, 1797;” her “residence at date of application, Portland, Cumberland County, Massachusetts.” Their children were “Mary Caroline, born Feb. 26, 1801 — and Benjamin, born Aug. 2, 1803.”*

The declining years of Hannah Roberts were cheered by the loving care of her son Benjamin and his wife. Her sunny “front room,” immaculate as herself, was the Mecca of all her friends and relatives. Some of her grand-nephews, now gray-haired men, remember the pleasure they had, as little boys, visiting “aunt Hannah” on certain Sunday afternoons. “Hannah, widow of the late George Roberts,” died August 4, 1855, in Portland.† Her age, as given in the city records of Portland, was eighty-three years; from the date of her birth in the family Bible, it was eighty years and nine months. Her grave is in the old Eastern Cemetery,* whose southeastern boundary was then, as now, Mountfort Street. Over the gateway on Congress Street is this inscription — "Eastern Cemetery, 1668." Following the central path and soon turning to the left, one reaches the graves of the Roberts family, near the Cushing monument which is enclosed with an iron fence. Thomas<sup>6</sup>. Baker was b. Dec. 30, 1780, in Springfield, Mass.; his wife, Mary Cullis, was b. April 23, 1782, in Norwich, Conn. They had nine children. Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Baker belonged to the Maine Militia, and served in the War of 1812. He was Coroner and Constable of Portland, Deputy Sheriff and Crier of the Courts nearly twenty years, and for thirteen years Messenger of the Maine House of Representatives. "He was a man beloved and respected by the leading citizens of Portland, as well as by all who knew him in Augusta." He d. in Portland, Sept. 5, 1838, twenty years after the death of his wife, Mary, who passed away June 18, 1818.

Reuben D. Roberts mar., second, about 1839, Rachel Webster, b. Aug. 1, 1812, in Freeport, daughter to Captain Benjamin Webster by his second wife, Mary (Waite) Webster. Mary Waite was daughter to Daniel and Rachel<sup>5</sup> (Chandler) Waite, the latter daughter to Jonathan<sup>4</sup> and Rachel<sup>5</sup> (Mitchell) Chandler, of North Yarmouth. Lucy<sup>6</sup>, sister to Rachel<sup>6</sup> Chandler, mar. Benjamin Waite.† Rachel Roberts d. Jan. 9, 1841, in Portland, leaving an infant son, now (1906) the sole survivor of the family. The third wife of Reuben D. Roberts, to whom he was mar. Oct. 24, 1841, in Portland, by Rev. William S. Dwight, was Julia Ann Webster, b. Aug. 9, 1807, in Freeport, daughter to Captain Benjamin Webster by his first wife, Lydia (Soule) Webster. Mrs. Julia Ann Roberts d. May 20, 1893, in South Paris, Maine; she had no children.

The birthplace ‡ of Mr. Roberts was the "old Chris Dyer" estate in Cape Elizabeth. Not long before his death, while driving by the old house with his youngest son, he pointed it out as the place where he was born. In his youth, he learned from Thomas Baker, later his father-in-law, the trade of a baker, which he continued to follow. In addition, he was licensed, in 1823 and 1824, as a retailer of spirits.* Every shopkeeper of standing at that time had to sell wine, beer, and spirits, if he wanted to keep his trade. Dram-drinking was the universal custom; many of the oldest inhabitants of Portland can remember that, in their youth, the bell of the First Church was rung at eleven in the forenoon and four in the afternoon, for the men to take their "toddy." The excesses arising from this custom led to the formation of the Washingtonian Society — akin to the modern Total Abstinence Society. This organization was of slow growth, but it effected, by public opinion, a much-needed reform. As Reuben Davis was licensed for that trade but two years, while his neighbors carried it on much longer, it appears that he was somewhat ahead of his time in the movement; for that reason he probably died a poorer man.

The small shop where he sold his wares is entered by the door to the left; in the rear were the oven, the mixing-table, the moulding-table, etc. A door to the right led upstairs to the family living-rooms. Little is changed except at the foot of the stairs, where the door once leading to the bake-shop is now boarded up. In 1847, the shop was 94 Federal Street, the house number 96; † in 1906, the numbers were 204 and 204½ Federal Street, near Temple Street.

Reuben D. Roberts was a member of the Chestnut Street Methodist Church, in Portland, which he regularly attended with his family. He died Oct. 27, 1851, in Portland, aged fifty-three years.‡

At the time her father was lost at sea, she was fourteen years of age. Within the next two years, she developed a delicacy of constitution that caused her family great anxiety. Her condition probably was the direct result of the shock of her father's death; she never fully recovered. Debarred from much that other young girls enjoyed, she turned her attention to books. She studied and read; and, when she grew a little stronger, she opened a private school in her home. This school she kept for years, and employed her spare time in writing both verse and prose, which were published in the local papers. For a long time she was secretary of the Martha Washington Society, of Portland, — a temperance organization throughout the state; her beautiful handwriting in the Society's books has been greatly admired.

Flowers were her children; she planted, tended, encouraged, and petted them until her summer garden was a wonder. In the winter her windows were filled with blossoms. Knowing how fond she was of plants, neighbors and friends sent her slips of their rarest blooms, seeds, or pots of growing flowers. She always lived with her mother in the Mountfort Street home. From 1834 to 1846, they lived there by themselves. She died April 16, 1848, in Portland, aged forty-seven years; *

BENJAMIN<sup>7</sup> ROBERTS

Benjamin<sup>7</sup> Roberts, younger son to George<sup>6</sup> and Hannah (Davis) Roberts, was born August 2, 1803, in Cape Elizabeth (South Portland), Maine, as is shown by the record in his Bible. That his birth and the births of his brother and sister are found recorded in Portland† is accounted for by the fact that a large proportion of the present vital statistics of that city is a compilation of records secured by a house-to-house canvass, and collected from other sources, both before and since the fire of 1866.

Benjamin Roberts and his brother Reuben looked very much alike; their mother always said they strongly resembled their father, whom they but dimly remembered. Benjamin, described as a little above medium height, with black eyes and black hair, "as a young man was considered very handsome, and his manners unusually polished for those days." His education was obtained in the public schools of Portland. Among his schoolmates was Henry Wadsworth

Longfellow (son to Stephen and Zilpha (Wadsworth) Longfellow), who was to establish a world-wide reputation as scholar and poet. Longfellow was born in the house of his uncle, General Samuel Stevenson, at the corner of Fore and Hancock Streets. The latter street was next parallel to Mountfort Street, on the west; and the land of General Stevenson originally joined that of Hannah Roberts, in the rear. Later, his parents moved into the so-called Longfellow House, on Congress Street, but Henry W. remained in the same school district. His first poetic attempt is said to have been a few "verses" that he brought, when quite young, to his school-teacher:—

"Mrs. Phinney had a turnip, and it grew and it grew."

A tablet has been placed on the front of the ancient Stevenson mansion, at the corner of Hancock Street, facing Fore Street:—

AMERICA'S GREATEST POET
HENRY W. LONGFELLOW
WAS BORN IN THIS HOUSE
FEBRUARY 27TH 1807

While Longfellow went to college, the exigencies of the home demanded that Benjamin Roberts should learn a trade and become self-supporting as soon as possible. He chose the trade of a cabinet-maker, probably serving an apprenticeship, as was then customary. He became a superior workman in every line of light wood-working, and is mentioned in deeds first as a "chair maker," and then as "chaise maker;" in 1838, he first was called a "carriage maker," or builder. The reputation which he established in Portland for good workmanship, fidelity, and thorough honesty lasted throughout his fourscore years.

On April 24, 1825, Benjamin Roberts was married by "Rev. Phineas Crandall, minister of the Gospel," in Falmouth, to Clarissa Mitchell;* their marriage intention was dated a month before — "March 26 . . . both of Portland." * Their wedded life extended over a period of nearly fifty-nine years. Clarissa<sup>6</sup> Mitchell, born September 23, 1800, in Freeport, Maine, was the youngest child to John Hayes<sup>5</sup> and Hannah (Bowdoin) Mitchell, of Freeport. † Her father was lost at sea when she was but one year old; the death of her mother, "widow Hannah Mitchell," in 1804, left six children quite unprovided for. Clarissa was adopted into the family of Nathaniel and Sarah (Bradbury) Osgood, who lived in Durham on the west side of the "County Road" near the Freeport line.

Nathaniel Osgood and his brothers, William and David, moved about 1780 from Deerfield, New Hampshire, to Durham, where they possessed a large farm of three hundred and forty-two acres, in common, for nearly twenty years; then it was amicably divided. Nathaniel spent his early life in Salisbury, Massachusetts, where he was born, August 12, 1747. He served in the Revolutionary War, and treasured a gun taken by him from one of the British in 1777, at the surrender of Burgoyne. Both he and his wife were persons of more than ordinary education and refinement. They had three sons, Benjamin, David, and Joseph, all born before September, 1779, in Deerfield, New Hampshire; but there were no daughters. A young woman, who had been taken into the family, begged to be allowed to bring the "pretty little girl," then four years old, into the home and care for her. Clarissa remained with the Osgood family until she was about twenty-one; she then left to take care of her mother's mother, who was aged and feeble. It was at the Osgoods that Clarissa Mitchell developed the strong character, remarkable executive ability, and clear, logical brain that served her well. Up to the time of her death, at the age of eighty-eight years, she was mentally very active. She was small of stature — not much over five feet, and of dark complexion. Though gifted with a keen sense of humor, she was ever ready to sympathize with those in trouble and to help them.

The year following his marriage, Benjamin Roberts, "Chaise Maker," bought of James Deering a small lot of land in Portland, which he mortgaged July 23, 1829, to his mother for $415. It was described as having "a small dwelling house thereon standing . . . on Newbury Street" near Theophilus Bradbury's dwelling-house, it "being the same land I purchased of James Deering as per his deed Dated June 1, 1826 . . . Clarisa Roberts wife of the said Benjamin hereby relinquishing her dower."

field Street. From 1840 to 1843, inclusive, he was called a wheelwright; but in 1847, 1848, and 1849, he appears as a "carriage maker,"* or manufacturer of carriages. Early in 1848, his family was called back to Portland by the illness and death of his sister, Mary Caroline, which left the mother unprotected and alone; Mr. Roberts followed them the next year.

On June 29, 1850, Hannah Roberts conveyed to her son Benjamin "an undivided half" of the estate on Mountfort Street, for $1,000, stipulating that the said Benjamin "shall well & truly support and maintain the said Hannah Roberts who is my mother in sickness and health during her natural life, in my family, & shall in all things treat her, and conduct towards her as a son should, then this, as also a Bond [for $1,000] this day given to support and maintain my mother, given by the said Benjamin Roberts to the said Hannah Roberts . . . shall be void, otherwise remain in full force." The two instruments of the same date were witnessed by Mary C. Roberts, daughter to Benjamin, and by Samuel Fessenden.†

In 1852, this daughter, Mary Caroline<sup>s</sup> Roberts, was married to Edward A.<sup>s</sup> Small, and removed to Illinois,‡ but Benjamin Roberts and his wife remained in the old home until after the death of his mother on August 4, 1855, at the advanced age of eighty years. They also had the stone placed upon her grave.§ On September 12, following, they sold to Bethuel Sweetser, of Portland, an "undivided half part" of the lot "with that half of the buildings thereon standing which fronts upon Mountfort Street, said half part being the part which has been occupied by my late Mother Hannah Roberts for more than forty years."
